The Alienation of the General.

I FIRST encountered him in the streets of a Montana "cow-town," where he was affording amusement to a crowd of men and boys, while a tipsy musician was attempting the Boulanger March on an antique piano. To save him from further abuse I bought him, and ever afterwards he was known to his little world as "General Boulanger."

We grew to look upon the General as an interesting scientific phenomenon. His was a soul saturated with hate for all men. Any amiable qualities he may have possessed in early youth had been killed by abuse. He knew but distrust and fear. We determined to reclaim him, and in our lonely camp the General became the object of such flattering attention that only his unconquerable misanthropy kept him from becoming an arrant snob. For a long time our efforts were unavailing, but as the weeks went by I thought I noticed a little less shrinking, fewer growls, and a faint gleam of recognition in the glassy eyes when I approached. I felt the thrill of conquest, and redoubled my efforts. The heart of stone was at last touched, and my theory in regard to "yaller dogs" was correct.

We returned to the outskirts of civilization, and one day, driving once more to the town, so filled with painful memories for the General, I was surprised to behold him again in the street, slinking about with others of his kind. The slight results of our patient labors were in peril. It would never do to allow the General's slowly growing faith in man to be nipped in the bud by further town life, so with infinite pains I secured him and tied him to the back of my wagon. I remonstrated with him gently, as he lay cringing in the dust, for his base desertion of the only friends he had ever known.

The painful journey homeward began. The General betrayed a distinct unwillingness to ride, so he was allowed to follow at the end of a long rope behind. With his usual acumen, he fancied the strength of two half-broken broncos to be as naught compared to his fiery determination to remain in town. So he sat down. With an expression of pained surprise on his countenance he traversed a few hundred yards of the dusty road in this position, and then tried his back. It was quite in keeping with the eccentricities of the General's mental processes that a simpler method did not occur to him, until, striking a deep rut, he was hurled high into the air, and by some happy chance alighted on the extremities nature had provided for purposes of locomotion. Then, with bowed head, he trotted contentedly along. I turned to look at him occasionally, and flattered myself that I saw in his demeanor evidences of regret at his folly, and a determination to do better in the future. I spoke encouragingly to him, but he was too absorbed in meditation to look up.

A hot afternoon's ride brought us to an irrigating ditch. After rattling over the few loose planks which served as a bridge, I stopped to repair a break in the harness. The General, hot and dusty, at once dashed into the little stream to drink and bathe. With my back to the tired horses I watched him.

As I looked he performed his colossal act of folly, the final episode in his witless career. After refreshing himself on one side of the tiny bridge, quite unmindful of his connection with my rear axle, he laboriously splashed under the bridge and came out the other side. Cooled by his bath, he came to the side of the wagon and looked sweetly up at me. Immensely impressed by his sagacity, I was on the point of alighting to free him from his dangerous predicament, when the hand of fate, ever turned against him, struck the last blow.

A fly stung my off bronco, and with a squeal he and his startled mate rushed madly down the road. I was hurled to the bottom of the wagon, but not before I saw the General turn a perfect back somersault and shoot toward the stream. In a cloud of dust he disappeared into the water, and then followed a symphony of howls as he traversed the dark and damp nether side of the bridge, to be shot up into daylight once more by the united strength of two frightened broncos. In a shower of spray he struck the road twenty feet from the bridge, and did not gain his feet until I had brought the horses to a standstill. Once more I turned to the General. He was a pitiable sight. Covered with mud and half strangled, he quivered with cold and rage.

As we traversed the short distance to camp I tried to fancy what his reflections were. Knowing him as well as I did, I felt sure that he looked upon the past weeks of kindness as part of an elaborate scheme to win his confidence enough to practice this last insult upon him. I dreaded the consequences of the episode, and planned new blandishments to reinstate myself in his favor.

Arriving in camp, my first thought was to release him from the wagon. But the water and mud made it difficult to unfasten the knot at his collar. Feeling keenly the embarrassment of his position, I untied the rope from the axle and threw it on the ground.

The General watched me sulkily, and when the end of that hated rope fell free he bounded to his feet. With one final snarl of utter hate and disgust he was off like a shot; not in a wild, purposeless circle, but straight as the flight of an arrow across the prairie. Away he went, with the lariat dragging behind him.

With eyes raised to the solitary snow peak a hundred miles away he flew from us, with a heart full of hate and a grim determination to put half a continent, if need be, between himself and tyrant man. As I watched the little cloud of dust, raised by his hurrying feet, disappear on the horizon, I realized the futility of battling against fate.

Then our packer broke the silence: "There goes the orariest cur in the world with the best lariat in Montana." —"Atlantic Monthly."

The Color Cure.

Now it is the color cure, and medicine men are recommending that their depressed and nervous patients should wear nothing but garments of red. Mr. Ruskin went so far as to say that all the people he had known who were morally and physically sound loved bright color; that the yellow hues of a canary were enlivening to behold, and that it was enough merely to see a huntsman in his "pink" to give you courage to take a ditch yourself."—"Ladies' Field."

Curious Bit of News.

Dr. G. L. Johnson, whose studies of the eyes of mammals have recently been published, calls attention to the fact that man and monkeys alone possess parallel and convergent vision of the two eyes. On the other hand, the lower mammals possess divergent and consequently very widely extended vision. Squirrels, for instance, and probably hares and rabbits as well, are able to see an enemy approaching directly from behind without turning the head.

Protected.

IN recalling incidents of international courtesy, when British and Americans have supported each other, a writer in the Boston "Transcript" tells the following story which came from an American sailor who had landed at a port in Chile:

The men had gone ashore and become somewhat hilarious, and one of the police officers, instead of warning him not to make a noise in the street, drew his sword and knocked him down. The American got up, and promptly knocked the policeman down in return. He was arrested, tried, and condemned to be shot the next morning.

Mr. Loring, the American consul, expostulated with the authorities, saying that it would be monstrous to put a man to death for such an offence; but they paid no attention to him. On the day specified the sailor was brought out and pinioned, in readiness for execution.

The English consul, preparing to hoist the Union Jack, saw a crowd in the field opposite, and realised that the execution was about to take place. He rushed over to the American consul, and cried:

"Loring! You're not going to let them shoot that man?"

"What can I do?" was the answer. "I have protested against it. I can do no more."

"Give me your flag!" cried the Englishman.

With the two flags in his hand, he ran to the field, elbowed his way through the crowd and soldiery, and reached the prisoner. He folded the American flag about him, and laid the Union Jack over it. He stepped back, and faced the officers and soldiery.

"Shoot, if you dare," he shouted, "through the heart of England and America!"

The man was not shot.

The Old-Age Habit.

"FOR why would I look old, darling? Answer me that, now!" Mrs. Mullaly demanded. She had been Honora Costigan formerly, Mrs. Morris's loving and faithful house-girl; but that was twenty years earlier. Mistress and maid had been at opposite ends of the earth in the meantime, and the mistress, who had noticeably aged, felt almost a shock of resentment at sight of the plump and buxom Nora she used to know.

"Sure, I've had me bad times and me good times, like the rest of the world," Mrs. Mullaly went on, reflectively. "But, glory be! before the bad times quite finished me the good times always came again—me always leaving the door ajar to let them in, d'ye mind?

"I am older; I feel it sometimes in me poor back; but I'm not old. Whisper, darling, it ain't the years that go over; it's the heart that's inside that changes the faces of us.

"'Twas a cousin of mine that teached me the truth of it, this long ago. She begun to be old the day she was born, did Katie, and when she was fourteen, looking and acting twenty, 'twas a great help to her. But when she was twenty, 'I'm getting on!' says she. When she was twenty-five, 'No,' says she to Johnny Walsh, that came a-courting, 'I'm too old and settled in me habits to be marrying.' Then when she was thirty nothing would do her but to get wid the old women and talk of the time when she and they was young.

"So the heart of her went into the face of her. It did so! I mind when she was thirty about and me over twenty, we went together one day to a big new hotel to get work. A good worker was Katie. But the boss he looked us up and looked us down and asked his questions, and then says he, 'I'll give you a trial, my girl,' says he to me. But as for you,' he says to Katie, 'it's young, strong, lively women we want,' says he, 'and I'm thinking you're after mistaking this for the Old Ladies' Home, which,' says he, 'is in the next block.'

"'O-ho!' says I to meself at that. Am I going out to hunt for wrinkles and rheumatism before me own mother gets gray in her hair? No,' says I, and 'twas then I begun to toss me birthdays over me shoulder as fast as they came. They're all behind me, glory be! where I can't fall over them.

"Whisper, darling," Mrs. Mullaly added, impressively, "old age is a bad habit, like drinking, and if ye give way to it ye won't so easy break it off. Sure, there's a new year every twelve months, but that can't make ye an old woman—never, darling, until ye're willin' to be!"

Team-work Among Squirrels.

A party of young people who were tenting in a grove near a glen at a Northfield Conference witnessed an incident which seems to show a friendly understanding among squirrels. The Deerfield Valley "Endeavorer" tells the pleasing story.

An out-of-doors dinner had just been finished, and the party were still sitting at the table, when a red squirrel, with glistening, eager eyes, came creeping down a tree which stood near the table. He crept nearer and nearer, and finally leaped upon the table.

The lady who was presiding said, "Yes, help yourself to anything you want!"

Upon this invitation the little fellow made bold to creep up to a loaf of bread from which only a slice or two had been cut. He seized it and dragged it to the side of the table, and somehow managed to scramble down the side with it to the ground. He then fixed his teeth in the crust, and dragged it away and down the steep sides of the glen.

But when he reached the bottom and confronted the steep rise on the other side it was too much for him. Then he gave a sort of call, which seemed to be understood, for soon squirrels were seen coming from several directions. They crowded round him, and after a little conference, all took hold, and with tug and strain they managed to bring the loaf to the top of the hill, and disappeared with it in the woods beyond.

Two Ways.

When a woman gets frightened at night she just pulls the bedclothes over her head, says she is terrified out of her wits, and goes to sleep. But with a man it is different. He says he is not afraid, pushes the clothes down and lies tremblingly wake for two hours, straining his ears at every sound.—"Pick-Me-Up."

A school inspector, having a few minutes to spare after examining the school, put a few questions to the lower form boys on the common objects in the schoolroom.

"What is the use of that map?" he asked, pointing to one stretched across the corner of the room; and half a dozen shrill voices answered, in measured articulation:

"It's to hide the teacher's bicycle, sir!"—"Wasp."

A Glimpse Into the Future.

HOMER G. WELLS, in a brutally frank article in the "Fortnightly Review," gives us a striking glimpse into the future through what most people will consider a very highly colored lens. His description of the New Republic is, of course, an arraignment of the present order of society.

"The men of the New Republic," says Mr. Wells, "will not be squeamish either in facing or inflicting death, because they will have a fuller sense of the possibilities of life than we possess. They will have an ideal that will make killing worth the while; like Abraham, they will have the faith to kill, and they will have no superstitions about death. They will naturally regard the modest suicide of incurably melancholy or diseased or helpless persons as a high and courageous act of duty rather than a crime. And since they will regard, as indeed all men raised above a brutish level do regard, a very long term of imprisonment as infinitely worse than death, as being indeed death with a living misery added to its natural terror, they will, I conceive, where the whole tenor of a man's actions, and not simply some incidental or impulsive action, seems to prove him unfitted for free life in the world, consider him carefully and condemn him and remove him from being. All such killing will be done with an opiate, for death is too grave a thing to be made painful or dreadful and used as a deterrent from crime. If deterrent punishments are used at all in the code of the future, the deterrent will neither be death, nor mutilation of the body, nor mutilation of the life by imprisonment, not any horrible things like that, but good scientifically caused pain, that will leave nothing but a memory. Yet even the memory of overwhelming pain is a sort of mutilation of the soul. The idea that only those who are fit to live freely in an orderly world state should be permitted to live is entirely against the use of deterrent punishments at all. Against outrageous conduct to children or women, perhaps, or for very cowardly or brutal assaults of any sort, the men of the future may consider pain a salutary remedy, at least during the ages of transition while the brute is still at large. But since most acts of this sort do, under conditions that neither torture nor exasperate, point to an essential vileness in the perpetrator, I am inclined to think that even in these cases the men of the coming time will be far less disposed to torture than to kill. They will have another aspect to consider. The conscious infliction of pain for the sake of the pain is against the better nature of man, and it is unsafe and demoralising for anyone to undertake this duty. To kill under the seemly conditions science will afford is a far less offensive thing. The rulers of the future will grudge making good people into jailers, warders, punishment dealers, nurses and attendants on the bad. People who cannot live happily and freely in the world without spoiling the lives of others are better out of it. That is a current sentiment to-day, but the men of the New Republic will have the courage of their opinions."

Not What He Meant at All.

Politeness, it is true, must have its origin in a kind heart and a desire to please; but tact and thoughtfulness and quick wit are also essential to good manners.

A very stout hostess who was entertaining a large company one evening turned to a group of young men standing near her chair and smilingly asked:

"May I trouble one of you young gentlemen for a glass of water from the pitcher on the table?"

Several of the young men hurried to comply with the request. One, who was particularly active, succeeded in reaching the table first.

As he handed the glass of water to the hostess she complimented him on his quickness.

"Oh, that's nothing," he said. "I am used to it. I got into many a circus and menagerie when I was a boy by carrying water for the elephant."

It was only when he saw the expression on the lady's face, and noticed the silence, that the young man realized what he had said.

The Plague of Statistics.

DISCUSSING "The Plague of Statistics" in the "Atlantic Monthly," Eugene Richard White says:

"We have come so to rely upon numerical expression that numbers stand both as end and means; no longer dare we appeal to the emotions, no longer do men sway men with truth of words. Facts, and the exact expression of them, are what we seem to desire. Fast are we drawing the chilling robes about us; fast have our finer instincts, our higher powers, become drugged with sums total. Judging from the means taken to convince and excite us, as a race we are becoming incapable of any reason not expressed by one of the great divisions of mathematics. Pythagoras would be delighted indeed to see our reverence for numbers; for we bow lower than did he, and for less reason.

"But what actually is the extent of the evil? We can hardly measure the effects aright without knowing the extent; how greatly are we afflicted by it? The children of the imagination were long in bondage to science. Now they wander, let us hope not a full forty years, in the wilderness of purely scientific expression, the arid, sterile waste of statistics. What function of public life has not been unduly brought under this dread domain? Understanding quantity by instinct and quality not at all, the appeal is made at once to arithmetic. Would we convince the average American? Experience has taught that it can best be done by figures. The Zerah Colburn in him is most alert. Do not the newspapers rely upon this trait continually? Latterly, our editorial pages are digests of tables prepared by various commissions. Does the pulpit scorn this means of arousing interest? How do we raise funds for starving India? The chief instrument for rousing compassion is famine statistics; the bulk of the misfortune readily appeals. We group disaster as our merchants corner markets. Do we plead the cause of temperance? Here statistics revel, and they may be had patiently plotted out even to the number of drunkards to the square rod in Cuyahoga County, Ohio, or the arrests for inebriety in Kokomo, Indiana, for 1900. What seems to be the crux in literature? How appraise the success of a book save by the number of copies sold in a given time? How ascertain the merit of a play save by the number of nights it 'ran' in the dramatic centers? Thus is our American mark set on what is what. We go about reforming and purifying the world, with a committee report at elbow and a statistical compilation in each hand."

A Dream's Fulfillment.

IN an essay in "Longman's Magazine" on dreams, Horace G. Hutchinson invited people to send him accounts of their own experiences and ideas, and as a result he was deluged with thousands of letters relating to dreams. These he studied carefully, and in a volume entitled "Dreams and Their Meanings," now presents his conclusions, and quotes the most striking contributions to illustrate the particular class of dream which he is discussing. An interesting class of dreams is that in which the sleeper finds himself in a certain house or room that is familiar to him in dreams, but quite unknown to his waking hours. Here is an instance which Mr. Hutchinson relates:

"A certain lady dreamed frequently of a certain house until it had become exceedingly familiar to her; she knew all its rooms, its furniture; it was as well known to her as that in which she lived her waking life, and, like a good wife that has no secrets from her husband, she often talked over all the details with him, a very pleasant fancy. One day they (husband and wife) went into the country to see a house that they thought of taking for the summer months. They had not seen it, but the account in the house-agent's list had attracted them. When they arrived before it, they gave a simultaneous exclamation of surprise. 'Why,' said the husband, 'it is your dream-house!' It was. The coincidence attracted them. They took the house.

"In the course of their occupancy they learned that the house had the reputation of being haunted; that several people before them had taken it for short terms, but had seen—or fancied they had seen—'something,' and had left before their term of tenancy expired. Had these new tenants not brought their own old servants with them it is likely they would have had some difficulty in whipping up a domestic staff, so uncanny was the reputation of their apparently quite reputable house. The new tenants dwelt in the house with all satisfaction and peace through the summer months, until their term of tenancy came to an end. On leaving, husband and wife expressed their satisfaction to the local agent. 'The only thing,' said the wife, 'that we were disappointed in about the house is that we never saw the ghost.'

"'Oh, no,' said the ghost agent. 'We knew you would not see the ghost.'

"'What do you mean?' asked the wife, rather nettled.

"'Oh,' the agent repeated, 'we knew you would not see the ghost. You are the ghost that people have always seen here.'"

He Missed His Opportunity.

"Henry," said Uncle Amos from Up creek, who was visiting his city nephew, "who's that man in the house on the other side of the street? Every morning he stands in front of a window an' shaves himself. He's done it now for three days hand-running."

"I suppose he has done it every morning for the last ten years, uncle," replied Henry.

"Has he lived there all that time?"

"Yes, and longer than that, for all I know. I've been here only ten years myself."

"Who is he?"

"I don't know."

"What does he foller?"

"I haven't the slightest idea, uncle."

Uncle Amos put on his hat and went out. In an hour or two he returned.

"Henry," he said, "that chap's name is Morton. He runs an insurance office down town. He's wuth about twenty-seven thousand dollars, owns that house an' lot, belongs to the Presbyterian church, has three boys an' one girl, an' he's forty-six years old. I've found out more about him in an hour than you have in ten years. Blamed if I don't believe livin' in the city makes people stupid."

Ever since the Forth bridge was opened—eleven years ago—painting has gone on continuously, according to the "Mechanical Engineer." "Beginning at the south end, the workmen take three years to cover the entire length of the bridge, and, as three years represents approximately the life of the paint, no sooner are they finished than the men have to begin again. In this way every square inch of steel comes under observation at least once in three years. The staff of men employed varies in number from the maximum of 38."

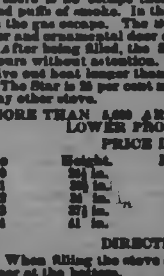
THE

Most Perfect Stove

MADE



THE STAR

Patented March 10th, 1894, BY Geo. Brousseau, Quebec.

For hard and soft coal, coke or peat. The only stove without grate and possessing a tube for gas escape.

DESCRIPTION

The Star is the latest and best stove in the market for slow combustion—why! The inside is lined with fire brick all in one piece and cemented to the outer shell. No danger of breaking or loss of pieces.

The Star has a tube behind for the escape of the gas. As anyone who uses soft coal knows, the gas accumulates under the fresh coal, and if there is no escape there will be explosions and puffs of smoke. In the Star this disappears in the gas escape. The Star has a sliding damper and ornamental door of mica.

After being filled, the Star will heat forty hours without attention. It will hold fire and give out heat longer than any other stove.

The Star is 25 per cent more economical than any other stove.

MORE THAN 4,000 ARE IN USE IN THE LOWER PROVINCES.

PRICE LIST.

No	Height.	Diameter.	Price.

3	[illegible] in.	12 in.	[illegible]

DIRECTIONS.

When filling the stove always shut the draft door at the bottom.

Keep the small opening in the back pipe closed except when cleaning.

Clean the back pipe every two weeks.

Coal Consumers, Attention

We certify that we have in use one No. 3 "Star" stove in our large pool and billiard room the size of which is 65 by 30 feet, with 15 foot ceiling. We have perfect heat, and the most coal we have used on the coldest day yet has been 2 scuttles in twenty-four hours. We are so well pleased with the stove that we would not buy any other.

ROCAMORA & CALLAHAN.

I have been using a No. 3 STAR stove in the sitting room at the City Hotel for some time past, and it has proved so satisfactory that I have ordered two more to replace two stoves in the upstairs. The Star gives more heat than the other stoves with half the amount of coal.

MARTIN CONNORS.

We have in use in our Composing Room a No. 3 Star coal stove and wish to state that it is giving eminent satisfaction. The entire absence of gas by the escape provided, the fierceness of heat and the saving in coal are special features of the Star, and it requires a minimum of attention.

TIMES PRINTING CO.

We are using one No. 3 "Star" stove in our large rooms where formerly we had four large wood heaters, and get more heat now than before. The wood stoves cost us $4.00 every week for fuel and the Star stove which we are now using, costs us only $1.00, making a saving of $3 per week in the price of fuel—which would soon pay for the stove. We can recommend this stove to any person wanting a first-class heater. We would not use any other stove than is made.

Cancer Growing Two Years

A Remarkable Case Cured Completely by the New Constitutional Remedy.

Not long ago, we had the pleasure of receiving the following letter:

"When I began your treatment there was a hard lump in my breast, which had been growing for two years, and it was so bad at last that it drew the nipple in. I consulted two doctors, and they both pronounced it cancer, and advised me to have my breast cut off. Your remedy, however, was recommended to me by a friend, and I am very thankful to say that it not only saved my life, but did away with the necessity of having to undergo the painful operation, which I so much dreaded."

We do not publish the names of those who give us testimonials for the gratification of the curious, but any sufferer from Cancer or Tumor may have the name and address of the lady who wrote the above, by sending two stamps to Stott & Jury, Bowmanville, Ont.

—An egg-raising friend of The Times dropped in yesterday and laid a dozen of guaranteed, home-made samples of hen fruit on our desk. He also exhibited a specimen of the vile stuff which is sold at two prices for chicken feed and asked if it was not enough to discourage any self-respecting hen from doing her daily duty. It is, neighbor, it is, and if there is any way in which this great family journal can help effect a reform you can command its most earnest efforts. Granulated sawdust and pulverized pea coal would make positively luxurious living alongside the rubbish which is sold for chicken feed.

THE NON-COMS. DANCE.

Last Night was a Most Successful Affair—A Large Attendance

The dance under the auspices of the Non-Coms' of the 57th Regiment last night was a grand success. The hall was tastefully decorated with flags bunting and emblems and the effect produced by the large number of incandescent lamps was very striking. The excellent band of the regiment, under the able and efficient leadership of Prof. Glidden supplied the music, assisted by the Misses Hurley alternately.

The scarlet uniforms of the officers and men contrasted with the becoming gowns of the ladies.

The music was all that could be wished for and dancing was most enthusiastically carried on. Refreshments were served in the large hall at the back of the ballroom.

The efforts of the Non-Coms' to make the dance a success were amply rewarded by the praises showered upon them by those present.

Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons had charge of the decorating and are certainly deserving of every credit for the splendid way they completed their task.

MASONIC MEETING

Lakefield Brethren Entertain District Deputy G. Master Walkey

The members of Corinthian Lodge of A.F. & A.M. last night banquetted District Deputy Grand Master Walkey, of Peterborough, on the occasion of his official visit to Lakefield. The banquet took place in the Craig House, and was an elaborate affair. The handsome dining room had been damaged by a blaze on the previous evening, but was again put in festive attire.

Dr. Fraser, the popular master of Corinthian Lodge, occupied the chair, and filled the onerous position with credit. On his right sat the guest of honor.

The usual patriotic toasts were proposed, after which speeches and songs were followed by another, until the "wee sma' hours," when the party separated.

Accompanying Bro. Walkey from town were Bros R. J. Munro, Walter Stocker and Conway.

ALL ALIKE

Doctors Agree on Food

All physicians agree that good food, properly selected, is of the utmost importance, not only for the cure of disease but to maintain health even when one is well.

Dr. Wm. Hale, of 14 Pleasant street, Gloucester, Mass., says, "I count it a pleasure to say a good word for Postum Food Coffee with which I have been enabled to relieve so many sufferers, and which I count with its valued companion Grape-Nuts, one of the daily blessings.

Coffee was banished from my own table some time ago and Postum used regularly in its place.

I frequently find it necessary to instruct patients when they take Postum Coffee for the first time to be quite sure that it has been boiled long enough to bring out the clear, black color and the rich taste, as well as the health-giving qualities."

The Doctor enclosed the names of six patients who were formerly nervous dyspeptics but have been cured by his professional care and the discontinuance of coffee and the using of Postum Food Coffee in its place.

The report was adopted as read.

RESOLUTION OF REGRET.

Mr. Robert Fair moved, seconded by Mr. W. H. Wrighton,—That this Board, having heard of the retirement of Mr. Henry Denne, one of its most zealous members, who has for a number of years past given to the Peterborough Board of Education the benefit of his ripe experience, we desire to place on record, our unfeigned regret at the loss of so painstaking a co-worker. This Board regrets the circumstances, which have rendered Mr. Denne's withdrawal from active life necessary for the present, but it will be gratifying for him to be assured that we, who have known him so well, have learned to esteem him for his sterling worth and manliness, and would rejoice to learn of his restoration to health.—Carried.

The Board then adjourned.

The inaugural meeting of the Board of Education for 1902-3 will take place this evening at seven o'clock.

CARD OF THANKS

Ladies and gentlemen, — I take this means of returning my sincere thanks for the generous support accorded me yesterday in the election for Water Commissioners. The splendid vote which I received is evidence that my friends turned out in large numbers to the polls in spite of what must have been great personal inconvenience owing to the inclemency of the weather. I wish therefore, to express my hearty appreciation of this manifested confidence and good will.

Yours truly,

GEORGE BALL.

A BLAZE AT LAKEFIELD

The Dining Room Decorations Take Fire From Electric Lights

Owing to a defect in one of the electric lights which caused it to burst, the dining room of the Craig House, Lakefield, was set on fire Monday night. The dining room had been decorated for Mr. Kilbourn's banquet, and was left standing for the Masons' supper to-night, and consequently most of the decorations were destroyed.

The fire was promptly extinguished, however, without calling any help and what might have been a very serious fire was averted.

ASHBURNHAM COUNCIL

THE UNITED STATES SAID TO BE THE ENEMY OF EUROPEAN POWERS

Count Adalbert Writes to the London Times Suggesting a Coalition Against Uncle Sam's Rising Power

GREAT MANY BELGIAN NEWSPAPERS ATTACK THE SOUTH AFRICAN BOERS

Says That They Have no Right to Strive Longer for the Unattainable and Should Surrender to the British to Prevent Further Loss of Life--American Ladies at Coronation

London, Feb. 5.—Count Adalbert, who took part in the Boer war, writes to the London Times defending the British army. He declares the treatment he received leaves him no reason to hate the English. He says that on the continent England is hated, while the Englishman is respected and loved. "I always thought England was the enemy of the continent," Count Sternberg writes, "until I visited the United States, and studied economic conditions there. I now believe that the continental hatred of England is ungrateful, and that the continent ought to awake and recognize that its true enemy is arising in the west, like a great sun of gold, whose first rays have already been projected across the Atlantic. America's only principle is the worship of Mammon. Germany and all Europe should join with England."

London, Feb. 5.—The European edition of the New York Herald gives a list of American women who either as peeresses or wives of eldest sons can be present at the Coronation ceremony. They are: Duchess of Marlborough, Duchess of Manchester, Dowager Duchess of Manchester, Countesses Essex, Donoughmore, Craven, and Stafford; Baronesses Abinger, Newborough and Curzon. Wives of peers' eldest sons: Ladies Deerhurst and Clandeboye, and Hon. Mrs. Francis Dudley Leigh. American ladies who are personal friends of the King and Queen may receive special invitations from them, but the above is the official list at present.

London, Feb. 5.—Brussels correspondent of The Times quotes an editorial of the Independence Belge, declaring that the Boers have no longer the right to sacrifice thousands of lives in attempting to get what is unobtainable. The Belgian paper says it is the imperative duty of the Boers to accept such conditions as will insure them a certain measure of autonomy, whereby they can alone be saved from complete extermination.

London, Feb. 5.—The great marine insurance firm of Lloyds have adopted wireless telegraphy to transmit messages between the Lighthouse at Inishtrahull, off Malin Head, and the most northerly point of Ireland, the system working most successfully.

Peshawur, Punjab, Feb. 5.—There is considerable unrest at Kabul and elsewhere in Afghanistan. The fanatical element is predominant and trouble is feared. Hadda Mullah, who was prominent in the rising which ended in the Tirah campaign, is preaching a holy war. He is said to have the Ameer of Afghanistan under his influence. Hadda will officiate at the Ameer's formal installation on the Afghans' New Year Day, March 22. Other fakirs and mullahs are stirring up agitation in the Malkand and other districts.

DE WET'S LAST GUN HAS BEEN CAPTURED

British Force Routs Commandant Wessels, One of the Boer Leader's Lieuts.--Three Guns Taken

London, Feb. 6.—The British pursuit of General De Wet has been successful to the extent that his last gun has been captured and Commandant Wessels, one of his principal lieutenants, has been routed. Lord Kitchener sent the news in a despatch from Pretoria, dated Tuesday, February 4, as follows:

"Byng's column, while proceeding towards Lachenburgvlei, after a night march, attacked and routed a considerable force of the enemy under Commandant Wessels. We captured a fifteen-pounder and a pom-pom taken from Firman's column, and also a Boer pom-pom that was the last gun De Wet had, and three wagons of ammunition, 22 horses, and 100 mules. The Boer casualties were five men killed, six wounded, and 27 men captured.

"Among the killed was Field Cornet Wessels. Among the prisoners is Captain Muller, of the Staats Artillery. The enemy was scattered. Our casualties were slight.

"The National Scouts near Middleburg, Cape Colony, captured thirteen prisoners.

"Plumer, near Amersfoort (Transvaal), captured seven prisoners and 600 head of cattle.

"Gen. Gilbert Hamilton captured 32 prisoners."

CORONATION DIFFICULTIES

The Great Event is Causing No End of Worry in Certain Quarters.

London, Feb. 6—With the coronation ceremonies but little over four months distant, it is not to be wondered that all London is engrossed in the preparations for the event. The question of dress, as was anticipated from the first, is proving most bothersome. Those in charge of this portion of the arrangements are finding it exceedingly difficult to decide upon costumes that are in any way artistic or becoming and at the same time pay due reverence to the traditions of the storied past. The peeresses, having solemnly objected to the miniver "stomachers," and bulky, inartistic bodices, or rather corsages, with which it had been proposed to hide, distort, or destroy their more or less graceful figures, are having their own sweet way in the matter, as might naturally be expected, and are pluming themselves on having won the day in this highly important matter.

Duchesses and countesses who are "not so young as they used to be" are not looking forward with particularly joyous anticipation to the wearing of heavy velvet robes, loaded with fur, and cumbrous with bullion and gold and silver embroidery, on a blazing midsummer day. Some of these ladies are "very firm and large," and they suffer from the heat quite as much as ordinary mortals.

Will Make Cheap Steel

Harrisburg, Pa., Feb. 6—Considerable interest is manifested in the Riverside Iron Company, for which an application for a charter was made today. The company's plant is to be located at Sharpsville, Pa. It is said to control patents on a new process of iron and steel making. The process will, it is stated, reduce the cost of steel making considerably.

To Remodel Peach Baskets.

Dover, Del., Feb. 6 — Delaware peaches, the most famous in the world, are to be shipped in baskets of a new style the coming season. At a mass meeting of growers and commission men held in the courthouse here today it was practically decided to discard the familiar five-eighths basket, which has been in use for nearly forty years, in favor of a basket of different size and one more conveniently handled. The change is expected to greatly lessen the cost of transportation. It is estimated that more than 6,000,000 baskets are used for the shipment of peaches from this section of the State in one season.

MORE HARNESS FOR NIAGARA

Gigantic Plant to Utilize Power on the Canadian Side.

New York, Feb. 6—The coming issue of the Electrical World and Engineer says:

On the American side, where all the work has been done hitherto, newer machinery of the very latest type of its class has just been ordered, while for the hitherto unattempted utilization of the water power on the Canadian side of the great cataract, the Niagara Falls Power Company has just given a contract to the General Electric Company for three immense units of 10,000 horse power each. These machines are not only to be the largest electric generators ever built, but they will embody features of design of the utmost significance, altogether aside from the fact that the new work is to be done under American initiative with American capital and employing American apparatus.

We understand from the Canadian Niagara Power Company, which has just awarded the contract, that these gigantic generators are but the first units in a plant which will probably reach an aggregate of 200,000 horse power or more within a very few years. The power house is to be situated on the flat land adjacent to the Dufferin islands near the river, less than a quarter of a mile above the Horseshoe Falls. A wheel pit is being excavated in the rock which will be connected by a tunnel tailrace to the gorge below the Falls. The dynamos will be placed on the surface level as before, being connected to the turbines by long, vertical shafts, which extend to the bottom of the pit, where the turbines will be situated.

The machines contracted for are, as already noted, far larger in capacity than any electric generators previously built. They are also remarkable on account of the high speed at which they will operate, 250 r. p. m., the same as that now used with the smaller 5,000 horse power generators on the American side.

This, it may perhaps be worth noting, is the third large contract for generators at Niagara Falls, which has been awarded to the General Electric Company during the past twelve months. All will be built at Schenectady.

Irish Nationalists Welcomed.

New York, Feb. 6—William H. K. Redmond, M.P., and Joseph Devlin, of Belfast, the Irish envoys who arrived on the steamer Cymbric, were given a rousing welcome to-day by the Nationalists and other Irish societies of Greater New York. The two envoys will make a tour of the United States for the purpose of completing the work of organizing the United Irish League in America.

BRITAIN MUST ALWAYS RULE THE OCEAN

It Is Imperative That Her Authority Be Supreme

A VAST MERCHANT MARINE FLEET

Enormous Increase in the Number of Ships Sailing Under Union Jack

The President of the British Board of Trade Delivers an Address on the Merchant Marine.

London, Feb. 6—Mr. Gerald Balfour, President of the British Board of Trade, delivered an address on England's shipping trade at a dinner of the Liverpool Shipbrokers' Benevolent Society. In the course of it, he said that the growth of the British shipping industry since the accession of Queen Victoria had been marvellous, even in an age of progress. The number of vessels on the register of the empire had increased from 25,000 in 1838 to 335,000 in 1900, and in steamships from one in forty to one in three. There had also been an enormous increase in the tonnage of steamships. With all this enormous advance there had been, with the substitution of steam for sailing ships, a very great diminution in the loss of life at sea. Dealing with the question of foreign competition, he said the transferrence of British vessels to foreign flags had naturally occasioned a great deal of comment within the last few years. During the past year there had been so transferred of the gross tonnage of not less than 600,000, but it was to be remembered that during the same year there had been added to the British register 1,200,000 tons gross, the significant fact being that ninety-three per cent. of the latter was new tonnage, almost entirely constructed in the United Kingdom. Of the vessels transferred 33 per cent. were constructed before 1885, and no less than 55 per cent. were constructed before 1890. That was a very material fact, he said, in the true significance of this transferrence of ships to foreign flags. He admitted that they could not regard with anything like indifference efforts made by foreign Governments to secure a larger share of the carrying trade of the world. The British shipping trade occupied a unique position among the industries of the country. More than any other, it was essential to, and intimately connected with, the life of the nation. If the British lost their mercantile marine it would mean nothing less than the destruction of the British Empire. That empire was essentially an empire of the sea; it rested upon two great supports, the navy in the first instance, and the mercantile marine in the second. Heavy would be the responsibility of any Government which by fault of omission or commission placed in jeopardy the mercantile marine.

ITEMS OF INTEREST

London, Feb. 6.—Mr. Henry Copeland, Agent-General for New South Wales, writes to the Standard as follows:

"At this juncture, when the hearts of our colonial brothers are throbbing with a just resentment at the gross insults thrown broadcast at our Imperial army, and when, in ready response to another invitation from Mr. Chamberlain, the cousins of both hemispheres are again to witness our stalwart Colonial sons flocking to the National standard, now firmly erected in South Africa, it may not be out of place to remind your readers of the following prediction of Sir Edward Bulwer Lytton, ex-Secretary of State for the Colonies as far back as 1858:

"The time will come when these colonies will be great States, when they will find it easier to raise fleets and armies than they now find it to raise a police; when they will have to their harbors forests of masts and navies of their own. It may so happen that in that distant day England may be in danger, that the great despotic and military powers of Europe may then rise up against the venerable mother of many free Commonwealths. If that day should ever arrive, I believe that her children will not be unmindful of her, and that to her rescue, across the wide ocean, ships will come thick and fast, among which there will be but one cry, "While Australia lasts, England shall not perish."

"If the present response of our as yet youthful colonial settlements in the wide world may be accepted as indicative of what their national manhood will accomplish the above prediction may at no very distant date prove absolutely prophetic."

BOER HORSES GIVING OUT

London, Feb. 6.—The correspondent of The Standard at Pretoria says,—It is increasingly evident that the enemy is becoming played out, and that it will be impossible for him to retard peace for anything like another year. For one material thing the Boer horses are generally in miserable condition, owing to the inability of the enemy to procure a sufficient supply of good saddles. Even the adaptable Boer cannot renew old saddles for ever, and the fact that very many of the horses recently captured have sore backs is a proof of this. In addition, the supply of rideable mares and wild young stock which have escaped rounding up, and which, in the hands of the Boers, were being broken in to the saddle, is giving out. As a result, already fully half of the Boers in the field are dismounted.

THE GARRISON OF PRETORIA.

Pretoria, February 5.—Preparations are being made for the erection of cantonments and the laying out of grounds attached to these, close to Pretoria, on the eastern side of the Pretoria-Johannesburg line of railway. Accommodation is being provided for 10,000 men. The Pretoria garrison will therefore be the largest attached to any centre in South Africa after the war is over. The plans of the camp are very complete—almost elaborate. In the picturesque grounds to be laid out in front of the cantonments provision is made for a fine theatre, a large library and reading-room, tennis courts, and football and cricket grounds. Everything indeed, that can possibly interest the men and conduce to the health of the camp is being provided for. An abundance of good water is available, and as the site of the camp lies right away from the town, in the open veldt, the health conditions should be the best possible in such a climate.

ENGLISH PROTESTANTISM.

London, Feb. 6.—Fears of Canon Gore's appointment to the Bishopric of Worcester, and the fact that many Catholic orders are seeking refuge in England, led to an immense mass meeting being held in Albert Hall last night. It was earnestly enthusiastic.

Viscount Middleton presided, supported by Lord Kinnaird and Lord Overtoun, some members of Parliament, prominent evangelical clergymen, and the notorious anti-Ritualist book-seller, Kensit. The speeches declared that there was a conspiracy afoot to undermine the Protestant religion, and denounced the dangers of the introduction into Great Britain of bodies of celibate, militant Catholics, who profess to be driven out of their country by persecution. Was it not a fact, asked Viscount Middleton, that these orders were compelled, sooner or later, to quit any country where they established themselves because they only acknowledged the authority of their own superiors, regardless of the law of the land?

Resolutions insisting upon the retention in the Sovereign's oath of the words "Distinctive errors of the Church of Rome," and condemning successive Governments for allowing violations of the law, forbidding monks and Jesuits to reside in Great Britain, were unanimously passed.

FOUR NEW SENATORS.

Ottawa, Feb. 6.—It is understood that Mr. Frederick Ligeri Beique, K. C., of Montreal; Mr. F. P. Thompson, of Fredericton, N.B.; Hon. Charles Edward Church, of Chester, N.S., and Dr. James, P.E.I., have been called to the Senate.

Mr. Beique is a leading member of the Montreal bar, and was one of the Dominion counsel in the Bering Sea claims. Hon. Mr. Church was Provincial Secretary of Nova Scotia from 1882 to 1894, when he became Commissioner of Mines and Works. Mr. Thompson is a foundryman of Fredericton. Dr. Robertson is an ex-member of the Dominion House, and is a leading Liberal of Prince Edward Island.

EXPLOSION ON A RIVER BOAT.

Pittsburg, Pa., Feb. 7.—By the explosion of the boilers on the tow boat John W. Alles, owned by the Monongahela River Consolidated Coal and Coke Company, near Lock No. 2, at 1.30 o'clock this morning, one man was killed outright, four probably fatally injured, and several are still missing. Six others were rescued from the icy waters, and two of these, Mark Walker, the cook, and James Williams, fireman, are dangerously injured.

The boat had passed the Homestead Steel Works and was nearing this city with seven flats of coal, when one of the boilers exploded with a mighty roar and terrific force. The explosion communicated to the other boilers and these all went into the river or into the air. The boat immediately took fire and burned so rapidly that all who were able were forced to take to the river. In a few minutes the tow boat Vulcan was on the scene with a full crew of men, and nearly all were rescued. The injured were brought to Pittsburg. Four of them are reported to be in a dangerous condition, and may not recover. The Alles was completely destroyed. The loss is placed at $25,000. No one has been able to give an account of the exact manner in which the accident occurred. The surviving members of the crew claim that they were not carrying a greater pressure of steam than the Government allows.

London, Feb. 6.—The Times prints a letter from Count Adalbert Sternberg, who took part in the Boer campaign, and who declares the treatment he has received from the British press and official and non-official Englishmen leaves him no cause to be an Anglophobe.

Sternberg says, while England is hated, the Englishman is respected and loved. Hatred always arises from a sense of moral and mental injury, and to this extent the Continent has a right to hate England, because her policy is at all times directed to promoting Continental complications. The Continent does not understand the Boer war, and attacks England's political morality because it misunderstands the political principal which England represents, the principle in which is England's greatness. He says that the English recognize only two forces in the world namely, God and England.

The economic advantage to be derived from the gold fields, says Sternberg, was merely a contributory cause of the South African war. The real cause making action imperative was the English principle, the essence of which is free trade and straightforward competition. On the Continent this feeling is not understood, because the Continent does not enjoy the blessings of civilization and Government based on the word 'straight.' Sternberg says he always thought England was the enemy of the Continent until he visited the United States and studied economic conditions there. He now believes that Continental hatred of England is ungrateful, and the Continent ought to awake and recognize that its true enemy is arising in the West, like a great sun of gold, whose rays have already been projected across the Atlantic. America's only principle, he says, is worship of mammon. Germany and all Europe should join with England.

Buffalo, Feb. 6.—Carlisle D. Graham the man who has five times successfully braved the whirlpool rapids, contemplates making an endurance swim from Niagara to Montreal next summer. The feat of Mrs. Annie Edson Taylor in going over the falls took the wind out of the sails of all rapids heroes and heroines, and they have found that she is the star attraction. This being the condition it is up to them to develop a feat that will bring them new notoriety and popularity. None of them has the audacity to follow where the widow led, the route being too close to death, the door of which is ever open at Niagara. Now Graham says he will start at the foot of the falls, swim through the rapids, down through the lower Niagara, across Lake Ontario, down the St. Lawrence River and through the Lachine Rapids, and into the harbor of Montreal. The distance is 380 miles. He will wear a cork suit, and feels that he will have no trouble in making the trip. It is understood that he will make a wager that he can make the trip in thirty days, and to do this he must make over ten miles a day. If he had water all the distance like the rushing, dashing whirlpool rapids he could make twenty-three miles an hour, for it is at this speed that the flood rushes through the Niagara Canyon. Graham will leave the water whenever he desires, but despite this the feat will be one of great endurance.

INAUGURAL MEETING

Of the School Board for 1902—Mr. W. H. Hill Re-Appointed Chairman

The inaugural meeting of the Board of Education for 1902, was held last night.

There were present: Messrs. Jas. Stevenson, Dr. Caldwell, Robert Fair, W. B. Bamford, J. J. Hartley, Dr. Burnham, W. H. Wrighton, Peter Hamilton, J. J. McBain, V. Eastwood, W. H. Hill, F. J. Jameson, and L. M. Hayes. Mr. Jameson is the only new member on the Board, having been appointed by the town, in place of Mr. Henry Denne, resigned. Mr. Hayes is again the Separate School Board's representative.

W. H. HILL CHAIRMAN.

Mr. W. H. Hill, the efficient Chairman of last year, was reappointed head of the Board, for 1902, on the first ballot. On assuming his seat, Mr. Hill thanked his colleagues for having for the second time conferred this honor upon him. He considered the duties of the Board more important than those of any other public office, inasmuch as the intellectual training of the children depended in a great measure upon the way in which our schools are managed. He thought Peterborough fortunate in its schools, which together with the teaching staff are exceptionally good. He impressed upon the Board the necessity of exercising extreme care in selecting new teachers. In the past very commendable judgment had characterised the Board's action in this respect, and he felt confidence in a continuance of the same in all future appointments. He expressed pleasure at the harmonious manner in which the business of last year had been conducted, and hoped that this year's work would be attended to in a like manner.

STANDING COMMITTEES.

Mr. Peter Hamilton moved, seconded by Mr. Jas. Stevenson, that the Standing Committees remain the same as last year, excepting that the name of Mr. F. J. Jameson be substituted that of Mr. Henry Denne in every case.

Mr. Eastwood moved in amendment, seconded by Dr. Caldwell, that Messrs. Hamilton, McBain, Wrighton and Fair be a committee to strike the Standing Committees.

The amendment was lost and the original motion carried. The Standing Committees for 1902 are as follows:

Finance—W. B. Bamford, Chairman; Messrs. Hayes, McBain, Fair, Wrighton and Hartley.

Supervision—J. J. McBain, Chairman; Messrs. Burnham, Ferguson, Hamilton and Jameson.

Property—R. Fair, Chairman; Messrs. Eastwood, Langford, Wrighton, Stevenson and Caldwell.

Committee on Appointments—W. G. Ferguson, Chairman; the whole Board.

Visiting Committees—First term—Mr. Wrighton, Convenor, and Messrs. Langford, Stevenson and Bamford. Second Term—Mr. Eastwood, Convenor, and Messrs. Hartley, Ferguson, McBain and Fair.

Third Term—Mr. Hill, Convenor, and Messrs. Hayes, Jameson and Burnham.

FRANCE AND ITALY FORM AN ALLIANCE

Grave International Complications Caused by the Treaty

THE FRANCO-RUSSIAN ALLIANCE LOOSENED

Will the Triple Alliance be Broken Up—Italy and Germany Likely to Combine Against Austria—France Nearer to England—Russian Alliance Weakened

Rome, Feb. 6—A year ago it was pointed out that the natural effect which the affairs of France would have on international politics. The design of the new power indicated a loosening of the Franco-Russian alliance as being a clerical and reactionare measure, and with that object in view the completion of the alliance with Italy and later its extension so as to include England; in that way to put the foreign policy on the same sectarian level as the internal, and thus to crown "the plan of republican defence by making it impossible for independent parties to open again the war on the anti-clerical combination.

The first act tends spectacularly with the speech that M. Barriere delivered at the Farnese palace, the French Embassy, to the French colony in Rome. His impassioned harangue continued the revelations of Signor Prinetti to the Italian Parliament which threw full light on the Toulon festivals and the change in the diplomacy of the two sister nations. M. Delcasse, in an interview with a reporter of the Giornale d'Italia has sketched out the main outlines of the present policy.

The direction of affairs in general are taking seems significant. The French Republic to please the Quirinal accepts all accomplished facts, swallows all humiliations, raises the methods employed in settling the Fashoda matter to the dignity of a principle and an institution, gives Italy an increase of power in the Mediterranean, begins the conflict with Turkey, which means giving up to England for good the peaceful possession of Egypt, discreetly buries the alliance with Russia, turns somewhat toward England, and lastly introduces its plan of "western policy," such as M. Seignobos has been describing for three years past, and so progresses toward the foundation of a new Europe in which France with its genius for clearness is to be, as in 1792, the conquering initiator. Every "ralliement" must be made impossible and the monopoly of the anti-clerical coalition be made permanent. It is the diplomacy of an anti-religious policy.

Italy hates Austria on account of the past, of the present and of the future; for the past for reasons that all know; for the present, because the Alliance with Austria checks the nation on the Adriatic; for the future because, as the schoolbooks teach, the Quirinal wishes to rectify its natural boundaries. Now the day that Italy, free from apprehension on the side of the Alps, resumes her late attitude on the Adriatic, it will be because Berlin has given her a secret signal and in that case Germany will believe that the hour is near for her to carry out the policy of "Alldeutschland." It will mean the partition of Austria in agreement with Prussia.

In such a contingency, the only one likely, but at all events a possible one, what becomes of the French Republic? France will sink to the rank of Greece.

Other politicians, as M. A. Naquet, has shown their game in his book, "Humanite et Patrie," are dreaming of a new Europe under the shelter of this alliance with Italy, that would serve as a prelude to an alliance with England. France would create a new world, the reign of Cosmopolitanism, of which she would be the creator and the first victim. It would be painful to continue. In his excited New Year's day speech, M. Barriere exalted the alliance with Italy. He is mounting to the Capitol. M. Delcasse will go up to it in his turn. If God does not put an end to this folly, France will one day curse M. Barriere as she put to shame M. Emile Ollivier.

THE C. P. R. SHOPS

They Will Probably Be Erected in Montreal This Year.

Recently it was announced that the C.P.R. was contemplating the expenditure of several millions in the erection of shops in Montreal in which to construct rolling stock. The Company and landowners in Montreal are experiencing difficulty in coming to terms, and Mr. W. H. Robertson, considering that it would be a good opportunity to secure the works for Peterborough, wrote to Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, President of the C. P. R., asking him if he would be prepared to receive a deputation from Peterborough, in order to make known the advantages of this town as a location for the shops. Mr. Robertson received the following reply:

Dear Mr. Robertson,—Many thanks for your kind letter of 29th inst.

For many reasons Montreal would be the most convenient point for our shops, but the prices demanded for land may compel us to go elsewhere. If so, we shall give due consideration to the suggestion contained in your letter. Yours sincerely,

T. G. SHAUGHNESSY

Montreal, Jan. 31.

The proposed works will require 300 to 500 acres, and will give employment to 4,000 mechanics.

THE CORDAGE COMPANY

A Most Modern and Efficient Heating System has been Installed

Mr. J. C. Grant, travelling representative for the Sturtevant Co. of Boston, has completed the installation of the hot blast heating apparatus for the Canadian Cordage Company. The principle of the system consists of a chamber filled with stacks of pipe coils which are heated by steam from a boiler. From this chamber the heated air is distributed by means of a large rotary fan, the hot air being uniformly delivered to all parts of the building by means of pipes, thus giving a steady and evenly distributed heat to the 700,000 cubic feet of space contained in the main buildings.

The cost of the heating apparatus is nearly $4,000.00. This completes another step towards the beginning of actual manufacturing operations which will commence in April. Considerable of the machinery is already in position, and in a few days about 12 car loads are expected. This will be put in position as quickly as possible.

CIVIL WAR EXPECTED IN SERVIAN KINGDOM

The King's Denials Not Accepted by the Masses of the People

AUSTRIA SOUNDS OTHER POWERS

The Troubles in Servia Likely to Involve Great International Complications.

London, Feb. 6—The young King of Servia has furnished further proof of his inexperience by receiving a newspaper interviewer in his palace and giving denials of some of the many unpleasant things which foreign newspapers have been saying about him. If his remarks are correctly reported they simply show that the young man may be sitting on the edge of a volcano without knowing it.

The King's statements regarding his relations with his wife and his hopes of children may well be accepted for what they are worth, but in regard to the politics and internal condition of Servia he assumes or is afflicted with strange ignorance. Servia seethes with sedition. Conspiracies are afoot in the army and revolutionary committees are at work in every town and village. These are facts on the testimony of impartial observers on the spot, upon whose reports Governments base their policies and actions.

The best commentary upon King Alexander's irresponsible chatter is the fact that Austria has approached each European power in turn with the object of securing their concurrence in a self-denying ordinance based on the assumption that there will be early civil war in Servia.

Should civil war break out, Austria will not sit idly by. Her interests would force action, which would bring on grave consequences.

THE QUESTION OF SEWAGE DISPOSAL

A large deputation, representing several important cities and towns, waited on the Ontario Government a few days ago and asked that a station be established where experiments may be carried on in different methods of sewage disposal. The delegation came in response to a circular from the town of Berlin, and was introduced by Mr. L. J. Breithaupt, M.P.P.; Mr Brown, Mr. Fox and other members were present, as well as the following: Mayor Eden, Ald. Kranz, Ald. Housberger and Mr. Geo. Lang, Berlin; Mayor Wood and Ald. Leitch, Brantford; Mayor Stamp and Ald. Savage, Stratford; Mayor Mearns and Dr. Rice, Woodstock; Mayor Kennedy and Ald. Barber, Guelph; Mayor Watson, Listowel; Mayor Ingle and Ald. Barrows, Lindsay; Mayor Hawke and Ald. Jaffray, Galt.

It was pointed out by the speakers that the problem of sewage disposal was becoming more important and many towns found difficulty in preventing dangerous outbreaks of disease, and the creation of nuisances in their neighborhood. In this connection Stratford has achieved considerable success in the use of the septic tank method.

The various speakers cited instances of the pollution of streams by sewage. Some industries, such as tanneries and pork factories, labored under great difficulties in disposing of their refuse. Ald. Jaffray, of Galt, urged the appointment of a consulting engineer to advise inland towns of this matter.

The Premier, in reply, said the deputation had impressed him very favorably. It was a very interesting and very important subject. It was not only interesting to inland towns, but to lakeside towns as well. He was of opinion that the septic tank method was the cheaper. He could not say what they would do, but he would bring the matter before his colleagues and decide in a week or two what could be done.

CHANDOS

Miss Annie Hobbins has returned after visiting friends at Clydesdale.

Mr. Willie Scott, of Apsley, passed through here on Monday en route for Oak Hill.

Mr. Maris O'Brien has opened school for the season.

Long Distance Transmission

Orillia Times: For a week past Orillia has been lighted with current generated at the Ragged Rapids, and the power plant is at last in successful operation. The current was first turned on Wednesday evening, Jan. 22nd, but after half an hour's primary test it was decided to turn it off until the following evening, Thursday night the current was turned on at dusk and used throughout the night, and in fact has been used every night since. The light was most brilliant, a voltage of 112, with 14 amperes of current being given users of incandescent lamps. Yesterday afternoon the line was given a severe test, 22,000 volts being sent over it and a current of 125 amperes. The test was eminently satisfactory beyond the blowing out of three or four fuses in the switchboard. The using of the current for power only waits upon the installation of the motors. The light has been a long time coming, but it is here at last, and the completion of all minor details in connection with the contract should not be much longer delayed.

In Toronto a few days ago, Contractor Patriarche told a reporter that he was prepared to supply Toronto with light, and power generated on the Severn river at a much lower price than is now paid for current. It is understood that Mr. Patriarche's project is to utilize the Big Chute, several miles farther down the Severn.

EUROPEAN NATIONS AND MONROE DOCTRINE

How the Obnoxious Doctrine Will Work Out To a Conclusion

HANDS OFF AMERICAN CONTINENT

Is Logically Absurd—There is Trouble Ahead for Uncle Sam

Berlin, Feb. 6—President Roosevelt is reported as having expressed a decided intention of enforcing the Monroe doctrine on the American continent. The scope of this is an interesting question for European as well as American statesmen. It has been declared by the President of the United States that it does not contemplate any interference with any Power which might have to vindicate the rights of its citizens or subjects, but that no old world Power shall increase its territorial possessions on the American continent.

The corollary of this would be that no American nation should be allowed to increase its possessions by conquest. If the United States is to ward off Europe from that part of the world, it must undertake to do the necessary policing, and see that the same principle is there maintained. That Government made a bad break when it allowed Chile to conquer a part of two weaker nations on the Pacific without saying a word in protest. The Monroe doctrine makes it the duty of that country to see that war, rapine and conquest shall not have free course on the American continent, for whose integrity it undertakes to answer.

It is said that this is the understanding of President Roosevelt of the scope of this doctrine, and, therefore, it will be his policy, in which case there will be a fair prospect of international peace, for there is but one nation on the American continent which is openly pursuing a policy of conquest and robbery, and that is Chile, and the United States must either abandon the Monroe doctrine or carry it out to its logical conclusions, and say to the American nations, "Fight all you like, but when you have done you will have the same boundaries as before the fighting." The recent policy of the United States stands in the way of the consistency of his policy, but it is the alternative of the Monroe doctrine.

A Voting Machine Test

Kingston Whig—"The machine used in the elections, however, is new and simple and somewhat of an experiment. The registration is quite complete, but the matter of depositing the balls admits of some misunderstanding, and some mistakes. The ball has to be pushed in a distance in order to reach the groove along which it is moved and made to count and tally. It can be put so near the edge of the opening as to fall out during the operation of the machine, and this accident or mishap may lead to difficulty, to say the least of it.

"Can a fraud be committed? That is the great consideration. The ball may be held back, or knocked out of its place, and if the elector be allowed to use it in a second movement of the slot he may add it to the count of a certain candidate a second time and so become a repeater. Against a second operation there is ground for protest, and unless it be forbidden the machine may, as at present constructed, be manipulated to some purpose.

"The voting machine, however, is on its trial, and with all its defects it is well liked. It can, however, be improved very much. The working parts should be of metal and made less liable to derangement. The balls too, should roll away from the elector and do their work more effectually.

In comparison with the English tongue, foreign tongues seem parsimonious in some ways of expression and wasteful in others. For instance, it is impossible to "kick" a man in French. You must give him a "blow with the foot." The Portuguese do not "wink" at one; they "close and open the eyes." In the languages of the American Indians there is no word with which to convey the idea of "stealing," perhaps because the idea of property is so vague. It is related of one of the early missionaries that, in attempting to translate the Bible into Algonkin, he could find no word to express "love," and was compelled to invent it.

The first thing that strikes a landsman on a man-of-war is the rigid discipline observed everywhere. On some of the ships belonging to the tropical countries, however, discipline is very lax. The "Defense," a Haytian man-of-war, was lying in the harbor of Port au Prince. One day a mess cook, for some reason, cleaned about a peck of knives and forks on the gun-deck, and, being suddenly called away, and not wishing to spend time to go to the galley, he seized the mess-pot full of knives and forks and stuck it in the muzzle of the ten-inch gun, putting the tampion in after it. About an hour afterward the admiral came aboard, and as the gun was loaded with blank cartridge, they used it to fire a salute. It happened that the gun was aimed toward the town, and almost pointblank at the Grand Hotel. The guests assembled on the porch to witness the ceremonies, when they were saluted with a rain of knives and forks, which stuck against the wooden walls like quills on a porcupine. Fortunately no one was hurt, although there were many narrow escapes.

A Famous Necklace.

The famous pearl necklace of the Countess Castiglione, which has just been sold by auction to a French jewelry dealer for eighty-four thousand three hundred dollars, is one of the most beautiful things of its kind in existence. The piece consists of two hundred and seventy-nine pearls, which are threaded on five strings. Each string was put up separately and knocked down to different bids. Granberg of Paris succeeded in securing all of them, thus giving him possession of the beautiful necklace in its entirety. The countess was an eccentric character. To punish France for having become a republic she shut herself up in her house and never let the light of day shine on her, contenting herself with candles and gas. At the same time she abolished mirrors from her apartments, and thus spared herself the pain of looking at her face as it aged.

Items of Interest

London, Jan. 23—The members of the Round Table Conference have completed their discussions on the vexed question of confession and absolution in the Church of England.

Although the proceedings were private, it has been stated that the members came to a unanimous decision on the subject, and that this will appear in the report which Dr. Wace, who presided over this conference, as he did over that appointed by the late Bishop Creighton, is about to draw up and present to the Bishop of London.

Inquiry, however, in especially well-informed quarters, elicits the fact that while the members were virtually agreed upon the authority possessed by the priesthood to declare the Divine forgiveness of sin to the penitent, a wide gap was revealed between several members—and not merely between the representatives of the two "extreme" parties—as to the practice of confession in the Church of England. The majority were strongly in favor of its use being occasional and exceptional only, and always voluntary.

This was held to be the plain meaning of the Anglican formularies, and also to be in accordance with English religious sentiment.

A MONTH UNDER SNOW.

London, Jan. 23.—A sheep belonging to Mr. William Pratt, a cattle dealer of Garsdale, has had the remarkable experience of spending four and a half out of the last six weeks under snow.

In the storm of November it became embedded in the snow, and was not rescued till ten days had passed.

The flock with which it had been pasturing on Dent Fell, above Hawes Junction, was being gathered in when the great snowstorm of December threatened. Somehow this particular sheep escaped the dogs and wandered back to the fells, where it must have been buried again the following day.

The shepherds were surprised—22 days afterward—to find the sheep alive and well in a crevasse. It appeared to have just been thawed out of its prison, but was able to walk home, a distance of a mile and a half.

A WHALE FIFTY MILES INLAND.

London, Jan. 23.—A whale measuring nearly 20 feet long, 6 feet across the fins, with a tail 66 inches wide, has been captured at Reedness, near Goole, on the Yorkshire Ouse, between fifty and sixty miles inland from Spurn Point.

The mammal was in a very emaciated condition, and being pursued by some boatmen became quite dead beat, and was easily beached.

LAKEHURST

A deep feeling of sadness has passed over this community owing to the death on Monday morning last of Mrs. Robert Shaw, wife of Robert Shaw, County Councillor. Mrs. Shaw has been in poor health for the last six or seven months, but she was thought to be improving until about a week ago, when she was seized with an attack of inflammation of the lungs. Dr. Bonnell of Bobcaygeon, was called but he pronounced her case hopeless and she gradually sank.

Mrs. Shaw will be greatly missed, for she had a wide circle of friends. Her gentle and kindly disposition and her good Christian example has endeared her to everyone with whom she came in contact. Her death will be sincerely mourned by all and her sorrowing husband and daughters will have the heartfelt sympathy of the community.

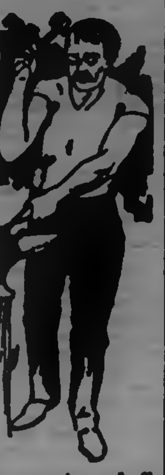
Does not make the man. "The blood is the life," the vital force of the body. So it not infrequently happens that the man who looks to be a picture of physical strength falls a sudden victim to disease. A proper care for the blood would prevent many a serious sickness.



The cleansing of the blood is perfectly accomplished by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It drives out the impurities and poisonous substances which corrupt the blood and breed disease. It increases the activity of the blood-making glands, and so increases the supply of pure blood. It builds up the entire body with good sound flesh.

There is no alcohol in "Golden Medical Discovery" and it is entirely free from opium, cocaine and all other narcotics.

The dealer who offers a substitute for the "Discovery" does so to gain the little more profit paid by inferior medicines. There is nothing "just as good" for the blood as "Golden Medical Discovery" therefore accept no substitute.

"I took five bottles of 'Golden Medical Discovery' for my blood," writes Mr. William D. Shamb[illegible], of Remy, Cherokee Nation, Indian Territory. "I had 'ring worms' on me and I would bury them off and they would come right back, and they were on me when I commenced using 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and they went away and I haven't been bothered any more."

Curious Bits of News.

A French savant who lately returned from Egypt, bringing a royal mummy with him, had a somewhat curious experience at Marseilles. On the case being opened at the custom house there the officer on duty, hearing that it contained a Pharaoh, looked up Pharaoh in the tariff. But no mention could be found of such an article. Then it occurred to him that a nice high duty was exacted on dried fish, and the savant was obliged to pay as if for that commodity.

Rural free delivery, according to the report of the United States Postmaster-General, is being rapidly extended in that country. The number of routes in operation increased from 1,276 at the beginning of the last fiscal year to 4,301 at its close; and under the present plans the number of routes by the first of next July will be 8,600. By that date the rural population receiving daily service will reach 5,700,000, and the delivery system will then cover more than a quarter of the eligible portion of the country.

A remarkable story is going the rounds of the English papers with regard to General Sir Ian Hamilton's spectacles. It appears that General Hamilton lost a pair of spectacles in the battle of Majuba Hill. They were apparently picked up by a Boer whom they suited, and who kept them for twenty years. In the early part of the present year the spectacles were found on the body of a dead Boer. The case had General Hamilton's name on it, and the glasses were in due course returned to their original owner.

"D. F. Coon, whose son was last night married to Miss Hattie Combs, is one of the best natured men in Fort Scott," remarks the Fort Scott (Kan.) "Monitor." "After the ceremony he kissed the bride and gave her $1,000, at the same time remarking that it was worth another hundred. The bride then walked up and kissed him, and he pulled out $100 more and gave it to her. The bridegroom thought this was a good financial snap, and he tried the same game. He kissed his father, but only got $60. However, the old gentleman went broke on this little series of speculations."

A monument was recently unveiled at Dundee, Scotland, in memory of James Bowman Lindsay, who, Sir William Preece said, predicted in 1834 that houses and towns would soon be lighted and heated by electricity, and that machinery would be driven by electricity instead of by steam. About 50 years ago Lindsay went to London and illustrated by experiments a system of wireless telegraphy, but there was then no practical call for such a system, and it was forgotten. "An invention, to be of use," Sir William Preece remarks, "must come at the proper time"—a fact in which disappointed inventors may possibly find some comfort.

A Minnesota paper tells of a giant buff cochin rooster, owned by a Mr. Plumason of Laverne, Minnesota, which has been trained to trot in harness, pulling a tiny cart, in which rides the baby son of its owner. Golden Duke is the name of this strangest of fowls, and it is a prize-winner in its class, as well as a freak. The big bird was broken to harness by the boys of the Plumason household, and now seems to enjoy its work. It wears a little harness and is guided by reins, which it carries in its bill. It is the master of several gaits, and at the word of command, given by the small child who is driving, it will walk, run, trot, or come to a standstill. At home in the country the big rooster often pulls the cart and its occupant for half a mile or more without stopping.

Following closely on the recent announcement of the young women of the Delta Gamma Club of Northwestern University, Chicago, that they were open to proposals of marriage, comes the formation of a club of celibates among the young men of that institution. The Knights of the Marble Heart is the name of the new organization, and, as the name indicates, the club proposes to give the "marble heart" to the young co-eds with matrimonial inclinations, and to cultivate the joys of jolly bachelorhood. The new society of knights is composed of members of the senior class, and their organization was completed last week. The colors, scarlet and black, were pinned on the thirteen charter members, and these will be worn until the arrival of the society's pins, which will consist of small hearts of marble set in gold.

A Bargain in Gloves.

Something more than a warm heart and an open hand is needed in dispensing charity. A Boston woman who wanted to be generous found this to be true in at least one case, related in the "Youth's Companion."

She had been giving to a poor family, consisting of a mother and three grown daughters, a regular allowance of six dollars a week until the daughters should find employment.

The eldest daughter called at the house every Saturday to receive this allowance. One week she appeared on Thursday, and wanted to know if it would be "quite convenient" for her benefactress to advance the money that day instead of waiting until Saturday.

"We are out of fuel and flour, and the man will call this evening for the weekly rent, and we haven't a penny to give him," she said.

"How does it happen that you are in this condition this week, when the six dollars I have been giving you has sufficed to pay your weekly expenses in the past?"

"Well, I'll tell you," replied the young woman, frankly and calmly. "Mamma was down town yesterday, and she came across such a genuine bargain in kid gloves that she felt that it would be almost wicked not to take advantage of it, so she got each of us girls and herself a pair. They're regular two-dollar gloves marked down to seventy-nine cents a pair, and mamma didn't know when she'd ever have another chance to save four dollars and eighty-four cents on four pairs of gloves, so she got them, and who could blame her?"

Dearth of Genius.

The present seems to be an age of accomplished mediocrity. In every field there is a glut of "able men"—that is to say, men who have brains and know their business, who are industrious and energetic, and are either clever, or have the trick of appearing so. But the kind of intellectual distinction which we call genius was never so rare in every department of life.—"Truth."

Curious Bit of News.

Dr. G. L. Johnson, whose studies of the eyes of mammals have recently been published, calls attention to the fact that men and monkeys alone possess parallel and convergent vision of the two eyes. On the other hand, the lower mammals possess divergent and consequently very widely extended vision. Squirrels, for instance, and probably hares and rabbits as well, are able to see an enemy approaching directly from behind without turning the head.

A Strange Pension Case.

STARTING $11.37 in debt thirty years ago, and depending for a livelihood wholly on a pension of $50 a month from the government, the estate of Henry Wensler of Spiker, Wabash County, Ind., now amounts to more than $35,000, and is growing at a rapid rate. What is still more curious, the government, having paid Wensler this pension for a generation, will, at his death, receive back the $50 a month, and $5,000 in addition. Such a state of affairs has never before come within the ken of the bureau officials, as reported by Special Agent Stephens. The story of Wensler and his accumulated wealth is an interesting one, and is thus related by the Wabash correspondent of the Indianapolis "News:"

"During the war he enlisted from Wabash County, in the Eighty-Ninth Indiana Infantry. While on the march in the South he suffered from prostration by the heat, which caused mental derangement, and though he has not at any time been violent, he has been, to an extent, incapable of managing his affairs. For twelve years after his affliction Wensler was confined in the hospital for the insane at Indianapolis, and was discharged as being harmless and requiring no attention. Application was made for a pension on account of his mental condition, and the case was pending some time. In 1867 his wife was divorced, and he was left comparatively friendless.

"At that time his condition was such that Jonathan Talmage, a local banker, was appointed guardian, and Mr. Talmage's report to the circuit court in September, 1870, showed that Wensler had overdrawn his account with his guardian $11.37. In the next report Mr. Talmage showed that the pension of $50 a month, with a considerable amount as arrearages, had been paid, and as Wensler had been supported by the State while at the hospital, the arrearages amounted to a tidy sum.

"In this way the foundation of the present fortune was laid. Four years ago Mr. Talmage died, and Thomas F. Payne, a wealthy land-owner of Wabash, was appointed guardian. The Pension Bureau required, about that time, that all reports of guardians of wards receiving pensions should be made to Washington. In his report of May 1, 1900, Mr. Payne set forth that the amount of funds belonging to Wensler in his hands was $33,400, and that the total cost of administering the guardianship was $1,214. With a few exceptions, the funds were loaned on gilt-edged security, at ten per cent. interest, and later at eight per cent. Some of the later loans have been made at six per cent. This interest was compounded, and the total mounted higher and higher. Wensler was active, and contributed to his own sustenance. For years he plied his vocation as a huckster, and drove about the county with his little wagon, on which were printed in sprawling letters the words: 'H. Wensler, Huckster.'

"Recently he went into business in a small way at Spiker's Station, four miles from Wabash. He lives alone, and his expenses for food and clothing are almost nothing. His guardian pays $2.50 a week for his food, and Wensler takes $35 a month for other expenses. The rest of the $50 pension, and the handsome increment from the $33,000 at interest, is re-invested as it comes in.

"The reports of the guardian to the Pension Bureau, making this remarkable exhibit, induced Commissioner Evans to send Special Agent Stephens to Wabash to look into the case, and he uncovered the facts as stated. The special agent says that as Wensler has no friends, the money at his death will revert to the government. Wensler is perhaps sixty-five years old, and never speaks unless addressed. He is expert in handling horses, and on several occasions has been injured in runaways, but he does not seem to know what fear is. Probably no estate in the country has been so capably managed.

"It is said of Wensler that a few years ago he was seized with a desire to manage his property, and went to the office of a well-known Wabash lawyer to state his case. 'See here, Mr. ——,' said Wensler, 'I am not insane, and I want my funds turned over to me.' The lawyer gazed at him intently for a moment, and then replied: 'You're drawing a good pension, aren't you?' Wensler admitted he was. 'Well, then,' drawled the lawyer, 'if you are not insane your pension will stop, for that's why you are getting it.' Wensler looked wild, and as he shot out of the door, he cried: 'The devil; I'm crazier than hell.' And after that he was content to waive all right to the management and control of his estate."

Fashions in Dawson City.

"TO be fashionable in Dawson City," says a correspondent of the Indianapolis "Journal," "one must have his dog team. It is no uncommon sight to see a Dawson belle or a wealthy matron enveloped in her costly furs, skimming along behind a team of dashing dogs. These dogs are urged to greater speed by the call of 'mush on,' which means in English 'get up' or 'go ahead.' The men in Dawson City are by no means deprived of club-life. The fashionable organization of this kind in Dawson is known as the Zero Club. In summer the men play tennis, lacrosse, cricket and baseball. The women play tennis and serve tea. In winter they have the curling club and the skating rinks. It costs money to live in the Klondike, but one can buy anything from an automobile down if one has the price. A gown that a woman in Indianapolis would pay $25 for, she could not expect to get in Dawson for less than $100. However, if one has the money one can get the most fashionable gown there. A very good meal, accompanied by music, is now served in the best hotels in Dawson for $1. Wood is worth $30 a cord. Good apples were 50 cents apiece last winter, and beefsteak brings from 75 cents to $1.50 a pound during the winter. Christmas turkeys were $2 a pound last winter."

A good pun is rather uncommon, but a joke that may be so described was made recently by Mr. Andrew Carnegie, to whom some advocates of an Anglo-American alliance had appealed for an emblematic flower. Mr. Carnegie promptly suggested the dandelion, urging that the American "dandy," in the shrewd, Yankee, business sense of the term, joined with the British "lion," would result in a blossom which would rule the world.

Ever since the Forth bridge was opened—eleven years ago—painting has gone on continuously, according to the "Mechanical Engineer." "Beginning at the south end, the workmen take three years to cover the entire length of the bridge, and, as three years represents approximately the life of the paint, no sooner are they finished than the men have to begin again. In this way every square inch of steel comes under observation at least once in three years. The staff of men employed varies in number from the maximum of 50."

Russian Red Tape.

WILLIAM E. CURTIS had a strange experience not long ago when he called at a bank in Russia to make a draft against his letter of credit. "I was met at the door by a man in gorgeous livery, with a long staff in his hand," he writes. "He led me into a reception-room which was sumptuously furnished. Upon the center-table were several volumes of photographs, a city directory, a railway guide, the last report of the bank, two or three guide-books, and several morning papers. Over in one of the corners was a handsomely carved writing-desk furnished with all sorts of stationery. While I was wondering what I was there for, a gentleman of irreproachable attire and manners entered, and asked how he could serve me. I explained that I would like two hundred and fifty dollars on my letter of credit, and wondered how he knew I was an American, but he had doubtless learned from long experience to distinguish the different nationalities, and I soon discovered by the manner in which he received subsequent arrivals that he could speak German and French as fluently as English. I handed him my letter of credit, and he bowed politely and left the room. For a time I was alone with my own thoughts. I looked over all the books and papers, watched the traffic in the street from the window, made two or three entries in my notebook, and wondered if the polite gentleman had not forgotten all about me, when a page in buttons entered with a silver tray, upon which were two drafts—duplicates—for my signature. The little fellow bowed like a French dancing-master, and seemed to be deeply impressed with a sense of responsibility. He came in several times afterward on similar service for other people, and his salutes were repeated each time with an exactness that showed careful training. I was afraid he was going to be gone all day, and became impatient. I sat down at the desk to write a letter, and had written nearly a whole sheet when he came back with my letter of credit and the money upon his tray. But the latter was all in bills. I handed him one of them and asked him to get it changed. He bowed again and disappeared. I must have spent fifteen minutes regretting my folly, when the handsome manager came in to enquire if there had been a mistake. He seemed to think I had been overpaid, and was greatly relieved when I told him I only wanted a bill changed. He disappeared, and it was another ten minutes before the boy returned with the smaller bills. I had been in that room for more than three-quarters of an hour."

We Thrashed You.

DEAN STUBBS of Ely does not like Chicago. In his book, "In a Minster Garden," the Dean's causerie revolves amiably round Ely, but where he discourses on his holiday in the New World he becomes most amusing. Of Chicago he says: "I thought it the most hatefully unlovely city I ever was in. There were fine buildings, of course—warehouses for the most part, of the 'sky-scraping' variety—but, as a whole, hateful, simply hateful—a clanking wilderness of endless streets, monotonous, unpicturesque, untidy, dirty, foul."

Yet the Dean tells at least one story which proves that Chicago, for all its unloveliness, has a knack of digesting all who go to live there. It relates to Archdeacon Rushton, the secretary of Bishop Maclaren. The Archdeacon was a Yorkshireman by birth; he had married a Canadian; but he had been settled for some time in Chicago. "His children, he told me, were born in that city. One day lately his youngest boy came home from school looking grave and solemn. He had just been promoted to the history class, and had been reading about the War of Independence. 'Father,' he said, 'are you a Britisher?' 'Yes, my boy, I am.' 'Oh! . . . Mother, are you a Britisher?' 'Yes, dear, I am,' she said. 'Well,' he replied, after a pause, 'I don't care. You had the King's army, and we were only a lot of farmers, but we thrashed you!'"

One Obstacle Overcome.

WILLIE was a bright boy, of an inventive turn of mind. At the age of eight or ten he was seized with the "perpetual motion" idea, and began to make all sorts of queer machines, despite the advice of his father, who told him of men that had devoted their lives to a vain search for perpetual motion.

"It violates the first principles of mechanics, my boy," said his father. "Action and reaction are equal, as you will understand some day. When you can pull yourself up by your bootstraps, you may hope to invent a machine that will start itself and run without stopping."

The next day Willie came to his father in great excitement and told him he had done it—had pulled himself up by his bootstraps.

"It's no trick at all," he said as he led the way to the barn, where he showed his bewildered father a pair of old boots nailed, soles up, to a beam overhead.

"There!" he exclaimed, as he climbed on a box, reached up, ran his fingers through the straps of the boots and pulled himself up. "What do you think of that?"

Willie's father did not reply in words. Instead, he took a harness strap, and then and there Willie gave an imitation of perpetual motion which required no elaborate apparatus.

Christmas Unmasked.

In modern London, the Christmas spirit is not, I maintain, a spontaneous spirit from within yourselves, but a spirit which Dickens foisted into you. For Christmas itself you have no real sentiment; but you continue to keep it, cannot help keeping it, for Dickens' sake, in the regulation way. It is a mere literary survival.—Max Beerbohm in "Pall Mall Magazine."

Over the grave of his wife in an English village a poetry loving widower has just erected a monument bearing this verse from the Rubaiyat:

"A Book of Verses underneath the Bough,
A Jug of Wine, a Loaf of Bread—and Thou
Beside me singing in the Wilderness—
Oh, Wilderness were Paradise enow!"

At a Portuguese Bull-Fight.

IT was to be a very great event—twelve bulls were to make their entry, and some famous Spanish bull-fighters were to prove their prowess, and the King was to be there, and Portugal's handsome Queen.

Out along the white, dusty roads, on past the outskirts of the town where olives and fig-trees peeped over the stone walls, and occasional palms reared their tall stems—all hurry, rush and bustle, until at last the open dusty plain was reached, and before us, like a modern Coliseum, rose the great, massive arena of the Bull Ring.

How like the Coliseum, though, in weak architecture, was the building; and all the mass of sightseers pressing on to their different corridors—the poor to the sunny side, the richer to that in shade.

Inside were the great arcades under the arches, and the wide flights of steps to the various tiers of seats or rows of boxes.

Up we went to where our ticket told me was the fauteuil allotted to us (No. 166, first "fila"), a good position we saw as we entered the tier, and at a "coup d'oeil" the whole vast arena was before us. Beneath was the level ring where Toro would appear; on our left the King's box, a Mauresque canopy in blue and gold, and draped in red and gold velvet. On our right and left, on this shady side of the arena, the boxes are hung with bright draperies of blue, gray, and yellow, setting off the gay dresses of the ladies fanning themselves in the boxes with tiny little Portuguese fans.

At last a roar goes up from some 15,000 throats—the arena will hold 20,000, but it is not packed—and then exactly opposite us enter all the toreadors—that is, all who take part in the fight. Cavalleiros (or picadors, as the Spanish call them), bandarilheiros, furcados, and the assistants dressed in rich Georgian costume—in red and blue satin and velvet, with plumed flat hats.

Two cavaliers mounted upon two magnificent steeds, very unlike the wretched animals ridden into the ring to be slaughtered at a Spanish bull-fight; a dozen bandarilheiros and a dozen furcados and the assistants, all in their gay costumes, make a brilliant show on the smooth arena. The crash of music, the roar of the populace, and the brilliant spectacle send the Portuguese blood to fever heat; and quickly, after salutations to the King or President, all the toreadors retire and one horseman enters alone. A signal is given, the doors are thrown open, and in rushes a fine black bull. Like an arrow he makes for the horseman, who leaps aside; but Toro is after him, and chases him round the ring. With a deft movement, just as the bull's horns nearly reach the horse's flanks, the cavalier swerves and plants a dart in the bull's shoulders; the matadors rush in, and distract the bull's attention with their red cloaks. The bull no longer cares for horse or man; the red rag is his enemy, and he goes for it, and tosses and paws it and tramples on it until it is snatched from him, and a bandarilheiro stands before him, watches him; and leaps aside when Toro tries to toss him.

At last, maddened, the bull rushes at his tormentor, who races to the barrier of the arena, but halts there; and at the moment the bull's horns seem to touch him, plants his two decorated darts well in the bull's shoulders and leaps the barrier. But the bull leaps after him—half his black body is over; some of the assistants leap into the arena on the safest side; but Toro falls and falls back inside the arena, to start to his feet again and rush for the matadors, who advance with their cloaks to draw him toward them.

It is these red cloaks that prove how dull is Toro in his rage. The matador holds the red cloak at arm's length, the bull rushes at it—never at the man holding it—and the matador pass the cloak over his head as he strives to gore it; the bull turns and goes for it again, seemingly oblivious that a man is moving it. Very agile and dexterous are the matadors; but there seems no danger to them, so wholly is the bull occupied with the cloak.

Not so the bandarilheiros. To face a rushing bull even with padded horns until his hot breath is in your face, and his horns lowered for the toss; to plant darts scarcely two feet long in his shoulders, and leap aside ere the toss is given, is a feat of courage, great swiftness and agility; and mighty is the shout from the vast crowd when this is done deftly and neatly, and the barbs stick well in the bull's tough hide. As the bulls get tired out with their tormentors, a group of eight or ten tame bulls, with long tube-like bells, are let into the arena. These encircle the wild bull that at once is tamed; and these trained bulls trot him out of the circle to his den, and a fresh bull is then introduced.—James Baker in "Ainslee's Magazine."

A school inspector, having a few minutes to spare after examining the school, put a few questions to the lower form boys on the common objects in the schoolroom.

"What is the use of that map?" he asked, pointing to one stretched across the corner of the room; and half a dozen shrill voices answered, in measured articulation:

"It's to hide the teacher's bicycle, sir"—"Wasp."

For hard and soft coal, coke or peat. The only stove without grate and possessing a tube for gas escape.

DESCRIPTION

The Star is the latest and best stove in the market for slow combustion—why? The inside is lined with fire brick all in one piece and cemented to the outer shell. No danger of breaking or loss of pieces.

The Star has a tube behind for the escape of the gas. As anyone who uses soft coal knows, the gas accumulates under the fresh coal, and if there is no escape there will be explosions and puffs of smoke. In the Star this disappears in the gas escape. The star has a sliding damper and ornamental door of mica.

After being filled, the Star will heat for hours without attention. It will hold fire and give out heat longer than any other stove.

The Star is 50 per cent more economical than any other stove.

MORE THAN 4,000 ARE IN USE IN THE LOWER PROVINCES.

Coal Consumers, Attention

We certify that we have in use one No. 3 Star stove in our large pool and billiard room the size of which is 46 by 30 feet, with 15 foot ceiling. We have perfect heat, and the most coal we have used on the coldest day yet has been 2 scuttles in twenty-four hours. We are so well pleased with the stove that we would not use any other.

BOCAMORA & CALLAHAN.

I have been using a No. 3 STAR stove in the sitting room at the City Hotel for some time past, and it has proved so satisfactory that I have ordered two more to replace two stoves in the upstairs. The Star gives more heat than the other stoves with half the amount of coal.

MARTIN CONNORS.

We have in use in our Composing Room a No. 3 Star coal stove and wish to state that it is giving eminent satisfaction. The entire absence of gas by the escape provided, the increase of heat and the saving in coal are special features of the Star, and it requires a minimum of attention.

TIMES PRINTING CO.

We are using one No. 3 "Star" stove in our large room where formerly we had four large wood heaters, and get more heat now than before. The wood [illegible] cost us $4.00 every week for fuel and the Star stove, which we are now using, costs us only $1.50, making a saving of $2 per week in the [illegible] which would soon pay for the stove. We can recommend this stove to any person wanting a first-class heater. We would not use any other stove that is made.

Cancer Growing Two Years

A Remarkable Case Cured Completely by the New Constitutional Remedy.

Not long ago, we had the pleasure of receiving the following letter:

"When I began your treatment there was a hard lump in my breast, which had been growing for two years, and it was so bad at last that it drew the nipple in. I consulted two doctors, and they both pronounced it cancer, and advised me to have my breast cut off. Your remedy, however, was recommended to me by a friend, and I am very thankful to say that it not only saved my life, but did away with the necessity of having to undergo the painful operation, which I so much dreaded."

We do not publish the names of those who give us testimonials for the gratification of the curious, but any sufferer from Cancer or Tumor may have the name and address of the lady who wrote the above, by sending two stamps to Stott & Jury, Bowmanville Ont.

IT DOES NOT PAY TO USE A BREAKFAST CEREAL THAT DISTURBS AND HAMPERS DIGESTON

Digestive disturbances and stomach derangements should be carefully avoided if we desire to pursue our daily work with profit and pleasure. It does not pay to be the victim of a capricious and irritable stomach. In nine cases out of every ten stomach difficulties arise from the use of starchy and indigestible foods.

A well known city physician with a large and lucrative practice recently said: "If men and women more generally understood the many advantages of Malt Breakfast Food as a health food, we would not have to deal with so many serious and stubborn cases of indigestion and dyspepsia that we are called upon so often to treat and subscribe for. I have used Malt Breakfast Food in my own family and have recommended it in my daily practice with the best results. The great advantage of Malt Breakfast Food over all others I have tried, is the use of malt with the grain, thus producing a delicious food free from starch." Ask your grocer for this best of breakfast foods.

MAKES CHILDREN BRAINY

Proof About Feeding

It has been proved times without number that properly selected food will build up the brain. The testimony of a school teacher on this subject is good. The letter is long and only the important facts will be given.

"While I was teaching school in 1898, a little girl in the household where I lived was very fond of Grape-Nuts and would eat all she was allowed. I noticed that she was a remarkably bright pupil. There were five other children, all of one family, that were so marked in their work. They were really the brightest family I ever knew, so I questioned to find what they were using. They replied, 'Only Grape-Nuts.' I learned upon further inquiry that this was their chief diet for breakfast and discovered that their luncheon consisted generally of Grape-Nuts with cream and a little fruit.

I had suffered from dyspepsia, headaches and general debility greatly and, as I knew my diet was not well selected, I took up Grape-Nuts Breakfast Food and carried it to school for luncheon. I soon discovered a change in my condition and found that Grape-Nuts afforded me more nourishment than bread, meat, eggs or anything that I could take in my basket. After luncheon I would feel strong and bright for the afternoon's work while before I had frequently been half ill.

In the spring of 1900 I went to college, rented a room and boarded myself, subsisting largely on Grape-Nuts, and I cannot speak too highly of the food as a brain nourisher. At the end of a year's schooling I obtained a position in one of the ward schools in this, a college town, and am well and happy.

The wife of the college principal tells me that there is no food that agrees with her as well as Grape-Nuts and that testimony was repeated by a lady friend in my own house." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

A SUCCESSFUL YEAR.

ANNUAL REPORT OF ST. PAUL'S PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Shows the Church to be in a Flourishing Condition—A Steady Increase—Officers Elected.

The annual meeting of the congregation of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church was held in the Sunday School room last night. The reports of the year show very gratifying progress in the different departments of the church's work and bright prospects for the future. The various societies in connection with the church were reported to be flourishing. The membership had increased and the finances were in a healthy condition. The meeting was very well attended but owing to the bad roads the attendance from the country was not as large as usual. After singing the 100 Psalm, and prayer by Rev. Yule the business was taken up.

Rev. Dr. Torrance made a short address in which he referred to the pleasure he felt in seeing so many present and especially the large number of men. For some years past the men had not turned out in as large numbers as he would have liked. Twenty five years ago he attended the annual meeting for the first time, and in that time many changes had taken place. After further remarks by the pastor he stated that the first duty of the evening was to appoint a chairman. On motion Mr. J. A. Fife was appointed chairman.

After a short address by the chairman in which he expressed his pleasure at seeing so many present. He announced the next business would be reading and adoption of the last annual meeting.

Mr. H. S. McDonald read the minutes of the last annual meeting which was held on Jan. 30th, 1901.

On motion the minutes were adopted

REPORT OF SESSION

Mr. Fife read the report of the session which showed a steady increase in the membership of the church.

During the past year the membership had increased by 17. The finances were in a very satisfactory condition.

Some improvements were necessary in the church this year. The building was in need of repainting and would have to be done in the spring. This would cost about $300 and the congregation were asked to respond to the call.

At the conclusion of the report, Mr. R. P. McWilliams drew the attention of the audience to the fact that fully one-half of the communicant members of the church did not attend the communion services. At the last communion service about 450 members out of about 900 were present. He thought a roll should be kept so that the pastor and officers would know who were present and who were not. The present system of communion cards were of no use. Some people came without cards and other brought two or three cards which they should not do. In churches in Toronto the card system was very different to what it is here. Members who came without cards were obliged to get a card from their elder. Visitors could receive a card from an elder and the pastor and officers of the church knew exactly who attended the services and those who did not.

Mr. Madill stated that if Mr. McWilliam's statements were correct, the matter should be dealt with by the session. He thought a proper record should be kept.

On motion the report of the session was adopted.

BOARD OF MANAGEMENT

Mr. H. S. McDonald presented the report of the Board of Management which was very satisfactory.

The report was adopted.

On motion the board of management was re-elected.

Messrs. Crane and McWilliams were re-appointed auditors.

SUNDAY SCHOOL REPORT.

Mr. Johnston read the report of the Sunday School. While the attendance was larger last year than before, there was a decrease of 41 in the membership of the Senior and Intermediate classes. During the year a number of changes had been made in the teaching staff and this greatly retarded the advancement of the school. There was apparently a great lack of interest in the work by many of the scholars and this was to be regretted. There were 30 officers and teachers and the average attendance was only 281. The contributions for the year amounted to $362.86.

Reference was made to the splendid attendance of Miss Maggie Mein, who had not missed a service in the Sunday School for nine years.

Reference was also made to the death of Miss Patterson, who was one of the most faithful workers in the Sunday School. During the year, Rev. Geo. Yule had formed an adult class which was steadily increasing.

On motion the report was adopted.

MISSION SOCIETY.

Mr. T. A. S. Hay read the report of the Missionary Society. The total amount contributed was $1,657.27. This amount was about the same as in former years.

After the reading of the report considerable discussion ensued regarding the manner of taking up the mission collections. The number contributing to mission work was less than half of the number that contributed a few years ago. During the past few years the collections had been taken up by envelope, on the first Sunday in each month and it was thought this way was not satisfactory as the old way, that of having collectors call on the members of the congregation. In this way each member and adherent of the church would give something, but by the present system there were a great many who did not give anything at all. Sheriff Hall said he was just as strongly opposed to the system of missionary collectors now as he was a few years ago, and thought that what was given should be given freely. A resolution that had been adopted at the last annual meeting should be put into force.

The Mission Committee for this year is the same as last. On motion the monies will be divided as follows:

Home Missions	$425.00
Foreign	375.00
French Evangelization	187.00

The report was adopted.

MISSION SCHOOL COMMITTEE.

Mr. Madill read the report of the sub-committee appointed to look into the matter of building a Mission School in the South Ward. The committee after careful consideration recommend the building of a Sunday School in the South Ward, on a lot owned by the church. The building will cost about $2000 of which nearly one-half is now subscribed or promised. The committee recommended the building to have a seating capacity of 250, and to have basement so arranged as to be used for Sunday School if it be necessary for to use the upper story for a place of worship.

After considerable discussion during which many were opposed to erecting a small building, but to send too largely [illegible] that would be of sufficient size to meet all requirements for some years to come. The meeting was referred back to the committee to see about erecting a larger building and the following names added to the committee—Messrs. Adam Hall, W. G. Ferguson, Jas. Gillespie and G. M. Roger.

the whole amount required for the con-
On motion it was decided to subscribe struction of the Sunday School before the work of erection was commenced.

JUNIOR MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

The report of the different Missionary Societies were adopted as read.

Mr. Adam Hall moved a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Crane and the choir for the very efficient services they rendered during the past year.

Mr. Crane in a few well chosen words thanked them for the vote of thanks.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered to the young ladies who kept the church so well supplied with flowers during the year.

The ushers were tendered a hearty vote of thanks for the very efficient services they had rendered. Their position was difficult to fill as they were obliged to be present every Sunday.

The business meeting being over, refreshments were served by the ladies, and a very pleasant hour was spent in social intercourse.

UNEQUALLED IN THE World

DIAMOND DYES TESTED FOR OVER TWENTY YEARS ARE THE POPULAR HOME DYES —SCIENTIFIC CHEMISTS SAY THEY ARE THE PUREST, STRONGEST, FASTEST AND MOST BRILLIANT

Diamond Dyes have no equal in the world; they are the only package dyes that can be used with safety and success. The imitation and crude dyes sold by some dealers for the sake of a little extra profit, are a source of danger to home dyers. These common dyes sold at the same price as the Diamond, are dear at any price, as they ruin fabrics and garments. It is therefore wise to examine each package you buy. If the name, "Diamond" is not on the package, they are deceptions and frauds. Diamond Dyes are fully warranted by the manufacturers; they guarantee success at all times.

KILLED BY ELECTRIC SHOCK

The Secretary of the Lindsay Y.M.C.A. Meets a Sudden Death

Mr. J. B. Walker, secretary of the Lindsay branch of the Y.M.C.A., met a very sudden and unexpected death yesterday morning. It appears that Mr. Walker was in the cellar making some change in the position of the electric light wires, when he received a very heavy shock which caused instant death. Mr. Walker was well known in Y.M.C.A. circles in town and was highly esteemed by all who knew him. He was a native of Orangeville, and leaves a widow and infant child to mourn his death.

CONDEMNED TO DEATH BY COURTS OF TURKEY

Damad Mahmud Pasha Cannot Return to Turkey Without Losing His Life

THOUGHT TO BE VICTIM OF POLITICAL INTRIGUE

Mahmud Realized $400,000 Just Before His Departure, But His Principal Estates were Confiscated

Constantinople, Feb. 6.—The Sultan's brother-in-law, Damad Mahmud Pasha has been sentenced to death. Mahmud has long been prominent in the young Turk movement, and was recently expelled from Greece at the behest of the Sultan. Mahmud went to Rome and the Sultan requested his expulsion from Italy. It was refused, but Mahmud proceeded to Paris, where he remains in safety. All the Sultan's blandishments have failed to induce him to return to Constantinople, so the Criminal Court was instructed to issue a warrant for Mahmud's arrest and to try the fugitive by default, with the result that he was condemned to death.

Damad Mahmud Pasha fled from Turkey in December, 1899, taking with him his wife's jewels and all the money he could collect. He was accompanied by his two sons, Princes Sabaggedit and Luthfalla. Learning that he had gone to France, the Turkish Government telegraphed to the French Minister of Foreign Affairs, M. Delcasse, asking for the arrest of the fugitive, and his return to Constantinople on the charge that he was implicated in a plot to assassinate the Sultan. This accusation, however, was generally discredited and it was believed the refugee was the victim of an intrigue. Mahmud subsequently declared at Paris that the charge that he had appropriated money and accepted bribes was a calumny, and that he was a patriot and was being persecuted by political intriguers. Mahmud is about fifty years of age. The Sultan, after Mahmud's flight, decreed the divorce of his sister, Seniha Sultana. Mahmud realized $400,000 just before his departure, but his principal estates were confiscated and he and his sons were officially proclaimed renegades and outlaws.

THE WAR NEARING AN END

This is the Belief Now Prevalent in London and on the Continent

London, Feb. 7—Mr. Kruger and his advisers show so many evidences of astuteness in their negotiations with the British authorities prior to their declaration of war in 1899, that we need not be surprised if similar diplomatic attempts precede the inevitable final surrender. In view of the multitude of rumors which the Leyds press manufactory is circulating, in the hope of dividing British parties upon the peace terms, and gaining the support of some foreign powers towards a modification of the same, it is well to call to mind the very definite statements which are on record as to the minimum demands of the present British Cabinet.

Lord Rosebery, in his Chesterfield speech, thus alluded to peace conditions: "I believe in the stern, efficient, vigorous prosecution of the war to its natural end, but I believe that its natural end is a regular peace and a regular settlement. Therefore, I should not be deaf to any overtures of peace that came from any responsible authority, more especially if they came from the exiled Government which now exists somewhere in the Low Countries, and which surrounds ex-President Kruger. You may say that it is a Government in exile. You may say that it is a scattered Government. You may say that it is a discredited Government. I really do not know if it is discredited by its own people, but I do know this, that it is the only Government, that is the Government which went to war with us, and must, even in Belgium or Holland, in the absence of any other, retain some vestige of its former authority. You cannot negotiate with the scattered centurions in the field, for they have no authority, and you do not know where to find them. You cannot negotiate with the other ex-President — President Steyn — because he is lost somewhere in that infinite space which is now the theatre of war in South Africa, and therefore, I say, that if the Government that is now in Europe, that scattered and dejected Ministry, should make any overtures of peace directly or indirectly to His Majesty's Government, if I were a Minister I should not turn a deaf ear to them; I do not mean, of course, that a Boer Ambassador should come to London or that the King should send an Ambassador to Holland. I mean nothing of that kind, but some of the greatest peaces, the greatest settlements, in the world's history have begun with an apparently casual meeting of two travellers in a neutral inn, and I think it might well happen that some some such fortuitous meeting might take place under the auspices of His Majesty's Government and of the exiled Boer Government which might lead to very good results. At any rate, though I would not offer terms to them, I should not be deaf to any overtures from them."

To this opinion, Mr. Balfour, speaking as the mouthpiece of the Cabinet, replied only a few days ago that they (the Government) were as anxious for peace as Lord Rosebery, or as any man could be, but it must be a peace upon terms which "we have repeatedly and explicitly stated to the world at large." He alluded to the impractical character of Lord Rosebery's proposals. "Lord Rosebery appears to think that in some way, through some unknown channel, we ought to communicate with some unknown Government, or some unknown person, who controls the destinies of the fighting forces still left in the Transvaal. He does not wish to give back the independence of the Transvaal, he does not wish us to announce our terms beforehand. He does not wish us to be the first to start negotiations, and surely it is a little premature for him holding these opinions to announce himself as a greater lover of peace than those who at present have the destinies of the country in their charge. No, gentlemen, of all blessings peace is the greatest blessing, of all the regions of the earth which most require peace, South Africa is that region, and it is almost folly to suggest that we are going to stand in its way, but we will never admit of peace which is to be a prelude of further war, we will never consent that all the blood of our nearest and dearest which has been spent, and freely spent, in this war shall have been spent in vain. We have begun the work. We mean to finish. We mean to finish it in a style which will prevent its ever having to be begun again."

Lord Milner, also officially inspired, said at Johannesburg, ten days ago: "Gentlemen, the war will end all the sooner if we reply by steady physical pressure without fidgeting about negotiations. It is no use to threaten, no use to wheedle. The only thing is imperturbably to squeeze and to keep our clemency and conciliation, both excellent in their proper place, for the Boers who surrender, instead of lavishing blandishments upon those who continue to fight.

Our pro-Boer friends find it difficult to part with the belief that there is still in existence a civic executive, which represents the Orange Free State and the Transvaal. They need to be reminded that there is no longer the one or the other, and that Messrs. Kruger, Schalkburgher, Steyn, Leyds and Company have no official status, either with Great Britain, or any other power, no matter how friendly certain of the press and citizens may be. The situation is best summed up in the cabled sentence: "We can have no correspondence with the Dutch Government, which might be twisted into a precedent by other powers attempting to open communication with us on the same subject. Our answer to President McKinley still holds. We can deal with nobody in this quarrel, but the enemy who has defied us."

DE WET SURROUNDED BY BLOCKHOUSE LINE

Lord Kitchener's Cordon Has now been Completed in Orange River Colony Boer Leader Can Raise 1000 Men

Special to The Times.

London, Feb. 6.—The correspondent of the London Times at Pretoria, in reviewing the war situation, says that British operations north of the Delagoa Railway have resulted in rounding up scattered groups of Boers at Pilgrim's Rest, under Schoeman. Commandant Irichardt lies to his men about the independence and the supremacy of the Boers and thus holds 250 of them at Sterkampsberg. Commandant Muller has 200 men near Belfast, and Beyers, with a few burghers is east of Pietersburg. South of the Delagoa line, the Boers under Viljoen and Prinsloo occasionally penetrate the constabulary lines. In this district ten armed burghers make a town unsafe at night. There are small commandoes in the Eastern Transvaal. The largest consists of 33 men, under Britz. The Orange River Colony line of blockhouses is complete from Heilbron to Botha's Pass, and from Kroonstadt to Harrismith. The Boers are being constantly harassed. General De Wet can bring together about 1,000 men in twenty-four hours. The completion of the two blockhouse lines is important, inasmuch as they, with those already built, enclose De Wet and the burghers still holding the hilly country in the north-eastern part of the Orange River Colony in a circumscribed area with block-house lines to north, south, and west, and the mountains to the east and render their capture much more probable.

GERMANY AND GREAT BRITAIN

A Better Feeling Now Existing Between the Two Great World Powers

London, Feb. 7—The annual report of the Bremen Chamber of Commerce draws attention to the fact that the exports of Germany to Great Britain and her colonies and the total British exports to Germany amounted, severally, in value, to close upon a milliard of marks. The report shows that the German export trade has developed chiefly by virtue of the fact that the British Empire treats all nations alike. Speaking of the pro-Boer agitations and the affect, the report states that those who are responsible for the "measureless agitation against the English," are only delaying the end of the war and are at the same time causing an estrangement which will seriously affect the commercial relations between the two countries and result in severe injury to Germany.

Some of the more prominent German journals are awakening to the true position of the Fatherland, and realize that Britain can strike that country such an economic blow that it would require decades for it to recover from the effect. The Weser Zeitung points out that if only one-twentieth part of the German exports to England were to be stopped, it would mean a loss of fifty million marks' worth of trade—a loss which would entirely fall upon the earning classes.

A Highly Successful Year's Operation

PROFIT AND LOSS ACCOUNTS

Increased by $18,586.76 on the Year's Operations

A Very Favorable Report Presented—Evidences of Public Confidence in the Company—Officers Elected

The fifth annual general meeting of the shareholders of the Trusts and Guarantee Company, Limited, was held in the offices of the Company, 14 King street west, Toronto on Wednesday, January 29th, 1902. The shareholders were well represented at the meeting.

The President, Hon. J. R. Stratton, having taken the chair, the general manager, Mr. T. P. Coffee, acted as secretary to the meeting.

After reading the notice convening the meeting, the report of the directors was read and the balance sheet submitted.

DIRECTORS' REPORT

Your Directors have pleasure in submitting this, their fifth annual report, accompanied by the financial statement exhibiting the affairs of the company for the year ending the 31st December, 1901, together with the auditors' report verifying its correctness and reporting the examination of the securities.

From the report, it will be seen the profits for the year have been sufficient to enable the company, after payment of all expenses, to declare two half-yearly dividends at rate of five per cent. per annum, and, payment thereof, to carry forward to the credit of profit and loss account a balance of twenty-four thousand one hundred and fifty-five dollars and forty-seven cents. ($24,155.47).

The amount charged to the expenses of the company during the year includes a considerable sum which was employed in making known to the public the advantages the company offers in the capacity of a trusts corporation. Your directors believe that such extension of the knowledge of the company's methods and standing will result in an appreciable and profitable increase of business.

The assets of the company have been invested in good securities yielding satisfactory rates of interest.

The number of appointments of the company to act as Administrator, Executor, Guardian, etc., has been satisfactory, and in addition to these a large number of wills appointing the company Executor and Trustee have been made and deposits in our vaults, besides many others made and held by the parties and of which notice has been given to the company.

The officials of the company, through your directors, desire to acknowledge the uniform courtesy shown them by the different officials of the courts of the province.

During the year many shareholders have availed themselves of the privilege of paying the uncalled portion of their subscription, and as the result the amount of paid up stock of the company has increased by the sum of ninety-six thousand three hundred and twenty-seven dollars and twenty-seven cents ($96,327.27), making a total of one hundred and ninety-eight thousand, eight hundred and eighty-one dollars and ninety-eight cents. ($198,881.98), voluntarily paid up by the holders of partially paid stock since the privilege of making such payments was extended two years ago. The paid up capital stock is now $506,811.98.

It is a pleasure to your directors to be able to recognize the general efficiency of the officers, agents and staff of the company. They have all discharged their duties faithfully and satisfactorily.

J. R. STRATTON,
President.

The president, in moving the adoption of the report, said, in part:

Gentlemen,—The duty of moving the adoption of the fifth annual report of the company, is, in every way, a pleasant one. It is a pleasure to note that the condition of prosperity prevailing and which have for some time prevailed throughout the country, show no indications of a decline. There seems to be a marked aggressiveness in financial, commercial and industrial activities, especially the latter — the large number of companies seeking incorporation indicates that capital has confidence that the development of our resources of various kinds by industrial and other means will yield satisfactory results. The report gives evidence of careful and capable management and involves an encouraging outlook. The statement of last year, 1900, shows a profit and loss credit balance of $5,568.71. This has been increased this year by $18,586.76, leaving a sum to be carried forward of $24,155.47. The net earnings of the company last year amounted to $41,868.17, from which there was paid two half-yearly dividends at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, of the amounts of $11,102.98 and $12,228.51, respectively, leaving to be carried forward the balance just mentioned. The interest rate earned upon the capital employed was a fraction over 9 per cent., a very satisfactory indication of earning power. Confidence on the part of shareholders is shown by the fact that since the last annual meeting the shareholders have practically expressed their appreciation of the value of an investment in our stock by the payment voluntarily of an additional amount of $96,327.27 on their stock, thus increasing the paid-up capital stock of the company to a total of $506,811.98. You will recognize the wisdom of having had included in the expenditure of the past year a considerable sum employed to increase the public knowledge of the advantages the company offers in its capacity as a trusts corporation. With this in mind, and with a favorable report presented in view, I feel that I am not unduly sanguine in predicting an increasingly prosperous future for the company. I have much pleasure in moving the adoption of the report.

Mr. D. W. Karn, vice-president, in seconding the adoption of the report, said that the directors deserved to be congratulated upon the excellent outcome of the year's operation of the company, and the shareholders also had every reason to be satisfied with their investment in the stock of the company. Good substantial dividends and the very considerable strengthening of the profit and loss account, the evidence the report afforded of the stability of the company, as well as its general prospects, must be gratifying to all.

Mr. C. Kloepfer, vice-president, in supporting the motion expressed his satisfaction with the showing of the report, an excellent earning power, safe investment of the company's assets, and the generally satisfactory condition of the company's affairs, the results of careful management.

Several of the shareholders also expressed their approval of the gratifying report presented, of the policy and practice of the company which had led to such satisfactory progress and to the gratifying increase of the profit and loss account.

The report was unanimously adopted and the following Board of Directors elected:

Hon. J. R. Stratton, W. J. McKee, Peter Hamilton, A. W. Campbell, Richard Hall, A. F. Rutter, Hon. Senator McMillan, A. F. MacLaren, M.P.; W. J. Sheppard, J. G. Wallace, A. C. Macdonell, C. Kloepfer, W. M. German, Alf. MacDougall, F. C. Taylor, A. L. Davis, F. M. Holland, A. M. MacKinnon, D. W. Karn, W. A. Stratton, T. S. Hobbs, T. P. Coffee, R. R. McLennan, M. P.

Subsequently at a meeting of the Board of Directors, Hon. J. R. Stratton was re-elected president, and Messrs. D. W. Karn and C. Kloepfer, vice-presidents.

Police Court

Two tramps, Laurin and Martin, who were given their liberty on Wednesday, returned to the police station the same evening and asked for a further term on the hill. Yesterday morning Magistrate Dumble granted them their wish and sent them to gaol for one month. These men were very anxious to get to Montreal, but evidently found the roads in a bad state.

Pleasant Entertainment, With Essay on Jacques Cartier.

In the T. A. S. entertainment hall last evening an enjoyable and interesting program was rendered, under the auspices of the Ladies Aid. The hall was comfortably filled by an appreciative audience, and every number on the program was most enthusiastically applauded. These consisted of solos by several members of the Society, duets, instrumentals, etc., followed by a carefully prepared and accurate account of the several voyages of that pioneer Breton discoverer, Jacques Cartier, descriptive of his enterprise, perseverance, tact and patriotism. At the conclusion of the paper, a short discussion took place on the merits of the article. The meeting closed with an instrumental duet.

These meetings are much appreciated by those who have the pleasure of hearing them, and much information on important subjects may be gleaned. It is the intention of the society shortly to enlarge their rooms by acquiring a vacant hall adjoining. The increase of membership and attendance renders such action almost imperative.

Nervous and Sleepless

Two horrors crowded into one life, the product of poor digestion, and the poisons that are thereby formed within the body. There's just one method of cure for this terrible condition—plenty of food, but mind, food properly digested. That's the difficulty—the digestive power of the stomach must be improved. Rich, red blood formed, strength given to the organs to drive out poisons; then comes strength, vigor and endurance. Ferrozone does all this and more; it makes sick people well; weak people strong. Use Ferrozone and you reap health. Sold by Ormond & Walsh.

DAILY MAIL SERVICE

Has at Last Been Secured Between Lakefield and Young's Point

It will be good news to the people of Young's Point and neighborhood to learn that a daily mail service is to be established winter and summer between Lakefield and Young's Point. Yesterday Mr. J. H. McClellan received a letter from the Postmaster General in answer to a communication from the former, stating that a daily service had been decided on. Mr. McClellan is entitled to the thanks of the people of the Point and neighborhood for his efforts in their behalf. It is also gratifying to The Times to know that an additional field has been opened up for this great family journal. For a long time the children as well as the adults of Young's Point have cried in vain for their g.f.j. Now it is different. They are within the sphere of our "influence" and will no doubt flourish intellectually and morally as they never flourished before.

Special From Norwich, Ont.

The recovery of Mr. Norman Batty Hardware Merchant, one of Norwich's oldest and most successful citizens, has excited much comment. For years Mr. Batty has been an unceasing sufferer from Catarrhal Asthma, and although no end of time and money was spent relief was not obtained until Mr. Batty commenced Catarrhozone treatment, which perfectly cured him. This case is only equalled by that of Mrs. Bannon, wife of J. J. Bannon, druggist, who was also cured of Asthma and Hay Fever by Catarrhozone after 20 years' suffering. Fully a hundred persons in this town have been cured of catarrhal troubles by Catarrhozone, which is a remarkable proof of its value. Two months' treatment, price $1. Small size 25c. Sold by all druggists or by mail from Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

THE ONTARIO GOVERNMENT AND PROHIBITIONISTS

The Difficulties Which Beset the Administration in Ontario

WHAT WILL THE GOVERNMENT DO ABOUT IT

The Liquor Men are Fighting Hard Against a Referendum—Strong Protests From Prohibitionists

Toronto, Feb. 7.—The question of prohibition is the live one now before the Legislature. It is beginning to look as though the Government was getting into something like a panic on the question. Already five deputations have interviewed the Cabinet on the question. Two of these were from the extreme prohibitionists, one from the liquor dealers, one from the Board of Trade, presumably representing the banking and large financial concerns, and the one the other day of an academic character, pressing the advantages of the Gothenberg system.

It is said that the two last named have come to the Government at the suggestion of the Government itself. Several of the gentlemen on the last deputation are prominent members of the Dominion Alliance. The Cabinet Ministers, it is known, do not agree on the question. The Premier, Mr. Davis and Mr. Harcourt are known as personal prohibitionists. Mr. Gibson, Mr. Stratton and Mr. Latchford are strong antis, and it is believed if they had their way of it there would be no legislation introduced at all, in spite of the Premier's pledges, which, needless to say, are repugnant to them. The referendum has been decided upon, however, but where the pinch comes now is the fact that prohibitionists all over the province are waking up to the gravity of the situation. In other words, they are getting hot. The Government dare not hurt the liquor interests. If the prohibitionists acquire similar strength, the Government's position will be dangerous.

The proposal was made to the Ontario Government, at a private interview by a number of eminent educationists and religious leaders, that the Government, in the event of prohibition being adopted, should own the remaining means of dispensing liquor for medical, scientific, manufacturing, and other purposes. Among those present were Rev. J. A. MacDonald, editor of the Westminster; Dr. Courtice, editor of the Christian Guardian; Dr. Lowrey, John A. Patterson, Prof. Hume, Rev. P. C. Parker, Rev. Prof. Goodspeed, Ald. Urquhart, the Government promised the usual consideration. At the close of the conference, Dr. Courtice said: "The purpose of the deputation was to suggest to the Government that in the proposed legislation relating to the liquor traffic, provision should be made that the sale of intoxicating liquors for permitted purposes should be under direct Government control, and that the principle of Government ownership should be so far introduced into the liquor legislation of this country as to make it apply to the sale of liquors for these purposes under any prohibitory legislation which may be introduced.

"The Manitoba bill throws the permitted traffic entirely into the hands of wholesale and retail druggists, with restricted hours only for wholesalers, but not for retailers."

The question was tentatively raised by the deputation whether such provisions were best in the interests of the enforcement of laws.

A strong presentation was also made of the percentage of the vote on which prohibition had come into effect in several states of the Union, where now it is adopted as a constitutional amendment. In the first instance, the vote showed a small percentage in its favour, but after enforcement it gained in favour, so as to be carried by the necessary two-thirds.

Beyond the shadow of a doubt, Premier Ross will introduce a bill in the Legislature to submit the Liquor Act to the people of the province on the referendum principle. This was definitely stated by a man entrusted with the closest secrets, and in the absolute confidence of the existing administration. He told of a recent caucus in which the Premier declared that a sixty per cent. vote had not yet been decided upon, but that if a strong majority should be deemed necessary, three-fifths would most assuredly be selected, and, of course, the Government will not approve of the law prepared by the legislators of the Prairie Province, but simply say to the electorate, "This measure of prohibition has been favorably passed upon by the Privy Council. It is for you to say whether it shall be placed upon the statute books of Ontario or relegated to oblivion."

FATHER O'SULLIVAN CANED

Presented with an Address and Cane by Members of the C. O. F.

At a special meeting of the Catholic Order of Foresters, on Wednesday evening, the members of the lodge took occasion to present an address and gold-headed cane to Rev. Father O'Sullivan, who, for many years, has been connected with the order, and who has labored energetically to make it a success. The address was read by Mr. Joseph Maher, and was as follows:

Rev. J. F. O'Sullivan

Rev. and Dear Sir,—It was with feelings of deep regret that we, the members of St. Peter's Court, learned that we were about to lose our much revered Chaplain, through your departure from Peterborough. But we cannot allow you to leave without giving you some expression of the deep sense of regret we feel at our loss. And our appreciation and gratitude for the great interest you have taken in the affairs of the Court.

On all occasions you have been most anxious for our welfare, you have always encouraged and exhorted us to the faithful practice of our religious duties, and what is better still, your daily life has been a model of those Christian virtues you have inculcated by your earnest teachings.

We earnestly pray that you may be long spared to perform your priestly office. In conclusion, Rev. and Dear Father, we ask you to accept this cane as a slight token of the esteem in which you are held by the members of St. Peter's Court.

Signed on behalf of St. Peter's Court.

JOSEPH MAHER,
JAMES CLANCY,
JAS. F. BRYSON.

At the conclusion of the address, Mr. James Clancy presented Rev. Father O'Sullivan with a handsome gold-headed cane.

Rev. Father O'Sullivan replied, thanking the members for the present, and the kind wishes expressed in the address. His relations with them had ever been most cordial, and he would look back with pleasant recollections to the time he spent with them.

He is now on furlough, after seeing considerable service in South Africa, where he served under General Buller, and was present at Spion Kop and Colenso on the day of the deadly conflict between Britain and the Boers. He was severely wounded at Spion Kop. Captain Campbell has the distinguished honor of being made member of the Distinguished Service Order. He can relate many very exciting experiences in connection with the present war.

THE ANGLO AMERICAN

A Splendid Showing Made at the Annual Meeting

We heartily congratulate the directors and shareholders of the Anglo-American Insurance Company on the result of the year's operations, as set forth in the financial statement which appears elsewhere in this issue, and which was submitted to the annual meeting of the Company, held at the head office, Toronto, on Tuesday last.

This is the third annual meeting of this young company. The excellent business done during the past year shows that its affairs are being carefully and wisely managed.

The President, Mr. S. F. McKinnon, in moving the adoption of the report, pointed out that insurance rates have increased materially in Canada during the past year, and expressed the opinion that perhaps the rates are not yet high enough in view of the risk assumed, the fire waste throughout the Dominion being very large. This may be true enough when the whole field of insurance is viewed scientifically, but the report shows that that company has done a marvellous business since its organization. The directorate is composed of prominent business men, and Mr. S. F. McKinnon and Mr. J. J. Long, President and Vice-President, attributed much of the success to Mr. Armstrong Dean, the efficient manager, and his competent staff. The company shows a net balance of $31,679.55 for the year. Adding to this the surplus from the previous year, $23,530.78, the company carries forward to profit and loss $55,210.33.

On the board of directors is Mr. Hugh Waddell, of Peterborough, one of our most wealthy, successful and esteemed citizens.

Up to the present time Grippe has been prevalent in every province of our Dominion. Thousands of formerly strong men and healthy women have been laid low and many brought near the gates of death. In a multitude of cases the terrible malady has left poisonous dregs that will in time lead to deadly disease unless great care is exercised.

In former winter seasons when Grippe proved even more severe than at the present time, it was found by physicians that Paine's Celery Compound worked prompt and effective cures for victims of Grippe. After an attack of the dreaded disease, the first great work is to make the blood pure and tone up the weakened nervous system. Paine's Celery Compound does this work as no other medicine can do. It furnishes nervous energy, puts the digestive organs in perfect condition, builds up flesh and tissue, and gives that full measure of strength that guarantees permanent good health. Every weak, enfeebled, and physically shattered man, woman and child should use Paine's Celery Compound at this time. The best test of the curing virtues of the great medicine is the use of one bottle.

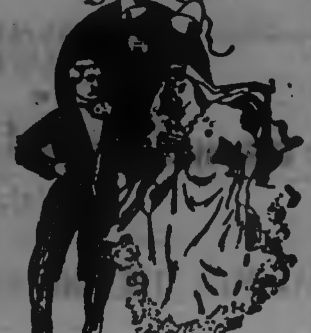
KILLED BY ELECTRIC SHOCK

The Secretary of the Lindsay Y.M.C.A. Meets a Sudden Death

Mr. J. B. Walker, secretary of the Lindsay branch of the Y.M.C.A., met a very sudden and unexpected death yesterday morning. It appears that Mr. Walker was in the cellar making some change in the position of the electric light wires, when he received a very heavy shock which caused instant death. Mr. Walker was well known in Y.M.C.A. circles in town and was highly esteemed by all who knew him. He was a native of Orangeville, and leaves a widow and infant child to mourn his death.

THE NEW YEAR BRIDE

These New Year bells, these New Year bells,
Their clangor echoes far and wide;
Through snow-laid dells
Their triumph swells.
They ring my love a happy bride.
Joy bears each note,
As far they float,
And all the air is filled with pride.



These New Year bells, these New Year bells,
How softly mellow rings their tone!
Their joy it wells
In rhythmic swells,
And dies far on the snowy zone;
And a ripple fair
Runs high in air
That winter's day so fair has grown.

These New Year bells, these New Year bells,
They come by the mountain side,
Through frozen fells,
They weave their spells,
That ring my love a happy bride.
O'er vale and hill
The tremors thrill,
And earth and air is filled with pride.

A Naval Battle on Horseback.

GENERAL PAEZ was the first president of the republic of Venezuela, and to him perhaps, more than to any other man, with the exception of Simon Bolivar, Venezuela owes her independence. Paez was a llanero—cowboy—on the llanos or plains of the Orinoco, and at the age of eighteen was superintendent of a large cattle estate. One of the most remarkable incidents of modern warfare, in which Paez played the principal part, is chronicled in Mr. W. E. Curtis's book on Venezuela.

General Paez is the only man who ever fought a naval battle on horseback. With his cavalry he actually attacked and captured a fleet of ships.

While Bolivar was trying to cross the Apure River with his army, during the struggle for independence, he was prevented by a half-dozen or more of Spanish gunboats, which anchored in the stream and moved up and down as he did.

"I would give the world to have possession of that flotilla," exclaimed he to Paez, who had then risen to be second in command, "for I can never cross the river as long as it is there! If it belonged to us, instead of to the enemy, the crossing would be an easy matter."

"I will have those flecheras (ships) or die!" exclaimed Paez; and, calling upon his llaneros—his regiment of cowboys—he said: "Let those follow Tio who dare!"

"Tio" was the pet name by which Paez was known among his reckless followers, but he never used it himself except in an emergency.

He spurred his stallion into the stream, followed by three thousand llaneros, and their horses, which are taught to swim as well as to gallop carried them directly to the gunboats.

It was night. The Spanish fleet was taken entirely unawares. The llaneros clambered from their saddles to the decks of the vessels, and then let their horses swim back to shore. Thus, after cutting off their own retreat, it was a question of win or die. They fought desperately, and every vessel was captured.

It is not surprising that more people live to be over 100 years old in warm climates than in the higher latitudes. The German Empire, with 55,000,000 inhabitants, has 778 centenarians. France, with 40,000,000, has 213. England has only 146, and Scotland 46. Sweden has 10, Norway 23, Belgium 5, Denmark 2, Spain 401, and Switzerland none. Servia, with a population of 2,250,000, has 575 people over 100 years old. It is claimed that the oldest living person, one Bruno Cotrim, living in Rio de Janeiro, is 150 years old.

Eyes and Nose ran Water.—C. G. Archer, of Brewer, Maine, says: "I have had Catarrh for several years. Water would run from my eyes and nose for days at a time. About four months ago I was induced to try Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder, and since using the wonderful remedy I have not had an attack. It relieves in ten minutes." 50 cents.—17

AN EXCITING EXPERIENCE.

"I had an experience the other day that just about beats anything that ever happened to me," said a well known citizen to a Times man. "I was walking along Stewart street when a woman ran from one of the houses, screaming at the top of her lungs. It was about three o'clock in the afternoon, broad daylight. She saw me and began to beckon frantically. I broke into a run, and when I reached her I asked what was the matter. She was as white as a sheet and shaking like a leaf. 'It's in the kitchen! It's in the kitchen!' she cried; and that was all the satisfaction I could get out of her. She had left the front door open and I went in. She followed close behind me, and from her actions I thought some crime had been committed. I pulled myself together before I entered the kitchen, but there didn't seem to be anything wrong. 'Now, madam,' I said, 'perhaps you will be kind enough to tell me what you are creating all this fuss about.' She pointed to the coal scuttle and gasped, 'It's in there!' I looked, and what do you suppose I saw? A mouse! The scuttle was nearly empty and there were some bread crumbs in the bottom. The mouse had evidently jumped in after the crumbs, and then couldn't climb the sides again. I picked it out by the tail and gave it a rap on the floor. That woman was just as profuse in her thanks as though I had

Crowning English Queens.

"In looking forward to the coronation of King Edward," writes Eleanor Cobby in The London Queen, "we all feel how much of grace and beauty and interest the presence of Queen Alexandra will lend to the splendors of the scene, and, as a rule, most English Queens have been solemnly crowned, whether they reigned in their own right or as wives of royal husbands. To this rule, however, there are seven exceptions. The first was Margaret of France, the young, plain, amiable second wife of Edward I. He had spent so much money in conquering Wales and in trying to conquer Scotland that he could not afford the expense of a coronation for his girl bride, and she had to do without the splendors of the pageant.

King Henry VIII. took care that Anne Boleyn should be crowned with extreme magnificence. He desired to show the world how much he loved her and how very much he defied the Bishop of Rome. The four wives who succeeded her were never crowned at all. For one thing, money ran short, and for another, there may have lurked, even in his masterful mind, a sense of the 'fitness of things' which may have caused him to shrink from publicly crowning so many ladies in such rapid succession. At any rate, the beloved Jane Seymour, the despised Anne of Cleves, the girlish Catherine Howard and the wary Catherine Parr were never consecrated in public as Queen-consorts of England.

"Henrietta Maria, wife of Charles I., refused to be crowned. She was young, she was pretty, she was a French Princess and a bigoted Roman Catholic, and she declined to take part in a State function which would compel her to partake of the Sacrament according to Church of England rites.

"Sophia Dorothea of Zell cannot be reckoned amongst the seven, because she was never called Queen of England at all. While George I. was being crowned, and anointed and—bored, the Lady of Ahlden was pining in her long monotonous captivity.

"Caroline of Brunswick is the last and most remarkable instance of the uncrowned English Queens. Though George IV. had been forced from popular indignation to give up the bill of pains and penalties against her, nothing would induce him to let her share his coronation. She was not permitted to be present in Westminster Abbey at all. Repulsed from all the entrances, she returned to her house, to die within three weeks of a violent fever, brought on by months of fearful excitement. The strained cord snapped. The brave heart was broken at last."

A Colored Mayor.

There is one colored Mayor in the United States—Isiah T. Montgomery the wealthiest man in Mound Bayou, Miss. Leslie's Weekly discovered him recently and has furnished a sketch of his very interesting career:—

"Mr. Montgomery came into prominence several months ago at the convention of colored men held in Chicago, where his views upon the negro question elicited much admiration. His career has been one of unusual interest, as he was born a slave on the plantation of Jefferson Davis in Mississippi. Noticing the boy's brightness, the late President of the Confederacy made him a sort of body servant, and he was taught to read and write. With this start he practically educated himself, and when the slaves on the Davis plantation were liberated Montgomery started north to earn his living. He accumulated a few thousand dollars and, returning to Mississippi, conceived the idea of founding a town for the industrious members of his own race who could obtain work from the whites, and who were unsuccessful in working for themselves. He leased plots of ground which he had purchased at a low rental, with the result that negro families flocked to this portion of Mississippi from all portions of the Gulf States. To-day the town has a population of nearly 1,000, contains several important industries, as well as churches and schools. It is what might be called a one-man town, for the Mayor has planned and carried out about everything of importance in it. It is the market for a section of the country fifty to seventy-five miles around it, and one of the most important railway stations on the Illinois Central."

Jerusalem's Water Supply.

To a Greek engineer, Mr. Franghia, is due the long-delayed inauguration of a new water supply for Jerusalem. Time was when the Holy City was well supplied with water, as, indeed, all ancient cities were. Solomon's Pool was one of the ancient sources, or rather reservoirs, for into it were discharged four fountains and aqueducts from two more distant sources. From the Pool two aqueducts ran into the city, known as the high-level and low-level aqueducts. The former of these long ago ceased to be available, but the latter has done duty in a perfunctory sort of way from Bethlehem. From that place a new four-inch iron pipe has now been laid in as direct a line as possible, over hill and valley, and it was the turning on of the water thus delivered in the city that was celebrated in November. All Jerusalem assisted at the glad event. The pipe delivers the water at two points—the Haram or Temple area, were it will be available to Moslems only, and at the fountain erected in the Valley of Hamom by Sultan Suleiman Ibn Selim in the sixteenth century. Here the water will be free to all, Christian, Moslem and Jew. The ceremony of the inauguration in the Temple area—the Great Mosque of Omar—was quite simple. The Pasha and the authorities assembled early in the morning, and after a short religious service the nine brass taps inserted in the last section of the piping were turned on. The water will eventually be let into the great fountain called El Kas. The officials tasted the water, the band played, and the people cheered after their fashion. At the other outlet, which was inaugurated in the afternoon, the public attended in large numbers, and the place was made gay with garlands and flags. The Pasha having declared the supply open, the taps were turned on, and there was a general rush for the water which had been brought so wonderfully and incomprehensively up the steep Valley of Hannam. The siphon action in hydraulics is not a thing which enters into the calculations of even the most learned of Syrians and Turks. Henceforth, then, the Holy City will be in no danger of the water famine which has often afflicted it. The Pasha and the municipality had done their best, and at the beginning of the year arranged for water being brought up by train in large tanks. An iron pipe and a little science have now done what the Turks and their tanks could not do, and Jerusalem is rejoicing over the boon of living water.

There are people who say that the benefit derived from the use of put-up medicines is imaginary. It is not the case with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, which makes weak women strong and sick women well. A woman may imagine she's weak, or may fancy she's sick, but her imagination can't add forty pounds to her weight. The positive proof of the curative power of "Favorite Prescription" is found in the restoration of health which is recorded in face and form, of strength which can be tested, and weight which can be registered in pounds and ounces.

The general health of women is so intimately connected with the local health of the womanly organs that when these are diseased the whole body suffers loss. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription cures womanly diseases. It establishes regularity, stops weakening drains, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness.

"I am very glad to let other poor sufferers know what Dr. Pierce's medicines have done for me," writes Mrs. Edwin H. Gardner, of Beechwood, Norfolk Co., Mass. (Box 70.) "You know I wrote to you last summer. I read what your medicine had done for other people, so thought I would try it, and I found it was a blessing to me and my family. I began in June and took six bottles of your medicine, and three vials of 'Pellets.' I took your medicine a year when I had a ten-pound girl. I had the easiest time I ever had with any of my three children. I have been very well since I took your medicine. I took three bottles of 'Favorite Prescription,' three of 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and three vials of 'Pellets.' I had no appetite and could not eat much without it distressing me before I took your 'Favorite Prescription,' and I only weighed 135 pounds. Now I weigh 175."

Curious Bit of News.

Dr. G. L. Johnson, whose studies of the eyes of mammals have recently been published, calls attention to the fact that men and monkeys alone possess parallel and convergent vision of the two eyes. On the other hand, the lower mammals possess divergent and consequently very widely extended vision. Squirrels, for instance, and probably hares and rabbits as well, are able to see an enemy approaching directly from behind without turning the head.

The Bargain of the Future.

AN honest man entered the store of a clothier one day, and in reply to the query as to what could be done for him on that particular occasion, he assumed a humble pose and replied:

"Sir, I wish to furnish you proof that I am what I am."

"I cannot doubt your honesty," said the clothier, "but still proofs are proofs, and you may submit your documents."

"Do you remember that I was in your store six months ago?"

"Alas! I do not; but you look like a man of truth, and I will not gainsay you."

"I was here, sir, and bought this suit of clothes of you. It had been marked down from fifteen dollars to eight dollars and fifty cents."

"Yes, I recognize the cloth, and I grieve to think that I lost six dollars and fifty cents on that suit. I had to mark them down to make room for the quick-lunch business on the other side."

"You warranted the dye," continued the honest man, "and there has been no fading or crocking. I cannot say that you lied to me."

"And the price was right?"

"It was. I hug the delusion that I found a bargain."

"Then what is the cause of thy complaint?"

"It is no complaint, oh, clothier. It is that after I had got miles away I found a ten-dollar bill in the trousers pocket."

"A ten-dollar bill in the pocket of an eight-dollar-and-fifty-cent suit," mused the clothier. "Here, Ikey, come forward and explain."

"I—I was tempted," said the young man, as he trembled before his employer.

"So? Then it was you who substituted a ten for a twenty, and made this honest man a journey to get his just dues? Go, bring me a new, crisp ten, and later on I will see to your case."

"I would not that he come to poverty," said the honest man.

"He shall not, but I will stop it out of his wages and humble him to the dust. I always give a twenty-dollar bill with every eight-dollar-and-fifty-cent suit, and here is your balance. Take it, sir, with many apologies; and if I have put you to any expense, remember that all my eighteen-dollar overcoats have been marked down to nine dollars and a fifty-dollar bill placed in each pocket to close them out quickly and make room for a chicken-farm in the rear end of the store."—Detroit "Free Press."

A Remarkable Shot.

"HELLO, Ike!" said Perkins, as that individual walked into the store. "How'd you make out gunnin' to-day?"

"Tole'ble, jest tole'ble; that's all. I got four black ducks, six broad-bill, and ten winters."

"I must say that's pretty good shootin' for one day," said Perkins.

"'Twas putty fair; but I should have got more yet if my shells hadn't gin out."

"That so?" said the constable. "'Twas hard luck and 'minds me o' one day 'bout four year ago, when I went down tu the medders gunnin' with thet old muzzle-loader er mine. I fooled 'round all day, till I had only one charge of powder left. Birds had been comin' 'long, one in a flock, and now and then tew lone ones, and all of 'em out er range, and I didn't git a bird. I was kinder discouraged; hadn't had a good shot all day. But just as I was gittin' out of the stand I heard a goose hollerin', and I crouched down quick, I can tell yer, and purty soon he landed plump down in the slough-hole in front of me, where my decoys was. I was just tu the south of the deacon's medder—you fellers remember how the marsh there is very narrer and runs right clus up to the beach—and my stand was just abreast of thet low place on the beach they call the blow-hole. Wa-al, I moved 'round keerful, and got a bead on the old goose, when he must have smelt me, fer jest as I was goin' tu let him hev it he begun swimmin' away from me. I didn't want tu lose him, so I begun to whistle him back, and, if you'll believe me, as I was a-sittin' there, what should I see comin' up by the blow-hole but a red fox. Boys, I'd hev given my hull farm for another charge of powder and shot thet minute, I guess. The goose by this time had circled round and begun tu come towards me agin, and the fox was a-standin' still. Gradually the old goose was gittin' in line with thet fox. 'By thunder!' 's I, 'if I can git 'em in a line there's a chance of gittin' 'em both.' In another minute they was right in line, and I let 'em have it. Just as I fired, a bluefish jumped out of the water from a school on 'em thet was chasin' bait inshore. I shot the goose plum through the head, lamed the fox so he couldn't run, and killed thet bluefish as he drifted ashore, and I got the hull three."

"Boys," said Perkins solemnly, "if you'll step into the back room I'll set up the cider."—"Judge."

What He Came For.

A learned judge who was one of the guests at a dinner was unexpectedly called upon to reply to a toast. Recovering somewhat from his surprise, he said that his situation reminded him of the story of a man who fell into the water while he was fishing.

With no little difficulty he was rescued, and after he had regained his breath and was in a fairly comfortable condition, his rescuer asked him how he came to fall into the water.

"I did not come to fall into the water," replied the unfortunate fisherman. "I came to fish."

Misconceptions.

"A good story comes from Sydney," says the London "Globe," "where letters have been received from two American business firms asking whether communications to Australian merchants should be written in English or 'in the language of the country.' It recalls an astonishing trade circular received a short time ago by a business firm in Glasgow from a German manufacturer, also written in what his versatile clerk had apparently taken for the language of the country. It was in the best 'kailyard' style, and spoke of a 'muckle consignment o' shoon-thing.'"

Ever since the Forth bridge was opened—eleven years ago—painting has gone on continuously, according to the "Mechanical Engineer." "Beginning at the south end, the workmen take three years to cover the entire length of the bridge, and, as three years represents approximately the life of the paint, no sooner are they finished than the men have to begin again. In this way every square inch of steel comes under observation at least once in three years. The staff of men employed varies in number from the maximum of 25."

A Woman's Plea For Man's Rights.

THE papers had a story the other day that the President had refused promotion to an army officer because he had jilted his fiancee. Whether this is true or not, it's interesting. The President is a chivalrous man, and whatever he did really do about the officer's promotion, we may be sure that he condemned him for his ungallant behavior to the lady. Most men would condemn him. To go back on your best girl—especially when the wedding-cards are printed and the trousseau ready—is an offence few men would condone. Singularly enough, women—who are the sufferers by it—are very lenient to this infirmity of purpose.

I have often heard girls say, writes Josephine Bonner in the "Argonaut," that they would rather be jilted than married to a man who had lost his affection for them, and I think they told the truth. When Pope said every woman was at heart a rake he expressed his idea in coarse, eighteenth century English. What he meant to say was that every woman is at heart a sentimentalist. However fate and fortune may make her marry, she has her little dream of marrying for love. Presupposing that she is a "nice girl," she would rather be left like Ariadne than go on into the dark and unexplored places of matrimony with a man who no longer cared for her. I am inclined to think her respect for the man would not suffer much—might possibly increase—if he had the temerity to rise up and tell her he had made a mistake and did not love her. Women have been doing this themselves since Pandora opened the box, and nobody blamed them. It was a lady's privilege to change her mind, and that settled it. Maybe we are beginning to feel that the privilege is a little one-sided, and that down-trodden man ought now and then to have a holiday when he, too, can have caprices and not know whether he loves Polly or Sally best.

There is another point in his favor which the men who condemn him do not consider—the courage it takes. It takes nerve to head a cavalry charge in battle, to stand up in a duel, to enter a burning building, but it is nothing to the nerve it must take to look a loving woman in the eye and tell her you don't care for her. Men have not been doing this for centuries as women have, and they do not really understand the fell horror of it. I have no doubt many have gone so far as the front door, or even the hat-rack in the hall, fully intending to break their fetters; then, at the sound of a foot on the stairs, a frou-frou of skirts, have felt their courage oozing away, and decided a lifetime of living a lie was better than dealing one decisive, staggering blow. I don't know whether they were heroes, knaves, or fools—one often is confused in such decisions. Men, I think, would approve of them; women would be sentimentally harrowed, and in their hearts be just a little contemptuous.

The heroism of the situation would depend entirely on how the man acted for the next—say, twenty years. Anybody can be heroic for a moment; time is the test of the real thing. It would seem one of those noble, foolish actions, like the charge of the Light Brigade, which would be pitiful if they were not grand—to spend a lifetime living such a futile lie. It would be so little worth while, so little gain, for such a large expenditure of suffering. Whereas, if the man were not of the mould of heroes, let his wife see he had married her under protest, and that she bored him to death—what would be the gain then? Even if she had not a grain of pride, the woman could hardly be happy with such begrudged attentions and ungrateful companionship. As for the man, he would brood on his wrongs and bemoan his one moment of unselfishness, till a bear with a sore head would be an amiable companion compared to him. In the general distribution of new twentieth century privileges, I don't see why the right to change the mind in matters sentimental should not be now and then extended to the male of the species.

Makes his living by tillage,
Does the doctor who pills
Make his living by pillage?

The Origin of a Name.

DR. GEORGE DAVIDSON of the University of California has been wondering for four years past how Cape Nome got its name. Geography is his special field, and it is his professional concern to know the wherefore of geographical names. But "Nome" beat him. He set to work to trace it back to its origin, and the earliest appearance he could find for it was in a British Admiralty chart of 1853. That led him to surmise that the cape was named by officers of the English frigates "Herald" and "Plover" during an expedition in search of Sir John Franklin. So he wrote to the Admiralty Office in London to enquire if there were any "Nomes" on the list of men who sailed in those vessels. The reply, recently communicated by Dr. Davidson to the "National Geographic Magazine," was that when the chart in question was first made, aboard the "Herald," attention was called to this point by the mark (?Name). The chart was sent home in a hurry, and the draughtsman who inked it made the mark read "C. Name." But he did not make his "a" distinctly, and the Admiralty hydrographer made it "C. Nome." And so Cape Nome the point has been ever since, and is likely to remain so until it gets rich enough to support a board of aldermen. Then its name will be changed, for that is one of the mischiefs that aldermen can be trusted to do.

"Why did we arrive late and leave before the opera was over?" asked the youngest daughter; "it was very enjoyable." "Of course it was," answered Mrs. Cumrox, "but, my dear, we had to show people that we didn't care whether we got our money's worth or not."—Washington "Star."

Curious Bits of News.

The first monument ever erected to a cook is about to be inaugurated in Paris. The chef in question is Urbain Dubois, who labored in the German Emperor's kitchen.

A new volume of reminiscences by Dean Hole quotes the following extraordinary prayer as offered by a loyal but certainly injudicious English clergyman on behalf of Queen Adelaide, the wife of William IV.: "Oh Lord, save Thy servant, our sovereign lady, the queen; grant that as she grows an old woman she may become a new man; strengthen her with Thy blessing that she may live a pure virgin, bringing forth sons and daughters to the glory of God, and give her grace that she may go forth before her people like a he goat on the mountains."

Certain creeds seem to monopolize certain industries. Practically all British manufacturers of cocoa, for example, are Quakers. In London a very large percentage of cigar merchants and all the best-known manufacturers of Christmas cards are Jews. Whenever a Welshman goes to London to seek his fortune it is long odds on his making his pile either in the draper's or drug store business. Irishmen, probably owing to the fact that they lack the money-making instinct, flock to journalism.

Gasolene is, it appears, the fuel most suitable for submarines; but human sensations give no sure warning when its collected fumes are becoming dangerous. White mice, however, are said to be extremely sensitive to this poison, and perish incontinently before human beings begin to suffer the slightest ill-effects. So in all submarines of the future cages full of white mice are to be kept on the floor, whence the heavy emanations gradually rise, and it will always be someone's duty to go round and see how the mice are getting on.

Much interest attaches to the recent discovery at Combarelles, in the department of Dordogne, France, of a cave the rock walls of which are decorated with engraved figures, some of which are rudely colored, representing such animals as the horse, the cow, the bison, the reindeer, the mammoth and the wild goat. Most of these pictures, which number more than 100, are covered with a stalagmitic deposit, partially or entirely concealing them. It is believed that they were made in paleolithic times, and that they furnish evidence that the reindeer and the mammoth lived in France contemporaneously with the artists of the cavern.

It is a curious fact that the present session of the United States Congress contains no negro member. With the exception of a brief period from 1887 to 1889, this is the first session in thirty-two years when this has been the case. The first colored man to be sent to Congress was J. Willis Menard of New Orleans, who was elected to fill a vacancy in 1868. In 1870 Hiram R. Revels took his seat in the Senate, the first negro to be seated in that body. Blanche K. Bruce was the only other negro to enter the Senate. The Forty-Fourth Congress, which sat from 1875 to 1877, may be called the black Congress, since there were eight members in both branches.

There is an historical reason for the baneful repute of the opal. Two or three centuries ago the stone was popular in Europe, and the jewelers of Italy were especially cunning in its setting. At the height of its popularity came the plague, which made havoc in Venice. It was noticed by some observant person in that city that when a victim was at the point of death, his opal, if he wore one, brightened, while after death it became dull. As this accession of brilliance implied a sort of malignant purpose or intelligence in the stone, it was charged with the death of its owner. It never occurred to the scientists of that time to turn the incident around the other way, and see if the patient had anything to do with the opal. But that was the way of it: the heightened fever just before death caused the stone, which is affected by heat, to become more brilliant, and the chill and damp afterward dulled it.

Rest.

Ah thought of infinite pity—
To sleep an aeon or two,
With never a care or sorrow,
And with never aught to do
But to rest, to rest, forgetting
We ever have sobbed or cried;
Forgetting that those who love us
And those whom we love have died.

A Practical View.

Struggling pastor—The collections have fallen off terribly. Practical wife—It's that new vestryman who passes the plate; he never watches what people put in.—"New York Weekly."

A Fashionable Sham.

A SHORT time after Mme. Sybil Sanderson's first debut in New York, when the papers were ringing with praises of her jewels, her beauty and her voice, she was the guest of honor at a dinner-party, at which her hostess remarked: "Those jewels that you wore in 'Manon,' Miss Sanderson, are the most beautiful that I have ever seen." "Good heavens!" cried Miss Sanderson, "you didn't think that they were real, did you? These are only stage jewels. If they had been real, I would deserve all that the American papers have said about me."

"The New York "Sun" declares that fashionable women are at present wearing quantities of false jewels cleverly made, and perfectly set in gold in simulation of the real article. One of the pictures of the Duchess of Manchester which was printed in the newspapers showed her wearing a pearl necklace which was said to be "the famous Manchester pearls." This claim was knocked in the head only the other day when a New York firm of manufacturers of imitation jewels began a suit against the duke for something like six hundred dollars for this very necklace for which his grace had failed to pay. "It has only been within the last few seasons," adds the "Sun," "that this vogue of artificial jewelry has become fixed. . . The possession of genuine pearls, for instance, is possible only to the very few, for necklaces of well-matched pearls are worth small and even large fortunes. Many of the most perfectly matched ropes have taken years in their accumulation, while others are heirlooms that have passed from one generation to another in the royal families of Europe. When the pearl necklace became so fashionable in America there was a demand for them that could not be supplied, and now nine-tenths of the beautiful ropes that are worn are false. The new imitation pearls are indistinguishable from the real except under a glass and to the eye of an expert. They are perfect in shape, finish, color, and the wonderful satiny surface that gives the pearl its beauty. . . . The diamond imitations are only effective at night, for this stone is one which most successfully defies the art of imitation. A counterfeit pearl takes an expert for its detection, while any one at all accustomed to handling diamonds can readily discover the imitation stone. The Paris makers are sending to this country now some very clever products in this line, the settings being artistic, and the stones tiny and closely set. These are extremely effective at night, and are worn for stage purposes by many actresses who are famous for their so-called diamond collections. These imitations are not cheap. On the contrary, they are constantly advancing in price. For hair ornaments the imitation stones are in much demand. There are some who say that they really outglisten the genuine diamond under the electric light. But they are impossible for wear in the daylight, and by no means approach the degree of perfection to which the pearl counterfeit has been brought."

Dinner at a Hundred Dollars a Plate.

ONE of the most remarkable private dinners in the history of Delmonico's was given in New York lately by Mr. George Kaye. For the pleasure of entertaining nine guests from fifteen minutes past seven o'clock until half-past ten o'clock, Mr. Kaye transformed the Red Room of Delmonico's into a miniature bower in a pine forest, and spread before them a repast which cost him about one hundred dollars for each of the ten covers laid. Hundreds of pine-boughs had been brought from the woods, and these were so adjusted upon the walls, ceiling and floor of the apartment as to completely conceal their original character. Invisible wires were stretched through them and connected with hundreds of small incandescent electric light globes, which peeped out from the green boughs on walls and ceiling. Each globe was shaped like an orchid, and shone with a pale-green light that lent reality to the semblance of the rare, woodland flower. Over the crash that covered the floor had been strewn pine-boughs, tangles of thick woodland moss, and bushels of autumn leaves in all their rich tints of scarlet, yellow and gray. A round table, eight feet in diameter, made of unfinished oak, rose from the litter of moss and leaves, and its stout legs were completely covered with green and gray moss. Ranged around the table were the ten chairs, each of which, especially built for this occasion, was made of black birch-boughs, fashioned in varied rustic designs and with the bark left on the surface. The center of the table was a mound of maiden-hair fern, moss and oak-leaves in their autumnal tints. Twenty or thirty electric globes, like those peeping from the walls, were arranged among the ferns and mosses in the center of the table, and in front of each cover was a cluster of thirty of the rarest of natural green orchids that the hothouses of New York could supply. There was no other illumination of the room than that furnished by the green globes of the small electric lights, and the effect was like that of twilight in a pine forest. The name-cards for each guest were painted on oak-leaves, and the menus on squares of white birch-bark about ten by seven inches in size. The wines were all of the rarest and most expensive vintages.

Trapped.

Theodore—It's all right, darling. I have met your father, and we took to one another at once. He even went so far as to borrow ten dollars of me. Surely, he can't refuse me your hand after that.

Edith—Dory, I'm afraid you've made a mess of it. Pa told me about the ten dollars, and said I'd better let you slide; that you were too easy.—Boston "Transcript."

Messenger-boy—Is this Mr. Ernest Seton-Thompson's, or Mr. Ernest Thompson-Seton's, or Mr. Thompson-Seton's, or Mr. Ernest Thoton-Sheompson's? Maid—Wait a minute, can't you. He didn't say what it would be to-day. I'll go and ask him.—Cleveland "Plain Dealer."

A school inspector, having a few minutes to spare after examining the school, put a few questions to the lower form boys on the common objects in the schoolroom.

"What is the use of that map?" he asked, pointing to one stretched across the corner of the room; and half a dozen shrill voices answered, in measured articulation:

"It's to hide the teacher's bicycle, sir"—"Wasp."

THE
Patented March 10th, 1894,
BY
Geo. Brousseau, Quebec.

For hard and soft coal, coke or peat. The only stove without grate and possessing a tube for gas escape.

DESCRIPTION

The Star is the latest and best stove in the market for slow combustion—why? The inside is lined with fire brick all in one piece and so mounted to the outer shell. No danger of breaking or loss of pieces.

The Star has a tube behind for the escape of the gas. As anyone who uses soft coal knows, the gas accumulates under the fresh coal, and if there is no escape there will be explosions and puffs of smoke. In the Star this disappears in the gas escape. The Star has a sliding damper and ornamental door of mica.

After being filled, the Star will heat for 48 hours without attention. It will hold fire and give out heat longer than any other stove.

The Star is 25 per cent more economical than any other stove.

MORE THAN 4,000 ARE IN USE IN THE LOWER PROVINCES.

Coal Consumers, Attention

We certify that we have in use one No. 3 "Star" stove in our large pool and billiard rooms the size of which is 45 by 25 feet, with 15 feet ceiling. We have perfect heat, and the most coal we have used on the coldest day yet has been 3 scuttles in twenty-four hours. We are so well pleased with the stove that we would not use any other.

ROCAMORA & CALLAHAN.

I have been using a No. 3 STAR stove in the sitting room at the City Hotel for some time past, and it has proved so satisfactory that I have ordered two more to replace two stoves in the upstairs. The Star gives more heat than the other stoves with half the amount of coal,

MARTIN CONNORS.

We have in use in our Composing Room a No. 3 Star coal stove and wish to state that it is giving eminent satisfaction. The entire absence of gas by the escape provided, the increase of heat and the saving in coal are special features of the Star, and it requires a minimum of attention.

TIMES PRINTING CO.

We are using one No. 3 "Star" stove in our large rooms where formerly we had four large wood heaters, and get more heat now than before. The wood stoves cost us $2.00 every week for fuel and the Star stove, which we are now using, costs us only $1.00, making a saving of $1 per week in the price of fuel—which would soon pay for the stove. We can recommend this stove to any person wanting a first-class heater. We would not use any other stove that is made.

Cancer Growing Two Years

A Remarkable Case Cured Completely by the New Constitutional Remedy.

Not long ago, we had the pleasure of receiving the following letter:

"When I began your treatment there was a hard lump in my breast, which had been growing for two years, and it was so bad at last that it drew the nipple in. I consulted two doctors, and they both pronounced it cancer, and advised me to have my breast cut off. Your remedy, however, was recommended to me by a friend, and I am very thankful to say that it not only saved my life, but did away with the necessity of having to undergo the painful operation, which I so much dreaded."

Diamond Dyes Are Found In Every Land Where Civilization Has Been Brought

REFUSE ALL IMITATIONS

No other dyes of whatever name, can for a moment compare with the Diamond Dyes in purity, strength, brilliancy and fastness of color. They are the world's favorites, easily leading wherever civilization is found. Diamond Dyes are the only dyes that can meet the expectations of the most critical and careful women. They are always fast to soap and sunlight, indeed frequent washing improves and brightens the colors. Many imitators copy the style and package of Diamond Dyes. Beware of all package dyes that do not bear the name, "Diamond Dyes."

Neuralgia Almost Drives People Mad

Only those who have suffered it, know of the darting, distracting pains and aches neuralgia inflicts. Ordinary remedies don't even relieve. It requires an extraordinarily strong, penetrating liniment to drive out the pain. To get relief get Polson's Nerviline into the spot. Pain can't resist Nerviline, which has five times the strength of any other liniment. Drives out neuralgia in half an hour. Never fails! Never harms! Always successful. Try a large 25c. bottle.

Mr. Fair Explains

Mr. Wm. Fair, who was a candidate for Water Commissioner, and who was badly snowed under on Monday, has at last discovered the cause of his defeat. Being a comparative stranger in town, he says that many ratepayers thought it was his cousin Robert was running. This explanation doesn't satisfy this great family journal nor do we think it will satisfy the public. Had Mr. Robert Fair been a candidate his election would have been assured, for he would have had the unanimous support of the "fair" sex, (with whom, by the way, he is a great favorite), and the Olympic Club, backed by all the power and influence of this g.f.j.

Basket Social

A basket social was held last night in the Foresters Hall on George street, under the auspices of Companion Court Queen, I.O.F. The commodious rooms were well filled by a very attentive audience. A program consisting of readings, songs, etc., was run off, after which the baskets were disposed of to the highest bidder. Mr. Geo. W. Powell occupied the chair in a most pleasing and satisfactory manner. The baskets were all disposed of, and a considerable sum of money realized from the sale. The evening was pleasantly spent, and altogether the event was a success.

WASN'T CURED

Didn't Get Well of Anything.

"I spent three weeks with a friend in Dayton last winter. She was using Postum Coffee exclusively as a beverage at meals. I said, 'I thought you were so fond of coffee that you could not be induced to give it up.' 'Well,' my friend said, 'we got to liking this Postum Coffee for it serves as a food as well as a beverage, and we have all felt so much better since leaving off the old coffee.'

"I learned to make the Postum and made it fine, so when I went home I began to serve it to my husband instead of the old-fashioned coffee. About a week afterwards I asked him how he liked the coffee, and told him I had been trying a new kind. He says, 'I think it is most excellent. Is it Mocha or Java or a mixture?' I told him that it was the famous Postum we had read so much about and he most jumped from his chair in surprise, but the change has become a fixture and he will never give up Postum and go back to the old-fashioned coffee, for we not only like it better, but we feel so much better in every way." Anglo-American Fire Insurance Co.

REPORT OF DIRECTORS

Presented at the Third Annual Meeting of Shareholders, Held at the Head Office of the Company, McKinnon Building, Toronto, on Tuesday, the Fourth Day of February, 1902.

Your Directors take pleasure in presenting their report and the statement of the Company's business for the year ending December 31st, 1901.

We are pleased to be in a position to state that the results from the extension of the Company's business to the other Provinces, which had only been partially arranged at the close of last year, have been most satisfactory, and we confidently look forward to a large increase of business during the present year.

The fire losses in Canada for the past year have been above the average and your Directors therefore regard the surplus of $34,261.12 on the year's business as most satisfactory, bringing up the Company's balance at the credit of Profit and Loss Account since organization, as it does, to the handsome sum of $55,219.28.

The one prominent salient fact in the year's developments is that the insuring public are no longer content with the rates fixed by the Tariff offices, and it is pleasing to note the favorable character of the Company's prospects, notwithstanding the efforts of some representatives of the Tariff Companies to discredit the workings off this Office by spreading broadcast throughout Canada misleading and anonymous literature published in New York City.

Your Directors have much pleasure in expressing their appreciation of the faithful manner in which the Manager, Office Staff, General Agents, and Representatives of the Company have discharged their duties.

S. F. McKINNON, President.

ARMSTRONG DEAN, General Manager.

To the President, Directors, and Shareholders of the Anglo-American Fire Insurance Company:

Gentlemen,—We, the undersigned, having examined the vouchers, checked the bank balances, and audited the books of the Anglo-American Fire Insurance Company for the year ending 31 December, 1901, certify that we have found them correct, and that the annexed Balance Sheet is a true statement as at above date.

J. P. LANGLEY,
RICHARD LEE
Auditors.

Memo.—The outstanding losses referred to above, amounting to $3,409.72 have since adjusted and paid, with the exception of $250 not yet adjusted.

J. P. LANGLEY,
RICHARD LEE,
Auditors.

Toronto, 28th January, 1902.

In moving the adoption of the report the President, S. F. McKinnon, Esq., said: I am again glad to welcome so many of the shareholders of the Anglo-American Fire Insurance Company at our annual meeting, showing, as it does, the strong interest taken in the affairs of the Company.

The report for the year closing with the 31st of December, 1901, together with the Revenue and Profit and Loss Accounts, I think, deals very fully with the Company's affairs.

You will notice that the Revenue Account has very materially increased, the gross premium income of the year just closed being $226,921.97, as against $194,720.12 for the previous year, or a gain of $32,201.85.

The net gain on the year's operations was $34,261.12, and after writing 33 1-3 per cent. off organization expenses and 10 per cent. off office furniture, the balance, $31,379.50, was carried to Profit and Loss Account, which, added to the surplus at the close of the year 1900, makes $55,219.28 at the credit of Profit and Loss Account.

The cash assets of the Company now stand at $140,573.36, as against $126,-899.76 for the year previous, showing a gain in this item of $13,673.60.

For the security of the policy-holders of the Company we now have as follows:

Amount paid capital stock	$85,160 00
At credit of Profit and Loss Account	55,219 28
Uncalled capital subscribed	386,940 00
Making in all	$527,319 28

It is gratifying to note the marked degree of prosperity now prevailing in all parts of the Dominion. Increased prosperity means a larger amount of fire insurance to be written. It has not been the aim of your Directors to reach a large volume so much as to diffuse the risks and keep expenses on a low basis. Insurance rates have increased materially during the past year. It is very doubtful if the rates are yet adequate to the risks being carried. The fire waste in the Dominion is still very large.

Your Directors have much pleasure in stating that the Manager, Mr. Dean, and the staff have given their best services in the interests of the Company.

I have now great pleasure in moving the adoption of the report.

In seconding the adoption of the report John J. Long, Esq., Vice-President, said: Mr. President and Gentlemen: It affords me great pleasure to second the motion of the President for the adoption of the report of the Directors, the financial statement and auditors' report of the business of the Company for the past year ending the 31st of December.

Considering the great fire waste that has taken place in the year 1901 I consider the result of the business of this Company for that year highly satisfactory, and this is almost wholly due to the able management of Mr. Dean and to the efficient and loyal staff assisting him, and to the energy, care, and loyalty of the Company's agents throughout Canada.

We all know how necessary it is to have the loyal and energetic co-operation of all concerned in the working of any business to make it successful, and in this great essential to success I feel the Anglo-American Fire Insurance Company is most fortunate, as I believe every person connected with the Company in whatever capacity acts with as much earnestness as if the entire success of the Company depended on individual exertion.

The prospects of the Company for the ensuing year are bright, and I confidently hope for even a better showing at the close of 1902 than for the past year.

Messrs. McLaughlin and McIntosh, who were appointed scrutineers, reported the following gentlemen elected as Directors for the ensuing year: S. F. McKinnon, Esq., S. F. McKinnon & Co., Toronto; J. J. Long, Esq., the T. Long and Brother Company, Collingwood; A. A. Allan, Esq., Messrs. A. A. Allan & Co., Toronto; John R. Barber Esq., President Toronto Paper Company of Cornwall, Georgetown; Dr. George H. Bowlby, Berlin; A. B. Cunningham, Esq., Barrister, Kingston; H. P. Eckardt, Esq., Messrs. H. P. Eckardt & Co., Toronto; John Flett, Esq., Flett, Lowndes & Co. (limited), Toronto; John Gowans, Esq., Messrs. Gowans, Kent & Co. Toronto; W. J. Gage, Esq., the W. J. Gage Company (limited), Toronto; John Knox, Esq., Messrs. Knox, Morgan & Co., Hamilton; R. Millichamp, Esq., Messrs. Millichamp, Coyles & Co., Toronto; J. N. Shenstone, Esq., Secretary-Treasurer Massey-Harris Company (limited), Dr. Uriah M. Stanley, Brantford; Hugh Waddell, Esq., Peterborough.

At a meeting of the newly-elected Board of Directors Messrs. S. F. McKinnon and John J. Long were elected President and Vice-President respectively.

GERMANY COVETS THE CHINESE MINERALS

She Has Revived Negotiations for Mining Privileges in the Province of Shan Tung

GREAT BRITAIN WILL RETAIN WEI HAI WEI

Pessimistic Tone Tone as to German Commerce Adopted by the Report of the Berlin Guild

London, Feb. 7.—The Pekin correspondent of The Times announces the revival of German negotiations for mining privileges in the Shan Tung province of China, which is marvellously rich. The German claims are conceded, but China demands a contract for twenty-five years, with one-quarter of the royalties. Germany wants a hundred years' contract, and is only willing to give five per cent. in royalties.

London, Feb. 7.—The European editor of the New York Herald says The Daily Mail report of the abandonment of Wei Hai Wei is without foundation. Upon good authority, he says, the port will be held for the use of the British fleet in China seas.

London, Feb. 7.—The British Admiralty reports that successful experiments have been conducted in coaling battleships at sea by the new appliances, and that the problem is considered to be solved.

London, Feb. 7.—The report of the Berlin Merchants' Guild for last year is reviewed in the commercial papers. The tone of the report is pessimistic. German exports increased by eighteen million dollars, on account of the small home demand, necessitating a disposal of goods abroad at a loss. In Berlin one-fourth of the employes of the machine and electric shops have been discharged.

Matjesfontein, Cape Colony, Feb. 7.—Lourens Erasmus, better known under the name of Commandant Marais, has been captured in the neighborhood of Laingsburg. Marais was the leader of the Boers who operated in the Zwart Kop range in 1901.

The St. Petersburg correspondent of The Times says Novoe Vremya comments on the Dutch-British communications in a spirit which seems to indicate that the official desire to cultivate friendly relations with Great Britain is not without effect. Novoe Vryma recognises that the tone of the British note is extremely friendly towards the Boers, but makes the mistake of thinking that this shows weakening in the British Government's attitude.

PHILLIPINE'S WANT PEACE WAR NEARING AN END

Governor Taft Thinks a Policy of War is Inadvisable

The Concentraction Camps Similar to South Africa, not Necessary

The War Matter Warmly Discussed in the United States Senate

Washington, Feb. 8—Governor Taft, of the Philippine Islands, appeared before the Senate Committee and stated that the mass of the islanders desired peace, but that the insurrectionists kept the people in a state of terrorism. He urged that the principle of keeping up a state of war against the islanders as a whole was a mistaken policy and that as far as possible civil measures should be resorted to, while the work of the army should be confined to protecting the islanders against the attacks of the barbaric bands who made their strongholds in the mountain fastnesses and in the interior of the islands.

Speaking of the part the army took in the suppression of the insurrection, Governor Taft briefly analyzed the work that the army had done in the islands. He recalled that as soon as General Otis had received reinforcements sufficient for his purposes the Philippine army had broken up and scattered into guerrilla bands.

The presence of these guerrilla bands rendered it necessary to place garrisons everywhere, there being at one time as many as 500 of them. This rendered the work before the army very arduous, and the activity, the skill and bravery of the American troops were such as to soon render the enemy tired of the warfare.

CALLS WAR A CRIME

In this connection Senator Culberson made inquiry concerning the effect of the policy of concentration in the Philippines. Replying, Governor Taft said that Governor Bell's order for concentration had been published since his departure from Manila.

The war has been all over these islands, and that which remains is a crime against civilization. It is also a crime against the Filipino people to keep up a state of war under the circumstances. They have worn out the right to any treatment but that which is severe and within the laws of war.

MANY WISH FOR PEACE

This statement led Senator Patterson to ask whether the witness did not consider that even a small number of people who were waging a war for independence do not deserve consideration at the hands of the American army. In response Governor Taft said that the great majority of the people of the islands desire peace and that the insurrectionists by their acts were preventing the mass of the people from settling down and earning a quiet living. Instead of being allowed to do this they were kept under a system of terrorism, which should be stopped.

ASK CESSATION OF WAR

Senator Hoar yesterday presented a petition signed by a number of distinguished citizens of this country for the suspension of hostilities in the Philippine Islands, and asking that an opportunity be given for a discussion of the situation between the Government and the Filipino leaders.

THE PASSING OF MARQUIS OF DUFFERIN

Pathetic Incidents in the Life of the Great Statesman

HIS FINANCIAL EMBARASSMENTS

How the Name of the Earl was Basely Used by a Financial Expert

How The Marquis Became Involved with the London and Globe Corporation—His Present Illness Due to Worry.

London, Feb. 8 — One of the most pathetic incidents in political and diplomatic life is the passing of the Marquis of Dufferin. As I write news comes of his dangerous illness and that the end cannot be far off. Lord Dufferin's later days have been clouded by misfortune. Some of it is due to the unkindness of fate, but the chief part of it is owing to conduct which, in a less distinguished man, would be benevolently described as unwise. The most recent financial bubble which has brought disaster to thousands and ruin to scores of innocent people is that formed by Mr. Whitaker Wright, and known as the London and Globe series of companies. Mr. Whitaker Wright, like the traditional Iago, is bluff and hearty in appearance. It is enough for the crowd to look at him and to hear him speak to judge as to his straightforwardness and honesty. Appearances, however, sometimes deceive, and Mr. Whitaker Wright, more sensible than the British investing public, quickly recognised that it was necessary to bait his financial traps with better and bigger names than his own. For that purpose he invited and procured the co-operation of Lord Dufferin and the late Lord Loch. The late Lord Loch, canny and wise in his generation, retired from the group before the crash came, and left a large sum of money behind him at his death. Lord Dufferin stuck to the ship, and is now hopelessly compromised in the revelations which have been dragged from Mr. Whitaker Wright and his underlings in the course of the judicial investigation which is now proceeding.

Remarkable Annual Report.

On October 16, 1899, Lord Dufferin signed his name to the following statement, which appeared in the annual report of the London and Globe Company for 1899:

"In pursuance of the determination to steadily strengthen and build up the company, the directors propose to limit future dividends to 10 per cent. per annum, any additional distribution that may be made from time to time to be by way of bonus. By this means the directors believe the shares will be taken out of the speculative category, and soon be classed as an investment security, from which the proprietors can count on receiving a specific return with unfailing regularity. When this policy is fully appreciated by investors, the market value of your shares should be materially enhanced. A privilege enjoyed by the shareholders is that they obtain priority of allotment in the issues of the corporation, and these have been of so sound a character that the substantial premiums ruling have been a source of much profit to the subscribers."

At the time Lord Dufferin made this statement the London and Globe Company was not only hopelessly insolvent, but large sums of money had been borrowed for forty-eight hours in order to make the public believe that the financial position of the company was sound. Within a few days the company had failed, and Lord Dufferin's name was freely handled in the city in a manner that made the ears of his friends tingle. The general feeling was best expressed by the Stock Exchange riddle: When was Mr. Whitaker Wright? When he took a Dufferin.

Either a Knave or a Fool.

The Dilemma in which poor Lord Dufferin found himself was simple. Either he had taken his large remuneration as Chairman for overlooking the shareholders' interests, or he had not. If he was aware of what was going on he was clearly compromised in the guilt that attaches to Mr. Wright. If, on the other hand, he did not know what was going on, but signed the reports placed before him without investigation, knowing that the British public accepted that signature as a guarantee of the facts that it covered, then the worst that could be said of Lord Dufferin was that he was foolish, greedy and incompetent. The general conviction is that the latter theory is the correct one, but if so what are we to think of the manner in which English diplomacy is conducted? Here was a man who for forty years had studied human nature in Canada as Governor General, in Paris as British Ambassador, in India as Viceroy, in Egypt as Special Commissioner and in the House of Lords as statesman and Minister, and yet so easily became the dupe of an unprincipled schemer. The spectacle is a melancholy one, and it is rendered more pathetic from the fact that Lord Dufferin's eldest son, Lord Ava, died gallantly on Wagon Hill, at Ladysmith.

A Man of Delightful Personality.

The cases of Lord Dufferin and Lord Loch are by no means singular. Sir Edward Thornton is another ex-Ambassador who has lent his name to financial schemes which, to say the least of it, have not been successful. Lord Dufferin's delightful personality was remarkable for a charm, due no doubt to the Sheridan blood in his veins, simply indescribable. He was a magnetic man, and if his money matters had been straightened out, or if he had enjoyed a personal fortune equal to the large demands made upon it by his position and family, he would probably have gone down to posterity, not only as one of the worthies of the Victorian era, but as the one Briton who was free from that insular arrogance, dullness and phlegm with which the British race is not altogether unjustly credited by its Continental friends.

An amusing incident of the Whitaker Wright revelations is the fact that Mr. Labouchere, who poses, like Robespierre, as the "sea green incorruptible" of the House of Commons, has parted with the editor and financial editor of his well known journal, Truth, on the gound that these gentlemen were the recipients of favors from Mr. Whitaker Wright.

THE BOER SURRENDER MUST BE UNCONDITIONAL

British Government Will Make no Other Terms For Those Still Under Arms

A SPLENDID TRIBUTE PAID THE COLONIES

Kruger and Leyds are no Longer Permitted to Speak for the Boers—End of the War in Sight

London, Feb. 8—By making public the correspondence regarding the so-called peace overtures the Imperial Government has put an end to any doubts that may have been entertained regarding its attitude towards the rebels in South Africa, and has at the same time given the powers once more to understand that no interference will be tolerated. The wisdom, reasonableness and humanity of the position taken cannot be questioned. Mr. Chamberlain in a recent speech paid the colonies a high compliment in declaring that colonial opinion must be taken into account in the settlement of the terms. "When," he said, "you are advised to offer or to accept terms of peace which, in the words of that calm and resolute speech which was made by Lord Milner two days ago, would preserve the political dualism in Africa in substance though not in form—then I say to you, remember that you do not stand alone, that you have allies, and that you are not entitled to make terms unless it is upon terms which will be satisfactory to those allies who have sent of their best to fight and to die in a common cause." In this case the decision will assuredly be satisfactory to those allies, for it means an unwavering adherence to the demand for an unconditional surrender without the interference of Holland or any other nation. The point to be emphasized in discussing the negotiations is that the negotiators on one side are not responsible, and have practically no power over the combatants for whom they claim to speak. Kruger and his entourage in Holland have lost the confidence of the leaders in the field, and it is even doubtful if the perambulating Governments of Steyn and Schalkburger have any authority. Moreover, it cannot be said, as Mr. Chamberlain declared in Parliament, that any one of the Boer generals can commit the others. Reitz, the ex-Secretary of the Transvaal, has said that "If we, the leaders, surrendered, the rank and file would refuse to follow," and if this is the case with the rank and file, the leaders are surely not going to follow the armchair diplomats in Europe, who with as much money as they could lay their hands on, have found an asylum safe from the bullets and the hardships of war. But, nevertheless, the policy of unconditional surrender must not be confused with that of extermination. Thoroughly courteous is the reply of the Imperial Government to the extraordinary proposition of the Government of the Netherlands Yet it is firm and unyielding. The Netherlands Government wanted the Boers now in Holland to be permitted to visit the Boers in the field, to confer with them, and to return to Europe with power to conclude a treaty with Great Britain. In the making of the treaty the Boer delegates were to negotiate with plenipotentiaries on the British side. The proposal, while made in good faith, had an air of coolness about it. In the first place, it imposed upon Great Britain, if accepted, the recognition of the Boer gentlemen who slipped out of the Transvaal with so much money, and who do not now hold official or representative positions there. Britain under this concession would not merely recognise these escaped fomenters of strife, but would, by so doing, supersede those two perambulating governments in Africa which are moving about with so much agility. In the second place, the arrangement would necessitate a suspension of hostilities at a time when they are reaching an end by the means which the Boers in their effort to overwhelm the British in South Africa themselves invoked. This suspension, instead of hastening the close of the war, would delay it, especially if, as is most probable, terms could not be reached by negotiation. Meanwhile, the British army in the field would have to be kept on a war footing, while the Boers would recover themselves, and be ready at the end of the truce to begin again with renewed vigor. Finally, there does not appear to be any necessity for a treaty. Britain has nothing to negotiate about. The terms are surrender and incorporation into the Empire. All the Boers know this, and they cannot have anything else. Lord Kitchener is on hand to receive surrenders or propositions looking to that end. If the Boers now in Holland want to close the war they can from their present safe retreat recommend their friends to cease fighting, with just as much ease as during the past year they have urged them from the same point of vantage to continue a hopeless struggle and to shed as much good British blood as possible.

KRUGER STILL WANTS BOER INDEPENDENCE

The War Cannot be Called off for Months to Come

BOTHA NOW HAS NO AUTHORITY

An Order to Stop the War from Either Botha or Kruger Would not be Obeyed

London, Feb. 8—The leading London papers hold out no promise that the Government will announce any new policy toward the Boers before they have unconditionally surrendered. The London Telegraph says that an enemy may be reconciled or assimilated by a policy of peace after conquest, "such as the Government intends to pursue," but no people in the "very act of being annexed by force of arms was ever beforehand induced to signify their agreement with the process."

It is asserted that the Boer generals Schalkburger and Botha are willing to accept annexation, but that Kruger, Leyds, General Dewet and President Steyn are holding out for independence. It is argued that these differences among Boer leaders will make negotiations with the British hopeless. The Telegraph finds other obstacles to negotiations before absolute surrender. It says the commandoes do not now own any common allegiance to ex-President Kruger; that General Botha's authority over his fellow leaders is only nominal:

"We are dealing at present with the hopelessly scattered fragments of what at the beginning of the war was a recognizable belligerent Power; and that any person could now produce at short notice sufficient evidence of a solid claim to speak for the enemy as a whole is in the highest degree improbable."

Whatever may be coming, the correspondence with the Dutch Government shows no intention on the part of the British Government to recede from its unconditional surrender policy; nor does the correspondence as yet shed light upon any contemplated policy "of peace subsequent to conquest," by which, the Telegraph says, "an enemy may be reconciled or assimilated."

BRITAIN'S FOOD SUPPLY IN WAR TIME

A Combination of Powers Might Starve England into a Surrender

SO THINKS THE NEW YORK SUN

This Subject is Now Being Much Debated in Britain—England's Safety is in Her Colonies

New York, Feb. 7—The Sun says: "These arguments are based upon the assumption that the safety of the United Kingdom, or, in other words, the preservation of its inhabitants from famine, is incessantly imperilled by the conditions under which its food supply is now obtained. That the assumption is well founded is an indisputable fact. Since free trade in grain became the settled problem of the United Kingdom, its population has doubled, while the production of wheat at home has decreased by one-half. Even the imports from the transmarine dependencies of Great Britain have dwindled during the last ten years. The result is that the dependence of the United Kingdom on foreign countries for wheat has grown to such an extent that four out of every five loaves that come to British tables are received from the United States, from Russia and from Argentina. Under the circumstances, it may well be asked how England could be shielded from starvation if she were engaged in war with both the United States and Russia. It may be pronounced highly improbable that England will ever have to confront the two powers named at the same time. Such a contingency, however, would have occurred during our Civil War, had England recognized the Southern Confederacy; and it might have occurred four years ago, had England forbidden us to undertake the deliverance of Cuba, as she did forbid us at the time of the Virginius affair. Some of the British advocates of a reversion to a protectionist policy insist that their countrymen are dwelling in a fool's paradise when they take for granted that the United States and Russia will never be found allied against England.

"But, it may be asked, Would not the British navy be able to assure the transport across the ocean of adequate quantities of wheat from Canada, Australia and Argentina, even if the customary supplies from the United States and Russia were cut off? The answer is that the existing wheat surplus of Canada, Australia and Argentina would bridge but a fraction of the vast gap between England's demand for wheat and her home supply. The surplus wheat of Canada, moreover, could not be counted on because, in the event of a war between the United States and Great Britain, the Canadian granaries would be in the hands of our land forces. It is equally certain that the transportation of wheat from Australia and Argentina would be seriously interrupted by American cruisers."

Any assumption based on the occurrence of war between Great Britain and the United States is a far cry, at the present outlook. But granting that war should occur as the fruit of some climax which, though no one may foresee, is at all times possible, the conclusion that the wheat supplies of Canada could be shut off from the mother country by either of the causes above indicated is indisputable. To hold the Canadian North-west granaries by United States land forces would require an army of two or three hundred thousand men, who in the winter season would perish miserably. For four months, probably five, of summer, the Hudson Bay route would furnish an outlet for food stores, which could be more safely conveyed to British shores by that than by any other route. The Sun does not talk of policing the Atlantic so far Northward by American cruisers. That route is now the back door of the wheat areas of Canada, as it was for a century and a half the main route of the Hudson Bay Company's trade. In the future of the Empire, it cannot be left out of account as a safeguard to England for food supply in war times. Any measure that will facilitate the navigation of those northern waters, affording a short cut across the Atlantic from the teeming wheat lands of Canada, will be a measure of insurance against famine to England in that eventuality.

ROADS ARE IN BAD SHAPE

The Driver of the Hiawatha Stage Had Difficulties in Reaching Town

Robert Davis, driver of the stage which runs between Hiawatha and Peterborough, says the road between these places is in an almost impassible condition. He says the farmers along the route refuse to turn out and break the roads after a snow storm. On his trips this week he has had a great deal of trouble and only for the assistance of a few of the farmers along the road, he is doubtful if he could have got the mails here at all.

The road from here to Rice Lake is a bad one for drifting and with the heavy storms recently the road is now almost impassible.

NEW ZEALAND WOMEN AND THE BOER WAR

They Held an Indignation Meeting and Pass Several Strongly Worded Resolutions

London, Feb. 8—A despatch from Wellington, New Zealand, contains accounts of two public indignation meetings, to protest against the foreign slanders upon the conduct of the war in South Africa. Resolutions were unanimously passed expressing the horror of the women of New Zealand at the calumnies circulated in Germany reflecting on the honor of the sons and husbands of the women of the colonies and the motherland.

Sir Joseph Ward, Postmaster-General, moved the resolution, which was seconded by Mr. Seddon's daughter.

Another resolution, also adopted unanimously, expressed complete confidence in Mr. Chamberlain, and in his courageous defence of the British forces, repudiated the base slanders which have been circulated, and insisted upon unconditional surrender as being in the best interests of the Boers and of the peace and safety of the Empire. Sir Joseph Ward pointed out that the colony of New Zealand had given a startling answer to the German slanders by despatching a fresh contingent to South Africa; and if it were necessary, the colonists would spend their last shilling in supporting the motherland in a war which had been forced upon her. If the men of the colony had not come forward, he said, the women would have compelled them, for the reason that the attack made upon England in the Reichstag was a stain upon the honor of their sons and brothers. There was no doubt as to the righteousness of the war. England required the support of the colonies, and she would have it. The war had to be ended without compromise, and the Empire should be careful to see that no stain rested on its escutcheon.

Great enthusiasm prevailed at the meeting, which concluded with cheers for the King and Queen, and the singing of the National Anthem.

PATENT HAS BEEN ISSUED

After Many Years the Government Has Consented—Splendid Site for Esplanade

His Worship, Mayor Denne, received through the Hon. J. R. Stratton, the crown patent from the Ontario Government conveying to the town of Peterborough the water lots on the Otonabee River, lying between Sherbrooke and Hunter streets. The matter has been under negotiation for many years, and various difficulties have arisen in that time that have delayed the transfer of the land, but these have been overcome and now the town owns about seventeen acres of land along the water front which will be most valuable to the town for wharfage &c, in the event of the Trent Canal being completed.

The importance of this acquisition to the town can not be easily over-rated, especially in view of the possibility of adding greatly to its value by means which will require little or no expenditure on the part of the town.

The Canal Co. want to have the bed of the river deepened by dredging and the dredgings can be deposited behind a line of cribwork along the water front, and the whole area, now covered by water can be raised to form an esplanade whose water front will be a line of wharfage and the surface covered by railway sidings.

This is looking forward to the completion of the Trent Canal but when that work is completed and navigation opened, there will doubtless be a great amount of freight handled and unloaded here. The Cereal Co., the Lakefield Cement Co. and many other concerns will use water transport instead of by rail as the former way is much the cheaper.

Things are now looking very bright for the town and it is the duty of the citizens to stand by the town and endeavor to have as many large manufacturing firms locate here as possible. We are now becoming known as a great manufacturing centre and that knowledge will attract others.

REGARDING TEMPERANCE

Rev. Dr. O'Brien, Spiritual Director of St. Peter's Total Abstinence Society, is to be congratulated on his efforts to organise the ladies of the parish in the cause of Total Abstinence, in conjunction with St. Peter's T.A.S., which since its organization two years ago has done an immense amount of good in Peterborough, and is attracting wide attention throughout the province. The incorporation of a women's branch of the society is not based on the idea that they have to take the pledge in order to abstain from drink, for comparatively few women use intoxicating liquor to any extent, but a Women's Temperance Society can do a vast amount of good in the way of encouragement and example to the husband and family. A woman, with the benefits of total abstinence thoroughly impressed on her mind, will carefully guard and watch her children as they grow up, and protect them from any temptation of that nature. The literature of every age and country bears evidence of the belief of all peoples in the mother's influence over her child. Napoleon once asked Madam Campan, the great lecturer and women's advocate, what should be done to better the morals of France, and she replied, "To regenerate France, you must educate the mothers." And so it is in every country. It is recognised the world over, what a great power a mother possesses. She can, to a large extent, shape her child's future in the world by the lessons and impressions on the young heart. And these lessons are never forgotten throughout life. When a young man is tempted to drink, if he can think for a moment of the time when, at his mother's knee, he promised never to give himself up to that curse, it can have nothing but a good effect upon him, and this is the basis upon which Rev. Dr. O'Brien is endeavoring to organize a women's branch of the T.A.S. Rev. Father Murphy, a Paulist Father of New York, and a great temperance advocate, will deliver a lecture next Sunday evening in St. Peter's Cathedral on the temperance question, and it is proposed to organize a society immediately afterwards.

VENEZUELAN REBELS' WAR STEAMER SUNK

Liberador Destroyed by a Government Gunboat

Seized at Porto Colombia While Being Repaired—French Government's Warning to President Castro—Conflicts with the Insurgents

Colon, Colombia, Feb. 8—It is reported here that the Venezuelan revolutionary steamer Libertador, formerly the British steamer Ban Righ, has been sunk by a Venezuelan gunboat, while under repairs at Porto Colombia.

The report first gained circulation yesterday, but no confirmation could be obtained. It is stated that the steamer had been lying up at Porto Colombia for the past few weeks in need of repairs. The fact that the British gunboat Psyche left here yesterday for Porto Colombia is looked upon here as giving the Colon rumor confirmation.

DEPUTATION HAS RETURNED

The Town Bill Has Safely Passed the Committee Stage

The Aldermen who went to Toronto in reference to the matter of attending to the welfare of the Town Bill, now before the Private Bills committee have returned to town after seeing it safely through the committee stage. The object of the bill is to seek the confirmation of the Cottage Company by-law in reference to exemptions granted, etc, to confirm the by-law of the town authorizing the purchase of the waterworks, and the issue of debentures in payment thereof, to confirm a by-law of the Water Co. in making a sale of the works to the town and to authorize the council to issue debentures not exceeding the sum of [illegible] in one year for extensions and improvements, the by-laws to be subject to the approval of the Lieutenant Governor-in-Council, to provide for the election of Water Commissioners to be for 3 years duration, one to be elected each year. Besides many other clauses the bill also provides for an extension of time to the Canal Company from April to October in which to complete their works here. The clause providing for the granting of a right to the town to acquire and develop Water Power in any part of the Otonabee River was omitted. The council thought it advisable not to ask for this privilege. The municipality still holds the right however to develop power below Nassau by power of a former by-law.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Speaking to Premier Ross for the liquor interest, Mr. Haverson pointed out that $15,150,000 was the amount of capital invested by distillers, brewers and maltsters; $80,000,000 the amount invested in real estate by the retailers, and $21,000,000 the amount in stock and fixtures. The distillers and brewers paid to the farmers $2,302,000 a year, to transportation companies $450,000, for wages $1,200,000, and for other purposes $1,012,000 a year. The retailers paid $10,500,000 in wages, making a total outlay of $15,500,000 a year. The revenue to the Dominion was over $10,000,000, and Ontario last year got $620,000, $350,000 of which went to the municipalities.

Toronto Star: "Don't kill the goose," etc., is the somewhat dubious title which the Bracebridge Gazette puts to an article advising the Muskoka townships to tax lightly the owners of summer cottages. "Where would our farmers be," says the Gazette, "but for the money of the tourist and cottager? How have these farmers been able to replace the ox by the horse; the grain cradle by the binder; and the mowing scythe by the mower? How have they been able to move from the shanty into the house, and how have they been able to furnish it and educate their children? They know. We need not tell them." We know, too. We have guessed it. It's the goose of a tourist that has made all this wealth, luxury and refinement around Bracebridge.

Thousands of testimonials prove that Paine's Celery Compound permanently cures rheumatism and neuralgia. WM. MADILL, Druggist, Peterborough, Ont.

The Sydney Herald is indignant because, it is alleged, the Halifax Board of trade, or one of its members, has been circulating photographs of the steamer Minto frozen in the ice in Sydney harbor, in order to discredit that place as an ocean port. And yet it is sure that Sydney harbor is sometimes blocked with floe ice, as Cabot Straits is. It has been said that the steamer Bruce, which plies between Sydney and Newfoundland, has only been delayed once in three years by ice, but the Bruce is specially built for shoving ice, and conditions which would not affect her might be very serious for the average fast Atlantic liner.

MISS ROOSEVELT WILL ATTEND THE CORONATION

She Will Go Merely as the Guest of Whitelaw Reid

The President's Daughter Will Have no Official Standing as a Member of the Special Embassy of the United States.

Washington, Feb. 6 — Miss Alice Roosevelt, the oldest daughter of the President, will attend the coronation of King Edward as the guest of Whitelaw Reid. The decision was reached to-day, and Miss Roosevelt's friends are careful to say that it is not to be thought for an instant that she is going in any other capacity than that of a young American girl, who has no official standing whatever.

The matter was the subject of much discussion at the White House. The State Department was called in, and there has been a lively correspondence by cable between Washington and London. The difficulty lay in having Miss Roosevelt's private individuality observed.

Secretary Hay has been called in consultation, and has smoothed the matter out, and Miss Roosevelt will go as any other young lady who is a member of the party of Mr. and Mrs. Whitelaw Reid. It is possible that Commander and Mrs. Cowles, who are Miss Roosevelt's uncle and aunt, will be of the Reid party. It is certain that the daughter of the president will have several young girls as her companions. Among the party will be the daughter of General Wilson, the representative of the army at the coronation. It is said that Mrs. Cushman K. Davis will be one of Mr. and Mrs. Reid's guests.

The President yielded to the desire of his daughter when it was clearly understood that her incognito while in Great Britain would be closely observed officially.

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND

This medicine is giving marvellous results to sick people all over Canada. The wonderful cures effected by Paine's Celery Compound during the past year speaks volumes in favor of the popular medicine. Thousands who have suffered from rheumatism, neuralgia, nervous troubles and dyspepsia now sing the praises of the medicine that has given them such happy results. JOHN NUGENT, Druggist, Peterborough, Ont.

Death or lunacy seemed the only alternative for a well-known and highly respected lady of Wingham, Ont., who had travelled over two continents in a vain search for a cure for nervous debility and dyspepsia. A friend recommended South American Nervine. One bottle helped, six bottles cured, and her own written testimony closes with these words: "It has saved my life."—20

A Dearth of "Hold-ups."

PREVIOUS to Mr. McKinley's first inauguration, his acquaintance with the members of his Cabinet was a very slight one, only Mr. Sherman being at all intimate with the Chief Executive. The getting acquainted was rather of slow progress, as all were engrossed in their new and intricate duties. One evening the conversation chanced to turn upon the youthful ambitions of the members. Each related his early plans for the future, and when Secretary Wilson's turn came, the Iowan said: "My ambition has not yet been realized. I wanted to be worth $1,000,000 and have two good pairs of suspenders at the same time. As yet, I have neither." The Cabinet unofficially laughed at this frank confession, and Secretary Gage, after a minute, confessed that he had never simultaneously possessed two pairs of dependable suspenders. Secretary Long remarked that when he graduated from Harvard he had two pairs of new trousers, each with good new galluses, but that the experience had never responded to an encore; while the new Justice McKenna said that, although he came from the Pacific Slope, two pairs of "hold-ups" were unknown to him. Others made similar confessions, and finally Secretary Bliss, the wealthiest man present, said with a laugh: "This seems to be a strange coincidence. Last Saturday evening Mrs. Bliss came in to my study and said: 'Papa, are you going out at all this evening?' I replied that I did not so intend, and asked the reason of her question. 'Oh, nothing,' she replied, 'only if you are not, Ed'—our son—'wants to use your only good suspenders.'"

As a sort of final course to this tale, Mr. McKinley tells that Secretary Wilson related this conversation at the breakfast table the morning following. Three of his children were present. It was in the early holiday season. Each of the children sat interested and observing. Christmas came, and in the stocking of the Secretary of Agriculture were found three dozen pairs of suspenders of a high degree of excellence. The children had remembered the story. All Secretary Wilson then needed to realize his youthful ambition was the $1,000,000.

And this is one of the very few humorous stories the late President told repeatedly with gusto.

THE NEW BABY

Opens up a new world to the loving mother. If it is a strong, healthy baby that new world is a world of happiness. If it is a weak, fretful child the new world is full of anxiety. It has been proven in thousands of cases, that the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription makes all the difference between strength and weakness in children. Healthy, happy mothers have healthy, happy children. "Favorite Prescription" gives the mother strength to give her child. It makes the baby's advent practically painless and promotes the secretion of the nourishment necessary to the healthful feeding of the nursing child.

"I have been using Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and can say it is just what you advertise it to be," writes Mrs. Victor J. Hadin, of Leonardville, Riley Co., Kansas. "I began taking it just two months before baby came and was greatly benefited by its use. The doctor who attended me said I did about as well as any one he had seen (as I was sick only about three hours), and also that your 'Favorite Prescription' was 'one patent medicine' which he did have faith in. We now have a darling baby boy, strong and healthy, who weighed nine pounds when born. During this month he has gained three and one-half pounds. Have never given him one dose of medicine."

The "poor Boer prisoners in Bermuda" are still a cause of anxious solicitude to funny people in New York. A few weeks ago these philanthropists gathered up a lot of old clothing for the prisoners in the hands of the British government, but were told that they would not be received, first because the government itself provided for those under its protection, and secondly, for sanitary reasons. Now they are calling for old school books to be sent for the edification of the Boers captured while making war.

Heart relief in half an hour.—A lady in New York State, writing of her cure by Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart, says: "I feel like one brought back from the dead, so great was my suffering from heart trouble and so almost miraculous my recovery through the agency of this powerful treatment. I owe my life to it."—19

Has at Last Been Secured Between Lakefield and Young's Point

It will be good news to the people of Young's Point and neighborhood to learn that a daily mail service is to be established winter and summer between Lakefield and Young's Point. Yesterday Mr. J. H. McClellan received a letter from the Postmaster General in answer to a communication from the former, stating that a daily service had been decided on. Mr. McClellan is entitled to the thanks of the people of the Point and neighborhood for his efforts in their behalf. It is also gratifying to The Times to know that an additional field has been opened up for this great family journal. For a long time the children as well as the adults of Young's Point have cried in vain for their g.f.j. Now it is different. They are within the sphere of our "influence" and will no doubt flourish intellectually and morally as they never flourished before.

THE

THE

STAR

Patented March 10th, 1894,

BY

Geo. Brousseau, Quebec.

For hard and soft coal, coke or peat. The only stove without grate and possessing a tube for gas escape.

DESCRIPTION

The Star is the latest and best stove in the market for slow combustion—why? The inside is lined with fire brick all in one piece and cemented to the outer shell. No danger of breaking or loss of pieces.

The Star has a tube behind for the escape of the gas. As anyone who uses soft coal knows, the gas accumulates under the fresh coal, and if there is no escape there will be explosions and puffs of smoke. In the Star this disappears in the gas escape. The Star has a sliding damper and ornamental door of mica.

After being filled, the Star will heat for 48 hours without attention. It will hold fire and give out heat longer than any other stove.

The Star is 50 per cent more economical than any other stove.

MORE THAN 4,000 ARE IN USE IN THE LOWER PROVINCES.

PRICE LIST.

No	Height.	Diameter.	Price.
0	24 in.	9 in.	$11 50
1	[illegible] in.	9 in.	12.00
2	[illegible] in.	10½ in.	14.00
3	37½ in.	12 in.	18.00
4	41 in.	16 in.	21.00

DIRECTIONS.

When filling the stove always shut the draft door at the bottom.

Keep the small opening in the back pipe closed except when cleaning.

Clean the back pipe every two weeks.

Coal Consumers, Attention

We certify that we have in use one No. 3 "Star" stove in our large pool and billiard room the size of which is 45 by 30 feet, with 14 feet ceiling. We have perfect heat, and the most coal we have used on the coldest day yet has been 3 scuttles in twenty-four hours. We are so well pleased with the stove that we would not use any other.

BOCAMORA & CALLAHAN.

I have been using a No. 3 STAR stove in the sitting room of the City Hotel for some time past, and it has proved so satisfactory that I have ordered two more to replace two stoves in the upstairs. The Star gives more heat than the other stoves with half the amount of coal.

MARTIN CONNORS.

We have in use in our Composing Room a No. 3 Star coal stove and wish to state that it is giving eminent satisfaction. The entire absence of gas by the escape provided, the increase of heat and the saving in coal are special features of the Star, and it requires a minimum of attention.

TIMES PRINTING CO.

We are using one No. 3 "Star" stove in our large rooms where formerly we had four large wood heaters, and get more heat now than before. The wood stoves cost us $2.40 every week for fuel and the Star stove, which we are now using, costs us only $1.40, making a saving of $1 per week in the price of fuel—which would soon pay for the stove. We can recommend this stove to any person wanting a first-class heater. We would not use any other stove that is made.

A Voting Machine Test

Kingston Whig—"The machine used in the elections, however, is new and simple, and somewhat of an experiment. The registration is quite complete, but the matter of depositing the balls admits of some misunderstanding, and some mistakes. The ball has to be pushed in a distance in order to reach the groove along which it is moved and made to count and tally. It can be put so near the edge of the opening as to fall out during the operation of the machine, and this accident or mishap may lead to difficulty, to say the least of it.

"Can a fraud be committed? That is the great consideration. The ball may be held back, or knocked out of its place, and if the elector be allowed to use it in a second movement of the slot he may add it to the count of a certain candidate a second time and so become a repeater. Against a second operation there is ground for protest, and unless it be forbidden the machine may, as at present constructed, be manipulated to some purpose.

"The voting machine, however, is on its trial, and with all its defects it is well liked. It can, however, be improved very much. The working parts should be of metal and made less liable to derangement. The balls too, should roll away from the elector and do their work more effectually.

AN EXCITING EXPERIENCE.

"I had an experience the other day that just about beats anything that ever happened to me," said a well known citizen to a Times man. "I was walking along Stewart street when a woman ran from one of the houses, screaming at the top of her lungs. It was about three o'clock in the afternoon, broad daylight. She saw me and began to beckon frantically. I broke into a run, and when I reached her I asked what was the matter. She was as white as a sheet and shaking like a leaf. 'It's in the kitchen! It's in the kitchen!' she cried; and that was all the satisfaction I could get out of her. She had left the front door open and I went in. She followed close behind me, and from her actions I thought some crime had been committed. I pulled myself together before I entered the kitchen, but there didn't seem to be anything wrong. 'Now, madam,' I said, 'perhaps you will be kind enough to tell me what you are creating all this fuss about.' She pointed to the coal scuttle and gasped, 'It's in there!' I looked, and what do you suppose it was? A mouse! The scuttle was nearly empty and there were some bread crumbs in the bottom. The mouse had evidently jumped in after the crumbs, and then couldn't climb the sides again. I picked it out by the tail and gave it a rap on the floor. That woman was just as profuse in her thanks as though I had

LAKEHURST

A deep feeling of sadness has passed over this community owing to the death on Monday morning last of Mrs. Robert Shaw, wife of Robert Shaw, County Councillor. Mrs. Shaw has been in poor health for the last six or seven months, but she was thought to be improving until about a week ago, when she was seized with an attack of inflammation of the lungs. Dr. Boswell of Bobcaygeon, was called but he pronounced her case hopeless and she gradually sank.

Mrs. Shaw will be greatly missed, for she had a wide circle of friends. Her gentle and kindly disposition endeared her to everyone with whom she came in contact. Her death will be sincerely mourned by all and her sorrowing husband and daughters will have the heartfelt sympathy of the community.

Municipal Insurance

As an evidence that municipal insurance is sure to come, sooner or later, we publish the following: Galt, Ont., has a remarkable record. Last year the fire brigade responded to twelve calls, and the total loss was $60. In 1900 there were fifteen calls, with a total damage of $36, while the insurance companies doing business in the town paid out $4 for losses during the two years. The amount paid to the insurance companies in the two years, is estimated at $[illegible].

NORTH AMERICAN OIL & REFINING COMPANY'S

Stock and It Will Make You Rich

The company owns 2,080 acres of land located in the Newhall-Acton White Oil Fields of Los Angeles County, California. Our manager, Mr. J. H. Parker, writes us under date of Jan. 15th that they have opened up two oil wells near our property, one being a gusher of white oil just as clear as alcohol, and of 52 degrees gravity. This oil is worth and is selling at $4.00 per barrel at the well, and producing better than 50 barrels per day. Our derrick is up and the machinery purchased; we expect to be drilling in a very short time. We now offer to the public 100,000 shares of this meritorious company's stock at the low price of 10 cents per share, and it is worth a great deal more money at the present time with the showing we have in the property. The demand for this oil is far greater than the supply, which is not so of the black oils of Lower California and Beaumont, Texas, that are a drug upon the market.

Regarding the officers of the company, they are all men of honor and means. There are no salaries paid to any of the officers, not even our General Manager, until our company is put on a paying basis.

INCORPORATION.

The company is capitalized for 1,500,000 shares, the incorporation having been effected under the laws of Wyoming, stock being all common stock, issued absolutely fully paid and forever non-assessable. The incorporation laws of Wyoming are peculiarly favorable to oil enterprises, and the par value of the stock has been fixed at One Cent per share in order to avoid the excessive revenue tax paid on stocks of a high par value.

LIABILITIES.

The company has no debts; all stock is fully paid and non-assessable, there are no stockholders' liabilities, and we have no royalties to pay for any purpose.

OUR LANDS.

The company's lands have been carefully selected by their engineer, Mr. J. H. Parker, who is also Vice President and General Manager, in conjunction with four of the best oil experts, who are well known throughout the state. These experts each unbeknown to the other went over our vast territory to locate a site to sink our first well; their reports are on file in the company's office, and we will be pleased to mail a copy of the same upon application, also maps of the oil fields with our property showing in the red. The directors call special attention to the maps, which have been drawn from actual surveys and personal inspection of the land and is accurate. The company's lands are distinctly shown as well as their relation to other oil lands and the location of oil wells, oil seepages and oil springs. A careful inspection of the map will aid prospective investors to judge of the oil under the company's lands.

The geological formation is perfect, the Anticlinal passing through the entire property, and being unbroken by granite formations.

GUARANTEE.

The officers and directors of the company have such great faith in the proposition that they will redeem all stock sold for cash, providing they do not strike oil as designated.

TREASURY STOCK.

The company holds in the treasury over 500,000 shares of treasury stock and some money. The proceeds of sale from the 100,000 shares now offered to the public will be used for the purpose of sinking wells.

REGISTRATION.

The stock is registered with the Colorado Title & Trust Company of Colorado Springs, Colorado, which guarantees any over-issue of stock.

The company would like to employ a few good Fiscal Agents to handle any part of this 100,000 shares of stock, giving them a very liberal commission. We take pleasure in recommending this stock to the good people of Peterborough and vicinity at the very low price of 10 cents per share; considering the condition of the property the stock is worth more money than what we are asking for it.

Cancer Growing Two Years

A Remarkable Case Cured Completely by the New Constitutional Remedy.

Not long ago, we had the pleasure of receiving the following letter:

"When I began your treatment there was a hard lump in my breast, which had been growing for two years, and it was so bad at last that it drew the nipple in. I consulted two doctors, and they both pronounced it cancer, and advised me to have my breast cut off. Your remedy, however, was recommended to me by a friend, and I am very thankful to say that it not only saved my life, but did away with the necessity of having to undergo the painful operation, which I so much dreaded."

We do not publish the names of those who give us testimonials for the gratification of the curious, but any sufferer from Cancer or Tumor may have the name and address of the lady who wrote the above, by sending two stamps to Stott & Jury, Bowmanville Ont.

Women Unjustly Accused of Extravagance

Many women are unjustly accused of extravagance in dress by their neighbors and friends. In ninety-nine cases out of every hundred, these accused women spend less money on clothes than their accusers. These well dressed women are always economical while they appear natty and stylish. They deserve all the frequent changes in dress they enjoy. The new looking dresses, suits and skirts are simply old ones recolored with some fashionable color of the Diamond Dyes and retrimmed. Such dresses are made up at small cost. Any woman of ordinary intelligence can enjoy several changes in dress each week. Bring out the old, faded and dingy looking garments consigned to the garret or closet, select fashionable colors of the Diamond Dyes, and with little labor you can increase the stock in your wardrobe. The same good work can be done with your children's dresses and your husband's suits. Well dressed people are users of Diamond Dyes.

A Correction

The report circulated that Rev. E. A. Langfeldt, of St. Luke's Church, has been appointed Chaplain of the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons, is a little premature. The appointment has not yet been made but it is understood Rev. Langfeldt will most likely receive the appointment.

Consumption is Infectious

Every precaution should be taken to prevent its spread of the "White Plague." Persons coming into contact with consumptives should inhale Catarrhozone several times each day as it is a powerful destroyer of disease germs, and renders them innocuous. Catarrhozone is a most efficient preventive and may be thoroughly relied on to promote expectoration, soothe the cough and benefit in many ways too numerous to mention. Both from a medical and scientific point of view Catarrhozone is the most valuable addition to the armament against consumption. Its merit cannot be too warmly applauded. Sold at all druggists, two months' treatment, price $1, small size 25c., or by mail from N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

THE LATE LOUIS ARCHAMBAULT

His Death Occurred Yesterday at Noon—Well Known in Town

The death occurred yesterday of Mr. Louis Archambault, aged 72, who for nearly a quarter of a century, has been a resident of Peterborough. For two years past he has been ailing, suffering from stomach troubles. A widow and two children are left to mourn his death. The children are Mr. Philias Archambault and Mrs. Frank Lacombe, both of Syracuse.

ATTACKED BY A RAT

A Domestic in the Oriental Hotel Has a Thrilling Experience

A domestic in the Oriental Hotel had a rather thrilling experience a few nights ago. She was rudely awakened about four o'clock this morning by a sharp pain caused by the bite of a rat. The animal had got under the bed clothes and had sunk its teeth into her neck. The young lady's screams awakened her companion who slept with her, and also the occupants of the adjourning rooms. The rat escaped after the light had been turned on.

The fright caused the young lady to faint and medical aid had to be summoned. She is still suffering from the wound and nervous prostration.

Notwithstanding the Introduction of Imitations and Counterfeits the Sales of Paine's Celery Compound

HAVE VASTLY INCREASED

THE GREAT MEDICAL PRESCRIPTION OF PROFESSOR PHELPS, M. D., IS THE ONLY MEDICINE THAT BANISHES DISEASE AND SICKNESS

Shortly after the greatest modern physicians, Professor Phelps, M. D., gave to the science of medicine the most wonderful remedy of the present day—Paine's Celery Compound—a host of imitators sprung up. As the great public demand for Paine's Celery Compound increases in every section of Canada, imitators become bolder, and as a consequence, the public in many quarters are suffering from these vile deceptions. To-day, no other medicine is so largely imitated as Paine's Celery Compound; this is due to its immense popularity.

Notwithstanding the introduction of imitations of Paine's Celery Compound in Canada, the sales of the great disease-banisher increase from week to week and far exceed the combined output of all other medicines. People insist upon having the one remedy that makes them strong, repairs their shattered strength and that frees them from disease. Only a truly great and effective remedy could continue as Paine's Celery Compound has done, to hold its unrivalled place in the estimation of able physicians, discerning professional men and the best people of the land.

If you value life and health, do not hesitate to refuse the "Something Just As Good" and vile imitations when dealers present them to you. See that you get the kind with the name PAINE'S on wrapper and bottle.

A RISING TOWN

Village of Bancroft, as Seen by a Times Representative

Special to the Times

Bancroft, Feb. 8 — A Times correspondent paid a brief visit to this village, which is situated on the north branch of the Madawaska river, at the corner of four townships—Dungannon, Faraday, Monteagle and Herschell—in the County of Hastings. There are about 750 inhabitants, and twenty-four new houses were built last year. There is a steel bridge across the river on the old Monck Road, and below the bridge there is a fine grist mill, woollen mill, saw mill and power house. The stores and private houses have electric lights. There is a fine Roman Catholic church as well as a Methodist, Presbyterian and English church, and a good school house. The village has a steam fire engine and a fire hall is under construction. There are two hotels, one drug store, and nine general stores, one bank, two harness shops, and two jewelry stores. The village will have electric lights on the streets. Bancroft also has a weekly newspaper, The Times. The train arrives here at noon each day. The train could not get in the last two days, the snow drifts were so heavy, but the snowplough on the C. O. R. came from Brighton to Coe Hill yesterday and on to Bancroft to-day. There are also two livery stables here. Oats are 55 cents a bushel, butter 16 1-2 cents per lb., stove wood per cord $1.25, and pine wood $1.00 Bancroft is a progressive village.

While They Last

Only five little girls' sleighs—steel runners and beams, best make on market, while they last at $1.25; former price $2.25. Times Bookstore, Market Block, Peterborough.

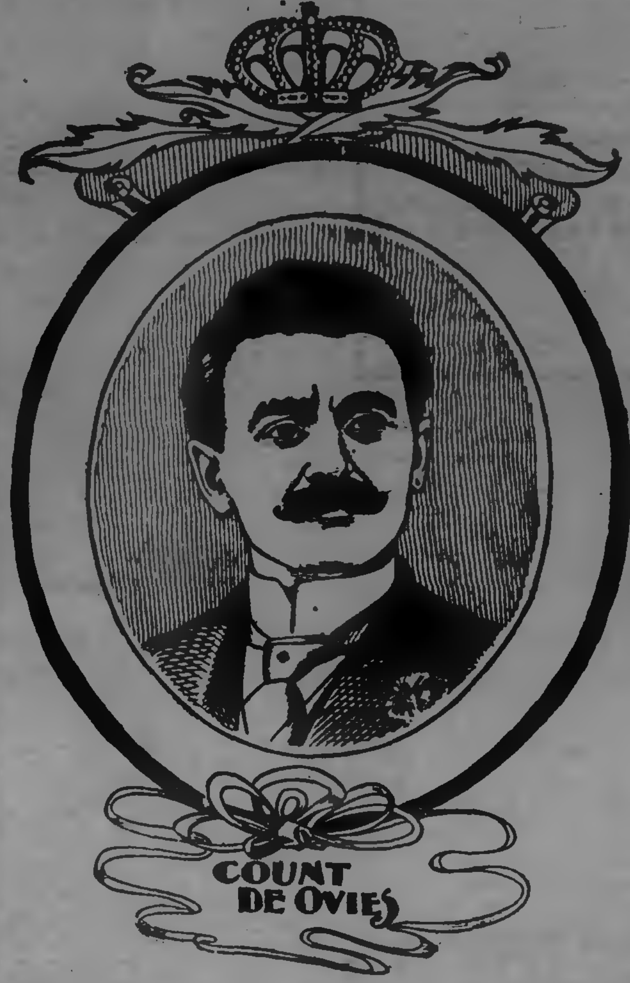
A SPANISH COUNT CURED OF LA GRIPPE.



Count Segundo de Ovies was a Carlist exile. The signature of his uncle, Louis De Ovies, is found with that of John Quincy Adams ceding Florida to the United States in a treaty with Spain. The Count is forty-six years of age, an exile from Orietto, situated in the northern part of Spain, and has been exiled since 1876; he is wealthy, and has traveled and studied the customs, habits and languages of twenty-five different nations.

In a recent letter to The Peruna Medicine Co., of Columbus, Ohio, the Count gives his endorsement to their great catarrh remedy, Peruna, in the following words:

The Canfield, Atlantic City, N. J.

The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio:

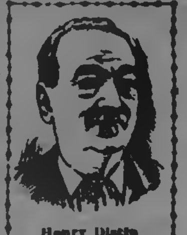
Gentlemen—"Last winter my secretary had a severe attack of la grippe which was cured effectually by the use of four bottles of Peruna, so when I contracted the same unpleasant sickness last fall I at once sent for a bottle. It truly worked wonders, and removed the sickening and sore feeling I had within a few days. I would not be without it now for any money, and when I go away I carry Peruna as a valuable perquisite to my traveling outfit."—JULIAN SEGUNDO, CONDE DE OVIES.

NEARLY everybody is having la grippe again. It resembles somewhat in the beginning a severe cold. A chill or cold spell is followed by aching bones, sore throat, headache, cough, and general weakness. Its course may be quite slight or severe, but in either case it nearly always leaves one in a miserable condition.

Unless Peruna is taken it will be weeks or months before a person regains his usual health. If the victim is fortunate enough to begin the use of Peruna at the commencement of the attack the course of the grip is much shortened, and the system is left in a natural state.

People who have had la grippe, but are still suffering from the after-effects, should not neglect to take Peruna, as it will promptly restore them to health.

Henry Distin, the inventor and maker of all the band instruments of the Henry Distin Manufacturing Co., writes the following from 1441 South Ninth street, Philadelphia, Pa:



Henry Distin.

"I had a bad attack of la grippe last December which lasted more than three months, and which left me with catarrh, and several of my friends advised me to try Peruna. I began with a bottle the first week in March and it certainly did me a great deal of good. I was so well satisfied that I purchased another bottle and followed the directions, and can say that it has cured me."—Henry Distin.

A large per cent of those who are afflicted with this epidemic, instead of getting well as they ought to, will have chronic catarrh as the result. This is almost invariably the case unless Peruna is taken as soon as possible after the grip begins.

Every one who has observed the effect of Peruna during the last three epidemics of la grippe positively knows that this remedy will cure it permanently.

The fact is, however, that a great multitude of people will not take Peruna, and a foundation for chronic catarrh will be laid.

Even in cases where chronic catarrh has affected the lungs, and the early stages of catarrhal consumption have been developed, Peruna can be relied upon as a prompt and lasting cure. La grippe and catarrh are at present the two great enemies of life in the land. Peruna is a cure for either.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, O.

Peruna can be obtained for $1.00 a bottle at all first-class drug stores in Canada. "The Ills of Life," which can be secured at all up-to-date drug stores and upon request is sent free to all, gives a short description of all catarrhal diseases. Address Dr. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio, U. S. A.

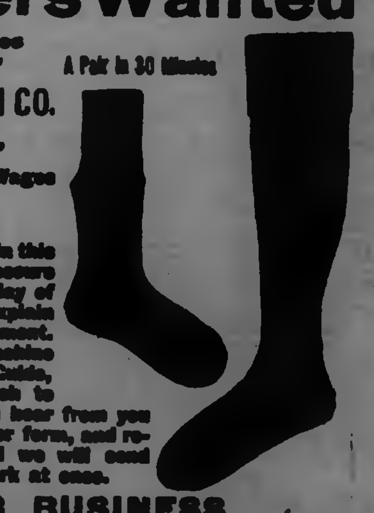
To Work at Their Homes Under the Direction of

The GLASGOW WOOLLEN CO.

37 MELINDA ST., TORONTO,

To Fill Large Contracts—Good Wages Easily Earned.



A Pair in 30 Minutes

We want a few more workers in this locality, at once, and in order to secure your co-operation without the delay of correspondence, we herewith explain our full plan in this advertisement. The work is simple, and the Machine is easily operated, and with the Guide, requires no teacher. If you wish to join our staff of Workers let us hear from you promptly with the Contract, order form, and remittance, as a guarantee, and we will send machine and outfit to begin work at once.

OUR METHOD OF DOING BUSINESS

We wish to secure the services of families to do knitting for us in their homes. Our method is the same as adopted in England. We are the introducers of this plan and the largest knitting concern in Canada.

After long experience, we have been able to produce an Automatic Machine by which all kinds of seamless knitting is now done by our Family Machine, thereby enabling anyone of ordinary intelligence to quickly learn to do the work from the Instruction Guide. All we require is that you use the machine according to directions. The Machine being made expressly for this purpose, and the operation so simple, it cannot possibly make a mistake in its work.

The great demand now is for Bicycle Stockings, Woodmen's Socks, and Motormen's Mittens, and as we are unable to supply the demand, have taken this method of advertising for more help.

The large export trade to the North-west Territories, British Columbia, and the British Colonies, furnishes an unlimited demand for our goods, and, with the combined co-operation of the many families we are employing, together with the large amount of knitting we are able to turn out, by which we save rents, insurance, interest on capital, etc., enables us to undersell any manufacturers of this class of goods, and we have sale for all the knitting we can have turned out.

The price we pay for finished bicycle stockings is $10.00 per hundred, or at the rate of 10c per pair; woodmen's socks, 5c, and motormen's mittens, 15c a pair. All other work in proportion to size.

The machine can be operated by any one of a family, and at our prices any energetic family should be able to sustain themselves comfortably, and in time be a source of independent comfort.

Our plan is to send out each machine to beginners with a sock or stocking partially knitted, and remaining in the machine ready to be continued, and also enough yarn to knit one pair of sample socks or stockings and a simple and complete Instruction Guide, showing how the work is to be done. When the samples have been finished and returned to us satisfactory, we send a quantity of yarn, which you knit and return likewise when finished. We prepay charges on all work one way, and our workers pay return charges. The work, as we have stated, is simple and rapidly done, the machine having a capacity of ten thousand stitches a minute. We have many persons now in our employ who can knit from twenty-five to thirty pairs of socks or stockings a day, and where the time of a family is devoted to the work, you can readily see that $15.00 or $20.00 per week can be easily earned.

We furnish our workers all the materials, yarn, etc., free, and everything that is necessary for the work. We are furnishing the machines only for the exclusive use of those desiring to take employment with us, who must, in order to become a member, send us this Contract Order Form, properly signed by them, and at least one good reference, and remittance accordingly, to give us the necessary assurance that the quantities of valuable yarn we may send from time to time will not be wasted or misappropriated. Our interests are mutual, and this confidence must be established if we are to succeed. We guarantee fair dealing and prompt payment for work, so do not ask us to deviate from our terms, as we cannot make a distinction with one and not another; besides, we are doing an extensive business, and must be governed by business principles.

The manufactured price of the machine is $15, and positively will not be sold to any others than those who will agree to do knitting for us.

If at any time after you commence, and have done an amount of work equal to the purchase price, and wish to discontinue, we will take back machine and refund the amount paid for same, after deducting cost of our expense only.

There is a Large Demand by the Trade for this class of work. Our workers can depend upon it year after year, and if you engage with us (whole or spare time) we will keep you supplied with work as long as you do it satisfactorily for us and return it promptly. We entrust our workers with large quantities of valuable yarn, and as we give references as to our honesty and integrity, we must ask you to do the same, in order that we may know with whom we are dealing.

We have, in as brief a manner as possible, endeavored to show you what our work is, and we simply say as to the machine, it is just what we represent it to be, and will positively do everything we claim for it, or refund the money. Each machine, securely packed with an outfit, is set up for work, thoroughly tested, and a sock or stocking partially knitted before boxing and shipping. Should you decide to engage with us, it will be necessary to send us Cash Contract Order Form, properly signed by you, and at least one good reference, together with the remittance, accordingly, upon receipt of which we will forward machine and outfit ready to commence.

Respectfully yours,

GLASGOW WOOLLEN CO., 37 Melinda Street, Toronto

Our References—Express Companies, Banks, or Toronto Business Houses.

If you wish to examine the machine and see the material before undertaking the work, you can do so by sending $3.00 as a guarantee of good faith, and to defray expense of shipping, and we will send everything to your nearest express company, leaving a balance of twelve dollars to pay the agent and 25 cents for the return charges on the money to us.

We are so frequently and unnecessarily asked if one can learn to knit without a teacher. We say, Yes; it requires no teacher; any person of ordinary intelligence who can read the Instruction Guide can learn to knit at once.

BRITISH WAR OFFICE AGAIN IN TROUBLE

Scandal Likely Over Meat Contracts for Army in South Africa

CECIL RHODES IS ALSO SEVERELY ATTACKED

Contract Originally Sold for £10,000 Obtained by De Beers Group for Two Hundred Thousand Pounds

London, Feb. 8.—The apparent incompetence and, it is claimed, possible dishonesty which permeate the purchasing departments of the British army as revealed this week in Parliament, have caused a public agitation that augurs badly for the War Office. Judging from recent and promised disclosures scarcely any of the supplies for the army in South Africa were secured on business principles. Speculating contractors are now known to have made hundreds of thousands of pounds by reselling contracts. The Opposition vainly endeavored to get details regarding the new contract for the supply of meat, announced by the Government in the House of Commons, with the view of ascertaining if a saving over the former methods will really be effected. The Government successfully avoided answering, but the Associated Press understands that the contract in question was first re-sold at £10,000 premium, and then at £40,000, while Cecil Rhodes says the De Beers group handled over £200,000, and thus finally secured the privilege of supplying the troops in South Africa with fresh meat. These figures are likely to be shortly published here, and when known will doubtless add fuel to the fire of public indignation which threatens to centre around the Secretary for War, Mr. Brodrick, as viciously as it did around Lord Lansdowne when the latter was opposed for the early blunders of the war.

SWINDLED ON LARGE SCALE.

A dozen or more committees of investigation are now sitting or are in process of formation. But, as The Saturday Review says, "these are only too often synonyms of oblivion. The facts remaining," adds The Review, "that we have been swindled on a very large scale."

While these stringent criticisms of the War Office are being publicly aired there is proceeding beneath the surface a revolt which threatens to be of ever greater importance. The leading authorities of the volunteers, including many of the commanders of the best-known regiments, several of whom being titled persons, and nearly all wealthy, are holding frequent meetings to decide on the best method of defeating Mr. Brodrick's new volunteer regulations. The committee which Mr. Brodrick appointed to hear the grievances only aggravated matters. The commanders of the leading regiments had previously formed themselves into a deputation to wait on Mr. Brodrick, and he, temporarily, declined to see them, but the Secretary for War stole a march on the members of the deputation by announcing in the House that he had appointed a committee of his own in which but one of the deputation was included. His action created intense feeling among the members of the original deputation, who privately declare that the new volunteer regulations and the "dead-head committee" were introduced for the sole purpose of making opposition possible.

TROSTELS HAD A PRESENTIMENT THAT SOMETHING WAS IMPENDING

Victims of the Chicago Explosion Took Out Life Insurance Policies Just Before the Catastrophe Occured and Overwhelmed Them.

Chicago, Feb. 8.—By an explosion of illuminating gas in the basement of a two story frame building at 376 Twenty-second street last evening, a number of people, the total said to be eleven, lost their lives, and the building was blown into kindling wood. The flames from the gas main reached the Trostel butcher shop. The building was a three-story frame structure, and it had been weakened and nearly wrecked by the shock. It is supposed that the occupants of the building were knocked unconscious, or were too panic-stricken to rush from the place. The building collapsed, and the occupants, with one exception, were carried with it to the basement. Many persons in buildings near the explosion were knocked down. There were six children in the Trostel family, and there is little doubt that all the eight members of the family were killed.

At 2 o'clock this morning, eight bodies had been recovered and identified.

The cause of the explosion has not yet been fixed. Some business men in the vicinity said the explosion was in a defective boiler connected with the gas system in the basement of the building occupied by Butcher Trostel, which employees had attempted to thaw out. Others insisted that the explosion was caused by the gas itself, but they were unable to say how the gas had caused it.

The most graphic story of the accident was told by J. Pauly of 66 Twenty-second street place, who stood across the street when the explosion occurred.

"The first thing I knew," he said, "I was blown against a telegraph pole. I was facing the market, and it seemed that the whole building rose in the air at once and then collapsed into the cellar a heap of ruins. I ran across the street, and as I crossed the car tracks I could hear the cries of the people imprisoned in the wreckage. Almost immediately the flames burst out all over the place, and it seemed that everything was on fire at once.

"Then I caught sight of a man crawling out from the basement. He did not seem to be badly hurt, and called for help. I recognized him as the sausage maker Trostel had hired a few days before. I do not know his name. A man who ran up jumped down to help him, and between us we got him to the street. He was able to walk, and went away at once.

The first explosion in the building disconnected the gas mains, and they caught fire. The fire seemed to follow the pipes and five minutes later the manhole west, in Archer avenue blew up with almost as loud a report as the first. The manhole to the east followed in a few minutes.

"We could hear the cries in the basement growing fainter, and we had to allow the sufferers to die without doing anything to help them."

On Monday Otto Trostel insured his life for $5,000, making his wife the beneficiary. Yesterday Mrs. Trostel called on the insurance agent and asked if the two oldest children could be insured. She said she had a presentiment that something would happen. The agent was instructed to write policies of $2,000 each.

DAMAGED BY SNOW-PLOUGH

Many Shade Trees are Damaged and Scathed by the Snow Plow

In different parts of the town the young and promising shade trees are damaged by the snow plow. Many of the trees have the bark bruised and torn off. This may do serious damage to the shade trees that were doing so well, and just beginning to be an ornament to the streets.

The snow plow conductors should make a note of this and exercise sufficient care that the trees will not be injured in the process of removing the snow.

It might also be well to have these injured trees examined, for a little attention now and an application of pitch might prevent any injurious results.

Protective legislation against dead-beats, rates to drummers and the theatrical profession and other matters of paramount importance to those engaged in the hotel business are scheduled for consideration.

TO UNSEAT MAYOR OF LINDSAY

Defeated Candidate After His Worship and Four of the Councillors

Affidavits were filed at Osgoode Hall to-day in a motion to unseat John Ingles, mayor of Lindsay, and John Hore, Alexander Jackson, John O'Reilly, and W. N. Robson, councillors, the allegation being that they diverted certain school funds for waterworks and park purposes, having already spent $800 out of an appropriation of $5,000.

The relator is Arthur D. Mallon, mail clerk, who was a defeated candidate for the council.

Charles Beckett has taken proceedings to have John Robertson and Richard J. Avery disqualified as councillors for the town of Strathroy. They are alleged to have a contract with the town.

Beckett filed security for costs at Osgoode Hall to-day.

A PROSPEROUS COMPANY

Report of the Annual Meeting of the Equity Fire Insurance Company.

In the financial statement submitted to the shareholders of the Equity Fire Insurance Company, at the fourth annual meeting, held in Toronto on the 5th inst., a very satisfactory showing is made. This young company has already acquired a large and lucrative business. The premium income amounted to $126,960.93, being an increase over the previous year of $69,142. Adding accrued interest, the total income was $129,444.95. After paying fire losses, cost of management, and all expenses, there is a balance of $28,548.20 to the good. Adding this to the former balance of $8,295.19 there is a total surplus on the 31st December last of $36,843.39.

The above speaks for itself, and is certainly a very inspiring report. Mr. Greenwood Brown, the capable manager, and the Board of Directors, are to be congratulated on the result of the year's operations.

A WONDERFUL FUEL

Made From Common Clay—Earth Treated Chemically Burns With a White, Strong Heat.

Omaha, Feb 6—E. J. Hoffman, a Chicago & Northwestern railroad engineer, who retired from his vocation because of ill-health, has invented in his little hat factory, where he also earns a living, a fuel that he asserts is composed of clay to the extent of ninety per cent. He says that one day while at work in the shop, there was accidentally discovered by him a peculiar action of certain chemicals and gasoline. Eagerly he followed up the clue with numberless experiments, until finally he was enabled to give to the world a fuel, he declares, cheaper than coal and better than coal.

The fuel burns in a stove, grate or furnace readily; it creates no smoke, no cinders, and burns to white ashes, twenty-five pounds of the fuel producing only a quantity of ashes that may be held in the palm of the hand. In the combustion, the fire literally consumes its own ashes, and a ton of fuel will go further than two tons of the best coal, producing five times the amount of heat that coal creates. One pound of the strange mixture will suffice to keep the kitchen range hot for one hour.

A recent test of Hoffman's clay coal in the furnace of a large boiler, developed the fact that 250 pounds of it created 30 per cent. more steam and lasted longer in burning than 600 lbs. of first quality steam coal.

The invention, it is predicted, is destined to solve the fuel problem for the whole world, inasmuch as the product may be manufactured 1000 miles from an oil-producing locality for about $2 a ton. Near an oil field it can be made for one-fifth of that price approximately.

For factories and manufacturing establishments it is proposed to have a plant at or near the furnace doors. Dirt will be hauled, treated in a few moments, and the fireman shovels his fuel under the boilers. With a draught on can be produced a heat the like of which has never been secured from coal, or, with all draughts closed, one may have a glowing fire not unlike that of anthracite coal in a base-burner. For household use it is proposed to subject lumps in moulds to a pressure of 1,000 pounds.

Two Chicago-Omaha railroads will shortly begin using Hoffman's fuel for a thorough test in the locomotives. The immense packing-house plants of Armour, Cudahy & Swift, at South Omaha, will also test the invention.

MRS. SOFFEL'S DEFENSE

The Woman Who Released the Biddle's Will Live

Pittsburg, Pa., Feb. 8—The Prison Board is satisfied Mrs. Soffel had assistance within the prison walls, and, before the Biddle incident is finally closed, it is probable there will be an almost entirely new force of attaches at the jail.

Mrs. Soffel is already taking steps to defend herself, and has written to a prominent Pittsburg attorney to engage his services. Her father is said to be quite well-to-do, and, as her parents are relenting, she hopes to receive aid from them.

Despatches from the Butler hospital to-day report Mrs. Soffel's condition as unchanged. While it is believed she will get well, the danger is not passed and on account of this uncertainty in her condition, nothing is being done in the way of preparations for her removal to Pittsburg. If she lives, in addition to answering the charge of aiding prisoners to escape, she will be confronted by charges of furnishing the Biddles with firearms and aiding the felonious assault upon the jail guards and the officers who effected the capture of Butler.

AUSTRALIA IS MADE OF THE RIGHT STUFF

A PREFERENTIAL TARIFF

What the Austrialian Ministers Will do at the Coronation

Canadian Atlantic Line—Rumor That the C.P.R. Will be Asked to Run a Fast Line at an Increased Subsidy.

London, Feb. 10—The Australasian Ministers clearly mean business at the Coronation conference regarding trade. Mr. Wise, the Attorney-General for New South Wales, suggests an Australian rebate of customs duties on all goods, British and foreign, imported in British bottoms. The idea of including foreign goods in the preference is to avoid a contravention of the most-favored-nation clause. Mr. Barton, the Federal Premier of Australia, approves this suggestion, and Mr. Seddon, the Premier of New Zealand, is willing to give a customs rebate on British, and not on foreign, goods imported to New Zealand in British bottoms.

It is thought these early colonial advances are made in the hope of strengthening that section of the British Cabinet which would welcome some measure of British reciprocity with the colonies, as part of the forthcoming British budget. In budget matters, however, Sir Michael Hicks-Beach has hitherto been supreme, and he has always flouted the preferential idea.

FAST ATLANTIC SERVICE

Though the Canadian Government is not known in the best informed circles here to be taking any fresh step in regard to a fast mail service, the subject was much discussed at last night's dinner of the Canada Club. The impression seemed to prevail that nothing adequate or effective can be done until the Canadian Pacific Railway is invited by the Canadian Government to undertake the project, with an increase of subsidy beyond the $750,000 already enacted by the Canadian Parliament. No doubt is felt that the British Government would assent to co-operate in any increased subsidy if the Canadian Pacific Railway were directly concerned.

Sydney has gained many influential friends lately as the terminal port. Its adoption in place of Quebec would necessitate only three instead of four steamers.

It is suggested that the Intercolonial Railway would possibly be transferred to the Canadian Pacific Railway as part of the deal.

AMERICAN HOLD ON RHODESIA.

Syndicate Buys 100,000 Shares of the Chartered Company

London, Feb. 8—The South African Review to-day says: "An American syndicate has bought 100,000 shares of the Chartered Company. At the present time this is not important, but if our information is correct within two years we may see the Chartered Company largely controlled from New York and eventually exerting a political influence hitherto quite unforeseen.

"If Rhodesia is included with the other colonies in the group of federated States forming a British South Africa such a contingency as the control of Rhodesian resources from New York would not have much significance. But if Rhodesia is to remain outside the federated group this contingency must be faced."

Canada and Britain's

Toronto, February .—In an address on "Empire Problems," delivered under the auspices of the Daughters of the Empire, Dr. G. R. Parkin, principal of Upper Canada, declared that Canada should not leave herself open to the imputation that she was sending her soldiers to Africa C.O.D. It would be a lasting disgrace, said the principal, for Canada to allow her sons to go as mercenaries. By paying for her own soldiers this country would raise herself in the estimation of the British people, and apart from the justice of the cause the expenditure would be more than returned. Dr. Parkin held that Canada should bear her in the defence of the Empire, and declared that when Canada's representatives went to the coronation this year they should go with a fixed mandate from the people regarding a scheme of imperial federation.

SHOULD LAW MAKERS BE LAW BREAKERS?

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Please allow me space in the columns of your valuable paper to inform the ratepayers of Ashburnham regarding the ungentlemanly language recently used to me by one of the members of the council.

At the last meeting of the village Council held on Monday evening, Mr. Johnston reported the appointments made at the committee meeting held one week previous. Mr. Thompson was appointed assessor, at a salary of $45, and Mr. George McWilliams, assistant assessor, at $35. While discussing the appointment of sanitary inspector, Mr. Johnston said he was prepared to stand by any man that had done his duty faithfully. At this remark, I asked permission to speak, which was granted. I said as I had been assessor last year and had, along with Mr. Thompson, done my work faithfully and satisfactorily, and had returned the books in time, and as there were no appeals to the Court of Revision, the ratepayers were perfectly satisfied. I wanted to know how they had rejected me. I said I would think more of a man that would never make a promise than to promise and not fulfil it. Mr. Sheridan had promised to aid me in again getting the assessor's position, and had supported some one else. With that he arose in a rage, and called me a liar, and did so with no reprimand from the chief magistrate. This ungentlemanly and uncalled for language was twice used by Mr. Sheridan.

What I want to know is: Can such language be tolerated at any council meeting without a severe reprimand of some kind? I answer that it should not. The best illustration that I can give suitable for such persons is in one of the colored churches in Tennessee, a presiding elder was making his first calls, and preaching quarterly sermons. He called on Mr. Johnstone, the minister who had charge of the circuit, and on Sunday morning preached his first sermon. After the service was over, Mr. Johnston walked up to the elder, and said: "Well Brudder Smith, what do you tink of dis yere congregation?" "Well brudder Johnston," was the reply, "if I must tell the truth, I must; I tink day are the shabbiest lot of people I ever seed in all my life."

Bro. Johnston in astonishment, answered: "How is dat, Brudder Smith! Dis yere people has had more religion and more campmeetings dan any odder people in dis yere town."

"Dat's it! Dat's it! brudder Johnston; they have wore out de seat of dere pants backsliding, and dere knees with asking forgiveness."

Now I think it is about time we changed some of the members of our council board, for the ones we have are acting very shabbily.

NAPOLEON'S DESCENDENTS

Editor Morning Times.

Sir Kindly print the names and lines of descent of the descendants of the brothers and sisters of the great Napoleon. Who is the present Napoleonic pretender to the throne of France and what is his line of descent?

N.C.H.

Ans.—Napoleon's only legitimate child was the King of Rome, who died in 1832. His eldest brother, Joseph, had no sons. Lucien left four sons: Charles, Louis Lucien, Pierre, Antoine. Of these, Charles, who died in 1857, left three sons, Joseph, died 1865; Lucien, Cardinal Bonaparte, died 1895, and Charles, died 1899. Louis Lucien left no sons; Pierre, who died in 1881, left Roland, who married the daughter of M. Blanc, the proprietor of Monte Carlo; he is interested in oceanography. The last of Lucien's sons, Antoine, left no sons. Louis, Napoleon's second younger brother, had a son, Napoleon III., died 1873, who left a son, the Prince Imperial, killed in Zululand in 1879. Napoleon's youngest brother, Jerome, had two sons; Jerome, died in 1847, and Napoleon, died in 1891. The latter was known as "Plonplon," he left two sons, Victor, born in 1862, and recognized as the head of the family; and Louis, a General in the Russian Army. By the laws of primogeniture the head of the family is Prince Roland Bonaparte, as he represents the second brother of Napoleon, while Victor represents the fourth.

Rather Too Severe

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I read your article a few days ago on prohibition, and was greatly pleased with it. The fact is, prohibitionists are not sincere. The very pulpit is often afraid to denounce wrong-doing as it should. If some of the ministers had their way, they would revise the commandments after this wise:

Thou shalt not steal less than a million dollars.

Thou shalt not break the Sabbath, but bend it double if there is money in it.

Thou shalt not have more than one wife at your home.

Thou shalt not covet, but get all you can and keep all you get.

Thou shalt not kill a single man, but like our friends in the Philippines, murder them by thousands and it is all O.K.

Thou shalt not be guilty of idolatry; worship the true and the living dollar.

FREE LANCE

Items of Interest

London, Feb. 10.—An Irish boy who wanted to go to sea made a daring effort to attain his object at Swansea yesterday.

Richard Gear is fourteen years of age and belongs to Belfast. He tried to enter the navy, but was found to be too young and too short. He, however, secured a place as engineers steward on board a steamer trading to South America, and so gained some experience of life on board ship.

Then he worked his way from Belfast to South Wales on another ship, and reached Swansea a few days ago. The search for a ship was discouraging and fruitless. No captain seemed to want the little fellow. He was without friends, and was homeless and hungry.

He resolved to try his luck at Glasgow. Here again Richard was in a difficulty, for he had no money and could not find a ship to take him. He decided on the bold step yesterday morning of seizing a steam tug and starting off on the passage himself.

It was the tug Katie he chose. She was lying alongside a quay, and Gear found no difficulty in casting off the moorings and swinging her into the fairway. The engines can be worked from the deck, so the little voyager was able to be his own steersman and engineer.

TURNED BACK.

The responsibility of a steamer on the Irish Sea in winter became more apparent when he reached the harbor entrance. He did not know the course and bearings for the trip to Glasgow, and he reluctantly turned back.

The manoeuvre of bringing the Katie round for the return was managed in seamanlike fashion. She passed up the channel and was brought alongside the quay without mishap, and apparently without being particularly observed.

The next step was to get a sailing vessel, and Richard Gear chose a yacht belonging to Mr. Samuel Mutters. It so happened that Mr. Mutters went down to the shore as the boy pirate hoisted the mainsail and got under way. Mr. Mutters was surprised and proceeded to investigate.

He joined a sailor in a small boat and they gave chase to the disappearing yacht. Richard, however, had all the advantage for a time, and got past the piers and outside the harbor.

He should then have set a course bearing for Mumbles Head, but he stood away for Port Talbot Bay. The chase was a long and tedious one, and Mr. Mutters became more and more puzzled as to the movements of the yacht, especially as no one was to be seen on board.

When at last he overhauled the vessel he was still more astonished to find a little fellow of fourteen the sole occupant. All Gear could say in explanation was: "I wanted to go to Glasgow."

TO FRANCE BY KITE.

London, Feb 8.—On behalf of the War Office, Major Trollope, R. E., the balloon expert, again went to Worcester yesterday to witness the experiments with kites by Mr. S. F. Cody of Wyse County, Texas, but for the third time the weather made the tests impossible. Another attempt is to be made to-day, when Mr. Cody will employ a half mile cable attached to three kites, which he claims will raise him in a suspended basket to a height of 300 yards, while his apparatus will enable him to navigate within a radius of 300 or 400 yards. Later on Mr. Cody proposes to cross to France by means of kites attached by a two mile cable to a boat and a basket, the idea being to make the flying kites tow the boat across the Channel.

SILKS FOR THE CORONATION

London, Feb. 9.—Thousands of pounds are being spent abroad on goods required for the coronation which, if the Queen's wishes were consulted, would have gone into the pockets of British manufacturers and workmen. Some of the great West End dressmakers and silk and velvet houses are the worst offenders, for although they complain that many of the orders which ought to have come to them are going to Paris, they are themselves buying largely from continental houses. The excuse they give is that English silks are old-fashioned, and that neither in width nor colors can they compete with the products of foreign looms.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Feb 8.—Frederick Schultz was hanged in the jail yard here this morning by Hangman Radcliffe, for the murder of Mrs. Craig on August 7th last. He went to the scaffold with the same composure that he has shown all through. On the way from the jail to the scaffold he met Constable Pearson, and said, "Good-bye, Mr. Pearson, I hope to see you some time again." On the scaffold he said: "Here goes an innocent soul into eternity. That is all I have to say." The drop fell at 8 a.m. Ten minutes after Schultz was pronounced dead by Jail Surgeon Adams. He had been known as Lindsay as well as Schultz, but confessed before death that neither was his correct name, which he declined to give on account of friends. The black flag was displayed from the Court House and the Town Hall bell tolled fifteen minutes before and after the execution.

London, Feb. 6 — The new battleship London, upon which it is probable the Prince of Wales will fly his flag at the coronation review at Spithead, is now undergoing her official trials. She was laid down in 1898.

Ottawa, Feb. 6—The C.P.R. land sales last year were double those of any previous season, the area disposed of being 530,916 acres. In the whole of 1894 only 40,000 acres were sold altogether by the Company, while in November last the sales for this single month amounted to 151,822 acres. The amount realized by the C.P.R. from its land sales last year was $2,642,000. In 1891 it was $414,945. The Canada and North-West Land Company's sales in 1901 almost doubled the record of the previous year. While the Hudson Bay Company, the Manitoba and North-West Land Company, and other concerns all did a business away beyond the best showing of previous years.

ENGLISH AND FRENCH ARE HAVING TROUBLE

In Abyssina--English Capitalists Secure Contro of a French Railway.

FRENCH GOVERNMENT GROWS JEALOUS OF THEM

The French Want to Buy English Capitalists Out but They Refuse to Sell—France Using Political Influence

London, Feb. 8.—A despatch to The London Times, from Paris, outlines complications which have arisen in Abyssinia between the English and French. French financiers were granted a concession to build a railway in Abyssinia. The funds were insufficient, and the work stopped. English capitalists were invested and bought up eleven thousand of the seventeen thousand shares of stock, thereby assuming the controlling interest in the road. Work was resumed, and the English interest now wants to built a branch line to Port Zeila. The French oppose this as a deviation of the route would be harmful to their territory. A bill has been introduced into the Chamber of Deputies providing for the buying out of the English. The English capitalists, however, refuse to sell. France is now bringing political influence to bear on King Menelik, to persuade him not allow the Zeila extension.

GREAT BRITAIN AND RUSSIA

Action of Germany May Shift Englands Friendship to The Great Northern Power

London, Feb. 10—As a practical people the estrangement between England and Germany does not take the form of abuse. It is likely to assume a more practical shape. Opinion is gradually leaning towards the abandonment of any idea of a working friendship with Germany and transferring to Russia the weight of British influence in Europe and Asia. We have paid heavy blackmail to Germany in the shape of Heligoland, East Africa, China and Samoa. I hear of other graceful concessions as being likely to occur when the war is over. diplomatic circles that the secret tre It is moreover, stated in responsibleaty with Germany on the subject of Persia gives the former power access to the Persian Gulf. If that be true this secret treaty is one of the most utterly fatuous acts ever perpetrated by our most incapable department. The price of a working understanding with Russia is a port in the Persian Gulf. She will get it anyhow, just as she obtained a war port in the Black Sea, Port Arthur, the control of the Dardanelles and diplomatic victory all along the line in China. An understanding with Russia does not mean surrender to a trade rival. On the contrary, an Anglo-Russian friendship would mean the development of Siberia with British capital, the isolation of Germany, the neutrality, if not the friendship, of France, and the recovery of the position which England occupied in Europe at the beginning of the last century. Although practical considerations govern British policy, the average man is tired of seeing the German statesmen wipe their boots upon the King of England's uniform. Germany isolated will present tough problems to her rulers, and the isolation will be the harvest that Germany will reap from the crop of slander, made in Germany, against our brave and kindly soldiers in the front. A friend of great experience in journalism on both sides of the Atlantic was yesterday deploring in heartfelt terms that scarcely any of the great American newspapers are represented by writers [illegible] who reflect the real feeling of the vast majority of the nation, and that scarcely any of the London correspondents are in sympathy with the opinions of the overwhelming mass of the inhabitants of this country.

Stevenson's Advice to Writers.

In the December number of "Harper's Magazine" there are some letters by R. L. Stevenson which have not previously been published. They contain, as lengthy letters written by R. L. S. always did contain, sundry excellent remarks. We append a few excerpts:

"Beware of realism; it is the devil; it is one of the means of art, and now they make it the end! And such is the farce of the age in which a man lives that we all, even those of us who most detest it, sin by realism."

"In your art bow your head over technique. Think of technique when you rise and when you go to bed. Forget purposes in the meanwhile; get to love technical processes, to glory in technical successes; get to see the world entirely through technical spectacles, to see it entirely in terms of what you can. Then, when you have anything to say, the language will be apt and copious."

"Cling to your youth. It is an artist's stock-in-trade. Don't give in that you are ageing, and you won't age. See the good in other people's work; it will never be yours. See the bad in your own, and don't cry about it; it will be there always. Try to use your faults; at any rate, use your knowledge of them."

"The sins of the most innocent, if they were exactly visited, would ruin them to the door. And if you know any man who believes himself to be worthy of a wife's love, a friend's affection, you may rest assured he is worthy of nothing but a kicking. We are not meant to be good in this world, but try to be, and fail, and keep on trying, and when we get a kick, to say 'Thank God!' and when we get a buffet, to say 'Just so: well hit!'"

Two Furniss Stories.

The poor Saxon "towrist"—what he may suffer in the Emerald Isle! There is a story on record of three Irishmen rushing away from the race meeting at Punchestown to catch a train back to Dublin. At the moment a train from a long distance pulled up at the station, and the three men scrambled in. In the carriage was seated one other passenger. As soon as they had regained their breath one said:

"Pat, have you got th' tickets?"

"What tickets? I've got me loife; I thought I'd lost that gettin' in th' thrain. Have you got 'em, Moike?"

"Oh! Begorrah, I haven't."

"Oh, we're all done for, thin," said the third. "They'll charge us roight from the other side of Oireland."

The old gentleman looked over his newspaper and said:

"You are quite safe, gintlemen; wait till we get to the next station."

They all three looked at each other. "Bedad, he's a directhor—we're done for now entoirely."

But as soon as the train pulled up the little gentleman jumped out and came back with three first-class tickets. Handing them to the astonished strangers, he said: "Whist, I'll tell ye how I did it. I wint along the thrain—'Tickets, plase; tickets, plase,' I called, and these belong to three Saxon towrists in another carriage."

A stoutly made little fellow of eight, to his mother, who happened to be extremely thin:

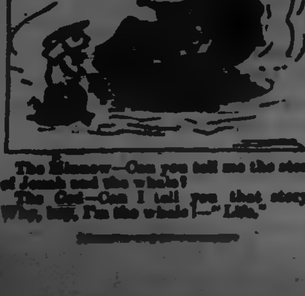
"Oh, mother, I do believe you must be the very sweetest woman in the world!"

"Thanks, very much, Lawrence. But why so affectionate? What do you want?"

"I don't want anything. I only know you must be the very sweetest woman in the world."

"Really, you are too flattering. Why this sudden outburst of affection?"

"Well, you know, I've been thinking over the old, old saying, 'The nearer the bone the sweeter the meat.'"—Harry Furniss, in "The Strand."



The Minnow—Can you tell me the story of Jonah and the whale?
The Cod—Can I tell you that story! Why, boy, I'm the whale!—"Life."

The Author's First Reverse.

On reading A First Acceptance, in the September "Contributors' Club," we wondered if the author had ever contemplated a far more surprising experience than the first acceptance, and that is the first rejection after the first acceptance! That is indeed a crisis in the young author's career. Up to the time when he received his first acceptance, the novice, however high his conceit had swelled, as each new plan and aspiration feebly projected itself on paper, had yet in the bottom of his soul realised that his arms were untried, and that he might be riding for a fall. But when tangible proof of his first success had reached him, and the magic words "The check will follow upon publication" had dazzled his vision, how proudly he scanned the future which was his by virtue of the ink-bottle!

Idea after idea floated before him; "songs without words" to which he would supply noun and adjective; thoughts inadequately expressed, fancies inhospitably received, which he would succor by the might of his right hand. Or perhaps the didactic devil tempted him, and he fancied the whole world his congregation, to whom he would preach at his leisure.

Alas, fellow scribbler, passing through this Fool's Paradise, we pity you; by the Law of the Jungle—

"As high as we have mounted in delight,
In our dejection do we sink as low."

Perhaps the next step will lead you to the Pons Asinorum which ends in the Via Dolorosa. We have crossed it ourselves, we who had thought our feet so firmly planted on the ladder of literature that we needed only to mount higher and higher till we o'ertopped the stars.

When we had spent our first check a thousand times in anticipation, and at least twice in reality, we decided in gratitude to honor with our continued favor that hospitable magazine which had at last recognized our genius.

No longer stealing out at night to conceal the trembling fingers with which we dropped that long white envelope into the post-box, but flauntingly, in the garish daylight, in the face of all men, we sent forth our manuscript as a conqueror demanding tribute.

Then we waited; security is ever serene. Poor tremblers on the threshold may listen with beating heart for the postman's quick peal of the bell, or look longingly at his non-committal gray coat and his fatal bag. All those sensations were of the past for us; they belonged to the era before we were recognized.

Then suddenly a bolt from the blue—that homing pigeon, our manuscript, returns to us again. At first astonishment is paramount—there must be some mistake. Next wrath—it is a conspiracy to defraud us of our just reward; an envious world cannot tolerate our success. Last, a still, small, spiteful voice within us whispers: "Your bubble is pricked. I always told you that there wasn't much in you, after all!"

What happens to us then? Where are our visions of thoughts clamoring to be clothed in winged words? Where are the songs only waiting to sing themselves through our lips to a silent world? What has become of our pulpit?

How are the mighty fallen! How doth the city which we would have enlightened sit solitary! Ours is no common sorrow; we are none of those who have only suffered the casual buffetings of fortune; ours is the bitter trial of the man who has faced betrayal in the house of his friend.

Fellow quill-drivers, answer us: is there any shock to vanity like unto this, or any lesson in modesty?—"Atlantic Monthly."

The Wandering Shade.

Then came I to a knight who stood before the wall swearing mightily.

Now there was no one near him, and he stood looking at a small black box which hung against the said wall. Yet sware he with exceeding great fervor and many gnashings of the teeth and tearing of the hair, saying:

"Blank - blankety - blank - blank to blanknation! Why 'nell don't you gimme Black 7-11-44?"

Then came a small spirit voice from the mysterious box:

"Number, please!"

Then did the angry knight curse still more fearfully and clutch the black box from the wall and cast it upon the floor and spring up and down on it until naught was left but splinters and wire. Whereupon I approached to expostulate with him.

"Lo, friend," quoth I, "this is unseemly! What hath the unfeeling box done that thou thus gettest upon thine ear?"

Alas! the words he spake to me I may not even repeat; but suffice it to say that even yet the remembrance of them maketh my ghostly hair to curl; and I cannot even think of the black box without involuntarily dissolving into thin air—which same causeth me sundry and much inconvenience.

But 'tis truly a wonderful age and a strange land where men have prepared against the wall a machine to which they retire when angry and ease their feelings by swearing into it.

But it puzzleth me to figure out what becometh of all the profanity. And what meaneth the spirit when it answereth in a still, squeaking voice:

"Number, please!"—San Francisco "Bulletin."

"Crying for the Moon"
Has become a proverbial phrase to express the futility of mere desire. There are a great many people who think it is as useless to hope for health as to cry for the moon. They have tried many medicines and many doctors, but all in vain.
A great many hopeless men and women have been cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery; people with obstinate coughs, bleeding lungs, night-sweats and other symptoms of disease which if neglected or unskillfully treated find a fatal termination in consumption.
"Golden Medical Discovery" has a wonderful healing power. It increases the nutrition of the body, and so gives strength to throw off disease. It cleanses the blood from poisonous impurities and enriches it with the red corpuscles of health. It is not a stimulant, but a strength giving medicine. It contains no alcohol, neither opium, cocaine, nor any other narcotic.
Sometimes the extra profit paid by inferior medicines tempts the dealer to offer a substitute as "just as good" as "Discovery." If you are convinced that "Discovery" will cure you accept nothing else.
"I was in poor health when I commenced taking Dr. Pierce's medicine," writes Mr. Elmer Lawler, of Volga, Jefferson Co., Indiana. "I had stomach, kidney, heart, and lung trouble. Was not able to do any work. I had a severe cough and hemorrhage of the lungs, but after using your medicine a while I commenced to gain in strength and flesh, and stopped coughing right away. Took about six bottles of the 'Golden Medical Discovery' then, and last spring I had Grippe, and it settled on my lungs, leaving me with a severe cough. I had the doctor, but he didn't seem to help me any; so I commenced your medicine again and took three or four bottles of the 'Discovery' and two vials of Dr. Pierce's Pellets, and that straightened me up. I feel like a different person. I gladly recommend your medicine to all sufferers, for I know it cured me."
Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation by curing its cause.

Green, the English historian, one day asked a friend which of all the inventions of their day had done the most for the people as a whole. His friend guessed this and that, but the answer was: "Beyond doubt, sixpenny photographs." A reply involving quite as great an absurdity as that was made by Cecil Rhodes in answer to a lady who, seeking to draw him out, suggested that he owed his phenomenal rise to the impetus of noble sentiments. "Madam," returned Mr. Rhodes, "I owe my fortune simply and solely to cold mutton." "Cold mutton!" gasped the lady. "O Mr. Rhodes, what do you mean?" "When I was young," continued the South African millionaire, "I was so dosed with cold mutton, and I hated it so cordially, that I resolved to grow rich in order to put it on one side for the rest of my life. Yes, madam, cold mutton was at the root of my success; noble sentiments had nothing to do with it."

Anxious Father (from top of stairs)—Say, Mary Jane! Mary Jane—Yes, pa pa. "Is it eleven o'clock yet?" "Yes papa." "Well, give the young man my compliments, and ask him to kindly close the front door from the outside."—Chicago "Daily News."

A clergyman observed his little son attentively studying a map of the world. "What place are you looking for, Willie?" he enquired. The small boy knit his brows and traveled a circuitous route with his forefinger before he answered earnestly, "Trying to find Christendom."

DR. GOLDBERG, 208 Woodward Ave. DETROIT, MICH.

A correspondent of the "Cri de Paris" has ascertained certain facts in regard to President Loubet's wardrobe which are being copied with extraordinary avidity by the Parisian and provincial press. It seems that M. Loubet has five Prince Albert coats—two for summer, two for winter, and one extra for grand occasions. This last one has been worn only three times—at the opening of the exposition of 1900, at the reception of the King of Sweden, and at the garden party in honor of the Shah of Persia. This "gala" coat differs from the others in that it has heavy silk lining and lapels. M. Loubet invariably wears a plain, black satin tie—not tied by hand, but sewn together and attached with a clasp. M. Loubet used formerly to wear false cuffs, but one day, while making a sudden gesture, the right-hand cuff slipped off and rolled on the floor. This happened at the Luxembourg Palace, when M. Loubet was president of the Senate. Since then, M. Loubet's shirts have been made with permanently attached wristbands. M. Loubet's trousers are very peculiar. They are black or gray in color, but their cut is of the old-fashioned pattern, with the top of the trousers coming up as high as the armpits. M. Loubet has always worn trousers of this quaint type, and is so accustomed to them that he has an inveterate dislike for evening clothes, which, with low-cut, open waistcoat, render the armpit trousers impossible. The president's wardrobe is, however, provided with several pairs of evening trousers suitable for low-cut, open waistcoats.

THE

THE

STAR

Patented March 10th, 1894,

BY

Geo. Brousseau, Quebec.

For hard and soft coal, coke or peat. The only stove without grate and possessing a tube for gas escape.

DESCRIPTION

The Star is the latest and best stove in the market for slow combustion—why? The inside is lined with fire brick all in one piece and cemented to the outer shell. No danger of breaking or loss of pieces.

The Star has a tube behind for the escape of the gas. As anyone who uses soft coal knows, the gas accumulates under the fresh coal, and if there is no escape there will be explosions and puffs of smoke. In the Star this disappears in the gas escape. The Star has a sliding damper and ornamental door of mica.

After being filled, the Star will heat for 48 hours without attention. It will hold fire and give out heat longer than any other stove.

The Star is 25 per cent more economical than any other stove.

MORE THAN 4,000 ARE IN USE IN THE LOWER PROVINCES.

Clean the back pipe every two weeks.

Coal Consumers, Attention

We certify that we have in use one No. 3 Star stove in our large pool and billiard rooms the size of which is 45 by 35 feet, with 14 feet ceiling. We have perfect heat, and the most coal we have used on the coldest day yet has been 3 scuttles in twenty-four hours. We are so well pleased with the stove that we would not use any other.

ROCAMORA & CALLAHAN.

I have been using a No. 3 STAR stove in the sitting-room at the City Hotel for some time past, and it has proved so satisfactory that I have ordered two more to replace two stoves in the upstairs. The Star gives more heat than the other stoves with half the amount of coal.

MARTIN CONNORS.

We have in use in our Composing Room a No. 3 Star coal stove and wish to state that it is giving constant satisfaction. The entire absence of gas by the escape provided, the inference of heat and the saving in coal are special features of the Star, and it requires a minimum of attention.

TIMES PRINTING CO.

We are using one No. 3 "Star" stove in our large rooms where formerly we had four large wood heaters, and get more heat now than before. The wood stoves cost us $2.50 every week for fuel and the Star stove, which we are now using, costs us only $1.00, making a saving of $1 per week in the price of fuel—which would soon pay for the stove. We can recommend this stove to any person wanting a first-class heater. We would not use any other stove that is made.

Anecdotal.

Once, during a dry season in China, the late Li Hung Chang called on Minister Conger, and spoke of the weather. "Yes," said Mr. Conger, "it seems to be dry everywhere. It is dry in America, too. I read in one of our papers the other day that in many places in the West the people were praying for rain." "What!" said the earl, "do your people pray to their God for rain?" "Oh, yes," said the minister, "they often pray for rain." "And does their God send it when they pray for it?" asked the earl. "Yes, sometimes their prayers are answered, and sometimes they are not." "All the same like Chinese joss, hey?" said the earl, with a grin and a chuckle.

General Ballington Booth of the Volunteers of America, tells a story of a prayer-meeting held in New York on the East Side during the recent mayoralty campaign. In the midst of a prayer, he relates, one pious brother said: "Oh, Lord, we pray Thee that the Democratic party may hang together in the coming election." "Amen, answer prayer, Lord," put in a Republican who was near. "But I do not mean it as the Republican brother means it, Lord. I pray that we may hang together in concord and accord," continued the Democrat. "Amen, Lord," again said the Republican; "any cord, so long as they hang."

Lord Kelvin once paid a visit with a friend to some well-known electrical works. They were escorted over the workshops by the senior foreman, a man of much intelligence and an enthusiastic electrician. Entirely unaware of his visitor's identity, he minutely explained the details of the plant and machinery, and lectured him in his role of layman quite professionally. Lord Kelvin's friend was on the point of interrupting several times, but an amused signal from the great master of electricity kept him silent. When the tour of inspection was complete, Lord Kelvin quietly turned to the foreman and asked: "What, then, is electricity?" This was a poser for the man, who, somewhat shamefaced, confessed that he could not say. "Well, well," said Lord Kelvin gently, "that is the only thing about electricity which you and I don't know."

A certain congressman who had instructed his butler to say to all undesirable callers that he was in the bath and could not be seen, was recently visited by a constituent with a grievance to exploit. He called every day at the house, but no matter at what hour he presented himself he was invariably informed that the congressman was bathing. "I must see him," he finally said one day to the servant; "my business is most important; I'll wait until he is through with his bath." "Da's no use," replied the negro butler; "gen'leman done waited foo hours de udder day; he wa'n't through den." Whereupon the disappointed constituent is said to have written this upon his card: "You may succeed, if you persevere, in getting your body clean one of these days; but if you should spend the rest of your life in a bathtub it would not purify your conscience or your political record."

A correspondent of the "Canadian Gazette" (London) relates the following story to illustrate the abnormal development of the late Li Hung Chang's bump of curiosity. "One day I was unwise enough to tell him that it was possible to tap the telegraph wires at any point along the line. This got me into a nice mess, for Li insisted on stopping the train in the heart of the Rocky Mountains, and although Lo Fung Loo pointed out to him that the tapping might interrupt the transcontinental business of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, he was determined to see Mr. Joseph Baker (an expert telegrapher who accompanied us) tap the wires. The obliging Baker, to my surprise, willingly consented, and entertained His Excellency with an agile pole-climbing feat and a spectacular manipulation of the wire. Joe came down the pole with a most plausible story of what the operators at the end of the line had said to him, but he afterwards confided to me that he had 'only fooled the old man.' Li, however, was delighted, and talked of wire-tapping until he heard about a typewriter we had on board. Then Mr. Baker was kept busy for half a day explaining to His Excellency and the equally interested members of his suite the intricacies of the writing machine."

A Duel of the Wits.

There had been a somewhat protracted discussion in the smoking room between the Aged Cynic and the Prize Idiot, and it had now reached the stage of flickering snappiness, which indicates the beginning of the end.

"After all," said the Prize Idiot, "there is no fool like an old fool."

The Aged Cynic surveyed him calmly. "There is no ass like a young ass," he retorted.

"A tu quoque is the repartee of the intellectually destitute," sighed the Prize Idiot, wearily.

"When your case is bad abuse the other side," quoted the other cheerfully.

"Wise men make proverbs, and fools repeat them," said the Prize Idiot in his most hydraulically crushing manner.

"And who was the wise man who said that?" asked the Aged Cynic innocently; and the Prize Idiot is now making elaborate arrangements for having his seat moved further back.

An Ancient Problem.

How often do passing events recall the halcyon days of our youth? It was announced at a recent mission meeting, to which apparently a sewing circle was attached, that the women seemed shy of making clothes for the other sex, and in regard to attempts that had been made, it was stated that the boys had been able to stand up in the suits, but when they stooped, or tried to move about a bit, there had been trouble. Times have evidently not changed in this respect, and cutting down the parental left-offs to fit little Willie is as much a problem today as it was forty years ago. We have all more or less experienced the trouble referred to, and we can sympathize with the little victims of that mission.

Mamma—Well, did you tell God how naughty you have been? Lily—No, I was ashamed. I thought it had better not get out of the family.—Harlem "Life."

Ever since the Forth bridge was opened—eleven years ago—painting has gone on continuously, according to the "Mechanical Engineer." "Beginning at the south end, the workmen take three years to cover the entire length of the bridge, and, as three years represents approximately the life of the paint, no sooner are they finished than the men have to begin again. In this way every square inch of steel comes under observation at least once in three years. The staff of men employed varies in number from the maximum of 55."

What Has 1902 in Store.

What surprises has the new year 1902 in store for us? The Daily Mail of London withdraws the veil a little with a pleasing fillip to the following effect:—

"So far as extensive inquiry indicates, no epoch-making change in any one field of human endeavor is to be anticipated in England; rather will it be a year of universal steady progress on lines already laid down—a year of perfecting many improvements of whose value the public has already had a foretaste.

"In one department, at any rate, important, perhaps astonishing, strides may be expected—viz., the conquering of the air. M. Santos Dumont has demonstrated the practicability of driving and guiding an airship even against adverse currents. By patient and heroic effort he has dragged the 'flying machine'—if the metaphor be permissible—from the realm of remote possibility to that of actual tried fact; and when London makes its first acquaintance with his airship, as it sails around the dome of St. Paul's—a feat M. Santos Dumont has promised to perform—the present remaining difficulties will be found to have greatly diminished.

"Safer methods of travelling by sea and land will also be a feature of the year. The Midland Railway Company is to adopt a new type of locomotive. Moreover, automatic signalling, whereby the train itself lowers and releases the signals as it travels, is to come into operation on one section of a great system, while another company is seriously contemplating running its trains by motor instead of the ordinary locomotive. One such automobile locomotive has actually been built by the French firm of Panhard & Levassor for a light railway.

"During 1902 the motor is also to be applied to canal traffic. The slow, if sure, horse appears to be doomed. The first motor-drawn barges will be seen on the River Lea, near Luton. The motor will travel over a mono rail laid along the towpath, and will haul a 70-ton barge at the rate of three and a half to four miles an hour. The canal horse seldom exceeds one mile an hour.

"Before the end of 1902 it is probable that turbine passenger steamers will be flying between an English port and the French coast. A railway company interested in the cross-Channel traffic has such a scheme in hand, but the publication of precise details is undesired at the present juncture. By the application of the turbine system to Channel steamers the journey from London to Paris will be shortened by over an hour. Another shipbuilding record will be the construction of the mammoth liners for the new Canadian mail service. The vessels will be 825 feet in length, and by far the longest ships afloat. Some idea of the immensity of these floating towns may be gained from the fact that they will be 120 feet longer than the Oceanic or the Celtic, the two largest steamships now in existence, or 134 feet longer than the Great Eastern, which was regarded for nearly 50 years beyond all practical size.

"The business man in journeying to and from America experiences some inconvenience as a result of being cut off from the world for the six or seven days which the voyage occupies. He misses his daily newspaper. The recent progress made in wireless telegraphy, however, justifies the hope that during 1902 newspapers may be printed on board Atlantic liners during the voyage, giving the passengers in a concise form the most important items of intelligence from different parts of the world. The messages would be transmitted by means of the Marconi system, and immediately on receipt would be printed as usual and sold by the deck newsboys as 'extra specials.'

"Admirable though the Metropolitan Fire Brigade is, it is not unlikely that an entirely new kind of engine will be tried. The adoption of the horseless engine in use in America has been considered, and 1902 is likely to see it tested. Messrs. Merryweather & Sons already construct such engines. A steam fire engine is capable of travelling at a speed of 30 miles an hour, compared with the maximum sixteen or seventeen miles achieved by a couple of horses.

"An invention which will see the light in 1902 is not without its humorous aspect. Englishmen have long and deservedly had the reputation of being very backward in the acquirement of foreign languages. An enterprising Frenchman, M. Bizeray, is coming to their rescue. He proposes to establish in London depots supplied with gramophones which, on a penny being put in the slot, will give the listener a lesson in French. Ladies will attend to the machine, and all the pupil will have to do will be to say whether he is a 'beginner' or 'advanced.' Thereupon he will be conducted to the required machine. The spirit of change will even spread to that most conservative of British institutions—men's dress. The peculiar compromise between a frock and lounge coat illustrated on this page is a promised innovation.

"It is claimed to be conducive to both comfort and elegance; but it will apparently take some time for the eye to get used to it. Nearly all kinds of men's clothing will be braided in 1902, a fashion which will certainly give a distinctly 'dressy' appearance. For 'motor' wear tanned and dressed goat skin will be 'the thing.' In either brown or black it will look well, and the high metallic-looking glaze the skin takes is not unpleasing."

Looking for an Heir.

The Empress Regent of China is a figure with all the perennial interest of an inscrutable mystery. From Pekin, to which she has returned, and where, after all the trouble, things are pretty much as they were before the rebellion of the Boxers, and the besieging of the Ambassadors, the same old stories of intrigue are coming in on every wind. Her primary difficulty just at the moment is over the question of a new heir to the present Emperor. The old one has been dismissed in disgrace. He, it is said, insulted the Empress-Regent. In all probability the insult took the form of some slight show of independence. The matter is a pressing one, for the death of the present tractable head of affairs, who makes a splendid base of legal authority, would leave the Empress in a most insecure and unsatisfactory position. At the same time the choice is limited to the dynasty, but the possibilities of evil to a tenure of power like that of her Majesty are terribly great in the presence of unknown forces. Simultaneously come reports of a thorough reorganization of the Chinese army under Japanese officers and of arsenals everywhere working overtime to turn out Mauser rifles.

A school inspector, having a few minutes to spare after examining the school, put a few questions to the lower form boys on the common objects in the schoolroom.

"What is the use of that map?" he asked, pointing to one stretched across the corner of the room; and half a dozen shrill voices answered, in measured articulation:

"It's to hide the teacher's bicycle, sir"—"Wasp."

Plumber's Philosophy.

In "Captain Bluitt," the new novel by Charles Heber Clark ("Max Adeler") is a plumber who is nevertheless an honest man. When called to account for a blunder of one of his workmen, he explained as follows:

"You see, things was built crooked in this world on purpose. There ain't nothing that was arranged to go exactly right. You know better than I do, doctor, that if we went sailing along through life smooth and pleasant, like drifting with the tide, we'd never amount to nothing, now would we?"

"No."

"Very well, then; there's big troubles and there's little troubles. You may lose your money or your health or your relations or you may not; but, anyhow, it'll rain on the day you fix for a picnic, or your train'll be late the day you particularly want to make a connection with another train, or you'll stub your toe so's you can't walk just as you arrange for a pedestrian tour, or the rain'll come on hard when you've left home without your umbrella (did you ever notice that?), or a frightful bore'll drop in to see you just when you thought you'd like to be alone. It's always that way, isn't it?"

"Yes."

"You start out in life believing that you're going to have nearly perfect bliss, and lo and behold! there's something every day in the year and nearly every hour in the day to worry and annoy you. Now, why is it, doctor? Why is it?"

"What is your theory, Davis?"

"It's like this. Here we have, as the books say, evidence of design. The road of life was made rough, on purpose. And why? Doctor, you know well enough. It was made so for our good."

"I have heard something like that before, I think," said the doctor.

"Of course! If things was always right, life would be too easy. We need discipline—discipline of adversity. It makes us strong to fight trouble. Our patience is tried, and so we know we have patience and we get more patience and so forth. You know all about it."

"And you think the man who chokes a flue is appointed to help the thing along?"

"Certainly. Probably he never quite means to choke the flue. Some overpowering outside agency directs him, makes him careless, throws him off his guard. He plays his part in the great drama of life. The man who chokes the flue or fixes a pipe to leak is working to make men better. You might call him the Angel of Discipline."

"You think, then, that the whole matter is supernatural?"

"Well, I don't know as I quite call it that. It's just the way things is fixed. You try to toss a book on the table and it falls on the floor. If you tried to throw it on the floor it would have fell on the table. You go through your house in the dark and hold your arms straight in front of you, and an open door goes between your arms and you hit your nose. You could hardly steer straight enough in broad daylight to get the door into the space between your arms, but you do it sure in the dark. Out in the ocean you sail along for days and never see a sight of a ship. Let a fog come up and it's five chances to one you'll have collision in two hours! No, I don't exactly say supernatural; there's just the lines on which the world is built. There ain't no intention that things'll go straight."

"Then it's your thought that a hidden power compelled you to fix the pipe in my bathroom so that it would leak?"

"Well, I don't want to shirk no responsibility or to blame anybody else. But the fact is I did my very best. I thought it was all tight and snug. But there had to be a hitch somewhere for your uplifting towards higher things and so I s'pose my attention was called off, by some mysterious influence, from a weak place in the joint, and you had the benefit. You learned something more about self-control and the hollowness of life when the water came through on the ceiling paper. No doubt you are this very minute nearer heaven because I inadvertently missed that tender place in the joint. It ought to have been added to my bill."

All in the Point of View.

MADAME WU TING-FANG, wife of China's representative at Washington, says it is becoming the custom in China for ladies to have feet no smaller than those of a five-year-old child, and so the feet of little girls are not confined or bound until they reach that age. By that time they are strong, and if the binding be properly done, there is no severe or agonizing pain. Really the suffering is slight, and by the time a girl attains her full growth the pains cease altogether. Foreigners, she says, have an exaggerated idea of the suffering incident to the making of small feet. But so important is it, from an aristocratic standpoint, for a girl to fulfil in this particular the Chinese idea of beauty that she is willing to endure a little pain to secure that end. According to our own ideas, the binding of children's feet is simply barbarous; but that it is largely a matter of point of view may be seen by what the Chinese lady has to say about the tight waist of women who represent the highest civilization: "I for one prefer having small feet to a little waist. My vital organs are not affected in any way or injured by the confinement of my feet in childhood, but the health of many a woman is ruined by the constriction of her waist."

Unexpected Erudition.

An absent-minded professor of languages dropped into a restaurant one day for luncheon.

"What will you have, sir?" a[illegible] the waiter.

"Fried eggs," replied the prof[illegible].

"Over?" said the waiter, me[illegible], of course, to ask whether he wan[illegible] them cooked on both sides or only one.

"Ova?" echo[illegible] the [illegible], surprised at his ap[illegible] familiarity with Latin. "Certainly. That is what I ordered. Ova galli[illegible]."

This the waiter interpreted as meaning "extra well done," and that is the way they came to the table.

A Combination Needed.

Lost in the Desert.

THE helplessness that a man feels when he is lost is one of the most terrible parts of his experience. Perhaps this is at its worst when it is not he but the guide who is at fault. The late G. W. Stevens, the war correspondent, had a terrible experience of the kind in the Egyptian desert.

"We had been journeying all day, hoping to reach the monastery at night. I began to feel sleepy and to droop in the back. I swung my leg over the pommel, and settled myself to ride astraddle. Then I decided to sit side-saddle on the off-side for an hour, then change and ease the strain again. So I rode, looking steadily at the great yellow blotch ahead of me.

"But now the sun was dipping down again under our hat-brims. It was past four. It would be dark at half-past five; if we had not sighted our monastery then, we were helpless.

"The eagerness with which the guide raced up each new eminence, the strained hopefulness of his stare, the slow disappointment you could read in the relaxed limbs, the fresh hope renewed, but each time fainter, with which he dashed for the next prospect—he was at fault. To my eye one ridge, one dip, one hill was exactly like every other. We had been riding ten hours and must have come fifty miles; our monastery was only forty-five. We had missed it and it was all but dark.

"A night in the cutting wind of the desert, a night without tent, water, fire or fodder was the very best we had to look forward to. The worst—but just then up panted Said.

"'Have you seen, Said?'

"'Effendim, I have seen; I saw from the hill back yonder. Come and see for yourselves.'

"And he led us back to the brow of the bluff, and there, surely, yes, there gleamed something white. The monastery, hurrah! It can't be four miles off. We will walk; the camels can follow. So up got the patient camels and off we strode, five miles an hour, over sand as hard and crisp as the early morning snow.

"The blazing crimson and orange of the sunset blinded our eyes to the white blob of the monastery. But faster and faster we walked. Now crimson and orange blazed no more; it was really dark now; we had come five miles and had not arrived.

"'Are you sure you saw, Said? Quite sure?'

"'Effendim,' replied Said, 'I thought I saw something white.'

"Nothing in sight white now. The guide was thrown out utterly; and there we were, fifty-five miles from home, camels done up, and foodless; camel boys, starving; thirsty and waterless ourselves; with possibly two days' food and certainly not two days' water; lost, clean lost in the Libyan Desert."

That night their sleep was broken by fears. At early dawn they were up and searching. Mr. Stevens continues:

"Then the sun comes up, and the desert is yellow again; and now what sound is that? Yes, a yell from Said. Surely he has seen. On to the camels! and briskly westward.

"'Have you seen, Said?'

"'No, but behold—a camel track, and I know this place.'"

The Inventor.

A SMALL man with blear eyes and shaking hands took the seat opposite me. I was not surprised to hear him call for absinthe.

"You are sitting at the table with an unrecognized genius," he said, without looking at me.

"So are you," I retorted. I was then a struggling art student in Paris.

"You laugh," he said, "but it is true. Your voice is sympathetic, and I will tell you."

"Thanks," I said.

"You are an artist, and have, undoubtedly, remarked the natural affinity of colors. White, for instance, is supposed to contain all colors."

He had hit on my favorite subject for discussion, and I leaned back prepared to listen.

"Have you observed," he asked earnestly, "that people with blue eyes have yellow hair?"

"The Irish," I answered, "have black hair and blue eyes. It's a beautiful combination."

"Yes; that's my point. I can change the color of the eyes."

"What!"

"You mix paints! You get green from yellow and blue! You make a color darker or lighter! You make black with red and purple! I do the same with eyes! A year ago I discovered an injection for the retina of the eye that would change its color. Suppose you have light gray eyes. I inject such a colored fluid as will make them black, blue—any color!"

I looked at his eyes. They were a whitish green.

"My own eyes," he continued, "I tried to change to green as an advertisement. It was before I had perfected my invention, and—I lost my sight. Tell me, are my eyes green?"

I became conscious that he had been gazing directly past me and had not looked at me once.

"You are blind?" I said.

"Entirely," he answered indifferently. "But what matters it? I have perfected my invention. Had I a paltry five-franc piece I could make all the women in the world beautiful. Women are the power of the world. Ah, France, ma chere patrie, then shouldst thou rule the nations of the earth again!"

I handed him a five-franc piece.

"Your story is worth it," I remarked, "whether it be true or not."

He slipped the money into his pocket and turned to go.

"It's a loan," he said, over his shoulder; "you shall hear from me."

That evening I lounged in the Art Students' Club in a haze of smoke. I had found friends. Tobacco makes man confidential, and I told them my story while they puffed on their pipes in silence. Then each spoke in turn.

"I gave him five francs when I first arrived," said Rand.

"Sacre! I gave him ten," said Moulain.

"Donnerwetter! and I gave him fifty," cried Becker.

"But is he really blind?" I asked.

"No," said Rand; "you were the blind one."

Permanent Cures of Cancer

We here give a few cases, where the efficacy of our constitutional treatment in curing Cancer is established beyond all question. We have plenty on file.

There is ample proof that where our remedy cures, it cures to stay and saves people from the torture of knife and plaster.

CANCER OF THE BREAST—A lady had Cancer of the Breast, which rendered her right shoulder and arm almost helpless. Our remedy cured her over five years ago, and there is not the slightest return of the trouble.

CANCER OF THE FACE—This case of a gentleman who was so bad that his right cheek was almost eaten off with the disease. Plasters aggravated his trouble. Our treatment cured him five years ago and he has been all right since.

CANCER OF THE STOMACH—Doctors pronounced the trouble cancer of the stomach. There was vomiting of material that looked like coffee grounds. Great weakness and prostration. Cured over four years ago and well to-day.

CANCER OF THE NOSE—A severe case which was cured by our remedy in 1891 and has never returned to this day.

Full accounts of the above cases, together with the names and addresses of the persons, are given in our new book, "Cancer, its cause and Cure," sent to anyone, in plain wrapper, on receipt of two stamps. Stott & Jury, Bowmanville, Ont.

RECORD OF MRS. SEARIGHT

The Chief of Police has Received a Letter of Enquiry Regarding Her

Thomas Searight, of Oswegatchie, N. Y., has written Chief Rend, asking for some information as to the character of a woman, Mrs. Searight. This was easy information for the Chief to give, as about four years ago the woman was arraigned on a charge of keeping a disorderly house. She was admitted to bail, but made arrangements to leave town at once and has never turned up here since. For this she is liable to six months in the Central, if she ever comes back. Mr. Searight, the writer of the letter said he was having a law suit with the woman and the information as to her character would help him very much.

The Equity Fire Insurance Company,

4th Annual Meeting Held February 5th, 1902.

DIRECTORS' REPORT

The Directors of the Equity Fire Insurance Company beg to herewith present to the Shareholders of the Company their Financial Statement for the fourth year of its business operations, ending 31st December, 1901, duly certified to by the Auditors.

In presenting this Statement, the Directors have pleasure in calling attention to the fact that the reference made in their last annual report as to the anticipated increase in the premium income of the Company for the past year has been considerably exceeded, it amounting in all to the very handsome sum of $126,969.93, being an increase over the previous year of $58,142. To this we have to add the sum of $2,563.92 of interest received and accrued, making our total income $129,524.85 for the year.

Although the year 1900 was generally regarded by fire underwriters throughout Canada and the United States as being exceptionally heavy in record of fire losses, yet the year just closed was even more marked in that respect.

Under such circumstances, it will be a source of particular gratification to our Shareholders and others interested, to learn, and especially to your Directors in being able to report, that, while our total income for the year has been $129,524.85, our expenses, including fire losses and adjustments, cancellations and reinsurance, have been only $100,976.65, which leaves the handsome balance of $28,548.20. Adding to this the balance of $8,295.19 brought forward from the previous year, we have a total surplus earnings upon the 31st December, 1901, of $36,843.39.

In order to fully realize the Company's present position, it is well to bear in mind that we have, in addition to the foregoing, paid the entire cost and expenses of the organization of the Company out of the earnings of the business.

Your Directors have, therefore, felt justified in declaring out of last year's earnings a dividend of six per cent.

Upon July 1st, the Company secured a Dominion licence, depositing with the Government securities amounting to $52,852. This was done, as you are aware, without any extra call upon the Shareholders.

The cost of extending and organizing our business outside of the Province of Ontario has kept our expense ratio higher than it would otherwise have been, and somewhat higher than we had hoped to show at the close of the year's business.

In March last, Mr. Taylor, one of the Auditors, resigned, and the Directors appointed Mr. Fred. Roper in his place.

Your Directors are pleased to testify to the zeal and care of the officers, staff and agents of the Company.

The term for which the Directors were elected now expires. They are eligible for re-election.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

ARCH. CAMPBELL, President.
WM GREENWOOD BROWN, Sec'y.

The funeral of Miss Sarah O'Connor, daughter of Mrs. John O'Connor, took place yesterday afternoon at 2.30 from the family residence, Patterson street, to the St. Peter's Cathedral, thence to the Roman Catholic Cemetery, and was largely attended.

A Lucky Find

"The other day my little boy found an old pocketbook in a bureau drawer," said a prominent business man to the Times yesterday, "and asked his mother if he might have it to play with. It was an old one that she had long ago discarded, and she gave it to him. Child-like he was soon pulling it to pieces, and brought to light a $20 bill. Naturally my wife cudgeled her brain to find out how it had come there and suddenly the solution of the mystery dawned upon her. came without knowing it.

Fully two years ago she had missed $20 from this same pocketbook, which she at that time used for her household expenses, such as marketing and the like. We had a servant girl then and the girl had access to the pocketbook in paying the minor expenses. My wife accused her of taking the money, and in spite of her tearful protestations of innocence, she was dismissed in disgrace. The bill must have worked its way down into the lining. My wife is going to try and find the girl and if we discover her we shall make whatever restitution is possible."

NORTH AMERICAN OIL & REFINING COMPANY'S

Stock and It Will Make You Rich

The company owns 2,080 acres of land located in the Newhall-Acton White Oil Fields of Los Angeles County, California. Our manager, Mr. J. H. Parker, writes us under date of Jan. 15th that they have opened up two oil wells near our property, one being a gusher of white oil just as clear as alcohol, and of 50 degrees gravity. This oil is worth and is selling at $4.00 per barrel at the well, and producing better than 50 barrels per day. Our derrick is up and the machinery purchased; we expect to be drilling in a very short time. We now offer to the public 100,000 shares of this meritorious company's stock at the low price of 10 cents per share, and it is worth a great deal more money at the present time with the showing we have in the property. The demand for this oil is far greater than the supply, which is not as of the black oils of Lower California and Beaumont, Texas, that are a drug upon the market.

Regarding the officers of the company, they are all men of honor and means. There are no salaries paid to any of the officers, not even our General Manager, until our company is put on a paying basis.

INCORPORATION.

The company is capitalized for 1,500,000 shares, the incorporation having been effected under the laws of Wyoming, stock being all common stock, issued absolutely fully paid and forever non-assessable. The incorporation laws of Wyoming are peculiarly favorable to oil enterprises, and the par value of the stock has been fixed at One Cent per share in order to avoid the excessive revenue tax paid on stocks of a high par value.

LIABILITIES.

The company has no debts; all stock is fully paid and non-assessable, there are no stockholders' liabilities, and we have no royalties to pay for any purpose.

OUR LANDS.

The company's lands have been carefully selected by their engineer, Mr. J. H. Parker, who is also Vice President and General Manager, in conjunction with four of the best oil experts, who are well known throughout the state. These experts each unbeknown to the other went over our vast territory to locate a site to sink our first well; their reports are on file in the company's office, and we will be pleased to mail a copy of the same upon application, also maps of the oil fields with our property showing in the red. The directors call special attention to the maps, which have been drawn from actual surveys and personal inspection of the land and is accurate. The company's lands are distinctly shown as well as their relation to other oil lands and the location of oil wells, oil sepages and oil springs. A careful inspection of the map will aid prospective investors to judge of the oil under the company's lands.

The geological formation is perfect, the Anticlinal passing through the entire property, and being unbroken by granite formations.

GUARANTEE.

The officers and directors of the company have such great faith in the proposition that they will redeem all stock sold for cash, providing they do not strike oil as designated.

TREASURY STOCK.

The company holds in the treasury over 500,000 shares of treasury stock and some money. The proceeds of sale from the 100,000 shares now offered to the public will be used for the purpose of sinking wells.

REGISTRATION.

The stock is registered with the Colorado Title & Trust Company of Colorado Springs, Colorado, which guarantees any over-issue of stock.

The company would like to employ a few good Fiscal Agents to handle any part of this 100,000 shares of stock, giving them a very liberal commission. We take pleasure in recommending this stock to the good people of Peterborough and vicinity at the very low price of 10 cents per share; considering the condition of the property the stock is worth more money than what we are asking for it.

A CANADIAN VISITS THE BOER COLONY

A Winnipeger's Trip to the Island of Bermuda

What He Has to Say Regarding the Boer Colony

The Prisoners Well Cared for and Generously Treated by the British

Winnipeg, Feb. 11—Joseph T. Dumouchel, the well-known insurance man of this city, has just returned from an extended eight months' trip through the Americas and the West India islands.

"The finest climate in the world, I believe," said Mr. Dumouchel, "is in Bermuda, where I spent several weeks. The island of Bermuda is somewhat oblong in shape and contains about 18,000 inhabitants, one-third of whom are whites. The largest town is Hamilton, which has a population of 3,000. It is the most interesting country in many ways in the world. During two or three months in the summer it is said to be extremely hot, but during the remainder of the year the climate is simply perfect.

LITTLE DRUNKENNESS

"There was one thing," said Mr. Dumouchel, "at which I was very much surprised. That was the scarcity of excessive drinking considering the fact that Jamaica rum is only two cents per glass and at the hotels a couple of men can have a small room to themselves and all they want to drink for two or three hours for the small sum of twelve cents. Yet I saw only one man the worse for liquor during my whole stay, and their police courts and jails have seldom an occupant. Crime is almost unknown and yet no prohibition is placed upon the liquor traffic. Cigars are only one cent each and they are of the finest."

THE BOER COLONY.

"Did you visit the colony of Boer prisoners in Bermuda?" was asked.

"I was kindly granted permission to visit the colony though I was given stringent orders not to talk to any or to answer their queries concerning the outside world. There are about 16,000 prisoners there, about one-half of whom are women and children. They are confined on a group of small islands in a bay at one end of the island and appear to be well used. They have their own schools and religious services and are in good health, as fever and other epidemic diseases are not known."

"As soon as I arrived among the prisoners they came flocking around making all kinds of enquiries about the war and the outside world. "Have the British caught Dewet yet?" asked one man who looked like an officer among the rest.

"I told them I could give them no information about the matter, and they seemed disappointed. On the whole I think they are very well cared for, and as happy as can be expected under the circumstances.

ONE PRISONER ESCAPED

"One of the young Boer prisoners managed to make his escape. He swam for a couple of miles to a narrow channel through which a steamer bound for New York had to pass out of the harbor, where it then lay. He managed to climb on board, or possibly was hauled up by the stokers, with whom he hid himself during the voyage. In the meantime his escape had been discovered, and the authorities had wired to New York to have the ship searched. On its arrival there the officers boarded the vessel, and demanded the fugitive. The captain disavowed all knowledge of the affair, but finally the fugitive was found. He could not be taken back, however, and if he once got on shore he was a free man. He had no money, however, and therefore he could not land. In ten minutes the crowd of passengers who had gathered around had made up a purse and when the man was taken ashore he was carried joyfully on the shoulders of the populace. Money was supplied him, and he was at once set up in business on his own account. It was one of the most daring escapes ever executed."

Mr. Dumouchel was much impressed with the good treatment given the Boer prisoners by the British. They are fed on the best, and every comfort and convenience possible is provided. They are permitted to work at their own discretion and many of them employ their spare time in artistic pursuits, such as painting, drawing, carving and needlework. Since the escape of the young Boer prisoner the vigilance of the guards has been redoubled, and the regulations over the prisoners strictly enforced.

GERMANY PROVED A VERY GREEDY PARTNER

Britain is Distrustful of Any Alliance with Her—Chinese Negotiations Has not Kindled a Feeling of Security

London, Feb. 10.—English opinion awaits with a complacency not far removed from indifference Prince Henry's visit to America. Personally, the Prince is much liked in the Far East, and on his visits to London. He is, they say, the best of good fellows, ever ready to show the warmest spirit of comradeship, but he is no politician. "We can't have two in one family," he is reported to have said to one of his friends. No one supposes for a moment that his sojourn in America will have any more political result than is now following the recent friendly visit of the Prince of Wales to the Kaiser.

In truth, English opinion, so far as it finds an expression in the press, and at the clubs, is beginning more and more to discount the value to Great Britain on the United States of political intimacy with Germany. Englishmen cynically point to the Anglo-German agreement as the only kind of reciprocity Germany understands, and nobody yet has succeeded in discovering one little advantage that England has received in return for her complacency over Germany's theft of Shantung, her admission of Germany to a practical partnership in the Yang-tse Valley, and the use of her influence with the Sultan in behalf of the Kaiser's ambitions in Asia Minor.

ANGLO-GERMAN ALLIANCE.

When a year or so ago Mr. Chamberlain talked on public platforms about a British alliance with Germany, men shrugged their shoulders and said, "Oh, well, Chamberlain is no diplomatist, and does not mean an alliance in the formal sense." It would expose Mr. Chamberlain or any other Minister to far severer criticism if to-day he suggested, not an alliance, but even a continuance of the policy of which the Anglo-German agreement was the definite outcome, and, thinking of American foreign policy as running along in parallel lines with their own Englishmen cannot conceive of any less disappointment to American statesmen should they now respond to German wooing.

To-day the weekly reviews speak out unhesitatingly what is in the minds of most Englishmen! The Spectator says: "There is no sharing with Germany. She must rule absolutely, if at all. She means, if she can, to pull down the British Empire, and erect on its ruins, a Teutonic world-power, just as she hopes to build up on the ruins of the Austro-Hungarian Empire a European State which shall embrace all German-speaking Europe. An intense popular animosity is felt in Germany towards England. It is not sentimental, fictitious, or unreal; it is deep and genuine, or, as a German philosopher would say, positive and categorical. Germans realise instinctively that human beings cannot destroy a great human organization unless they feel morally justified in doing it. So they mean to try to destroy us like a logical people. They are preparing the necessary moral indignation.

GERMANY TOO GREEDY.

This sounds almost provocative, and would certainly be frowned upon if submitted to the British Foreign Office, but it little exaggerates the sort of talk one hears most generally among English politicians and journalists. Englishmen are quite ready to meet Americans in a fair commercial rivalry, and looking to their own industrial position and the growing cohesiveness of the Empire, they have the strongest faith in the British industrial future, but in the case of Germany they see a rival who, not content with trade competition, persists in dogging Great Britain's footsteps, ready to take every conceivable political advantage now, and eagerly awaiting the day when the completion of the German navy will give her new means of aggression at the expense of England, America, or any one else. They see, moreover, that wedged in as Germany is, between France and Russia, naval strength alone will never avail her.

Col. Picquart shows in the current number of the Grand Revue how a mere understanding between France and Great Britain, such as is quite conceivable in a day of international difficulty, and such as the Niger agreement might easily have led up to had the British Ministers desired it, would at once entail on Germany a fight for life. The bitterness of the present phase of English opinion will, of course, pass, but a substantial divergence between British and German policies must remain.

SIDE LIGHT ON SITUATION.

A sidelight is thrown on Anglo-Germanism by the belief that the British Government will announce in Parliament on Monday the abandonment of Wei-Hai-Wei as a naval base, though it was England's vaunted offset to Germany's Kiachau and Russia's Port Arthur seizures. The lobbyists say that the ultimate destination of Wei-Hai-Wei is German hands, Germany conceding something in South Africa. Meanwhile the administration of Wei-Hai-Wei last week was transferred by the Admiralty to James Haldane Lockhart, Colonial Secretary at Hong Kong.

The British reply to the Dutch advances is accepted as a decisive rejection of the Boer delegates in Europe as negotiators, but leaves the way open for renewed negotiations by General Botha, through Lord Kitchener. Meanwhile, the blockhouse system wears down the enemy at the rate of 400 per week.

IN FILIPINO TORTURE TRAP

Two Officers Precipitated Into Pit Filled With Spikes

Washington, D.C., Feb. 11—An example of the atrocity of the Filipinos and the barbarous method of their warfare is found in a mail report to the War Department, telling of the narrow escape from death of Lieutenant Richard Wetherill and Lieutenant Geo. I Foster of the Nineteenth Infantry, who were with detachments of their regiments scouting in the mountains of Loboc.

Having occasion to search a house which excited their suspicion they were on entering the main floor precipitated into a pit bristling with sharp pointed bamboo sticks. This form of atrocity in the trenches was frequent during the early days of the war in the island. Both officers were badly injured and the guide with them was impaled and died before he could be removed.

Another report tells in detail of a most elaborate plan to kill a number of men through which the floor of a large building to be occupied by troops was released from its supports in a way to be carefully balanced on a central pillar, with the greater weight placed at one end the occupants would have been thrust into a cellar beneath equipped with rusty bayonets and the favorite sharpened bamboo placed on end.

PASSING OF THE BICYCLE

They Have Almost Entirely Disappeared in Many American Cities

New York, Feb. 11—Statistics of the bicycle trade disclose the surprising fact that only twenty-four factories were in operation in the United States on January 1, as compared with sixty-nine a year previous, and 298 in 1900. The decrease in the output has fallen off more than 90 per cent in two years.

As wheels are dirt cheap, while the country is prospering, the conclusion is inevitable that the bicycle craze has passed. An evidence of this was recently contained in a report from Chicago, which said the little two wheeled machines had almost disappeared from the streets of the Windy City. In Kansas City fewer bicycles are seen than formerly. Denver, Colo., is said to be the home of more wheels than any other city in America, owing to its level and uncrowded streets.

The advent of the automobile was one of the factors in checking the sale of bicycles. Automobiles are still too costly to come into general use, but nobody knows what is to be the next stage of their development. In addition to the factories already established, Henri Fournier, the winner of the great Paris-Berlin race, has decided to erect a $2,000,000 automobile plant in New York. Apart from the coal mining and big metallurgic industries, it is estimated that automobile making directly and indirectly employs more people in France than any other industry.

The predicted relegation of the horse to the boneyard as a consequence of the bicycle's appearance has failed to materialize. Horses are to-day more popular, and they sell for more money, than before the bicycle was invented.

As a health builder the bicycle is no longer regarded as supreme. The stooping and cramped position of the rider is condemned by the doctors. Over-exertion on the wheel has injured more people than temperate exercise has helped. But the bicycle has its legitimate uses, and its continued employment is certain, although not as a fad.

Foreign Hatred Of England, From a British Point of View

London, Feb. 11—It is sad in this year of grace 1902 to contemplate a nation frothing at the mouth, snarling and baying at another for no obvious reason. It makes a Britisher sigh and look anxiously over the navy list. It makes no difference what England does, she is, and has long been, the object of the unreasoning hate of continental Europe. And in this we are a probable cause for England's not always well met advances to the United States, and the eagerness with which she has turned to the colonies. Nations, like individuals, crave affection. England's isolation may be splendid, but its loneliness makes it hard to bear. Hence England turns to her kin across the seas, offering them a genuine and deep regard, hoping that with an open-hearted communion with a related nation she may find far more than a compensation for the fierce enmity which ever blazed from the eyes of her near neighbors. At present, unfortunately, the people of the United States are not ready to freely return England's good will. But educating influences extending from the better thinking portion downward through the ignorant prejudices of the lower classes, together with the ever-growing intimacy of the two peoples, and the unifying influences of their literatures, will work a change in the sentiments of those classes in which a dislike for England is now most marked.

AT BALAKLAVA

The Man Showed Himself as a Hero and Two Medals Attested the Fact.

New York, Feb. 11—James Reid, a British veteran, whose personal heroism at Sebastopol and on the field of Balaklava in the famous charge of the Light Brigade had won him two medals, is dead in this city from asphyxiation. The old soldier, on retiring, had turned the stopcock of a gas heater in the wrong direction, and when he was found in his little three-room flat the gas fumes had done what the bullets of the Crimea failed to do.

Mr. Reid, who was in his seventy-third year, kept a small cigar and stationery store. He was born in Edinburgh, Scotland. When he was 18 years old, his father, who had distinguished himself in the battle of Waterloo, moved to Australia. James preferred to follow a soldier's career, as his father had done, and he enlisted in the British army. During the Crimean campaign he rose to the rank of quarter-master sergeant in his command, the Chestnut troop of the Royal horse artillery. This rank he won by personal gallantry in action, and he had two medals to attest the fact.

Again he distinguished himself during the cholera outbreak in the army, and won special honorable mention for his fearless and devoted attention to duty in the stricken camp.

Sergeant Reid purchased his discharge from the army and came to America in 1865.

A SPLENDID INVESTMENT

An Oil Struck That is sure to be a Big Money Maker.

We call the attention of capitalists and investors to the advertisement elsewhere of the North American Oil and Refining Company, which appears in this issue.

This stock should meet with ready sale, as it is likely to prove a bonanza to investors. Oil has been struck very close to the company's property, and it is known that the same oil channels run through it. The stock being disposed of is treasury stock, and not personal stock.

The company is controlled by men of undoubted honor and probity, being: Hon. E. A. Sunderlin, Colorado Springs; J. H. Parker, Vice-President and General Manager, who is a man of broad experience in the oil business, having passed upon 307 wells, and out of that number only had three failures; Mr. Geo. Cockburn, banker, President of a number of mining companies and Sec.-Treas. of the Boulder Oil Co., the stock of which is worth four times par price.

The latter fact shows what money there is in oil. A man, for instance, who invested $100 in the Boulder Company a short time ago can get $400 for his stock. There is every hope that the North American will be even more successful.

Further particulars may be obtained on application to Mr. G. A. Cockburn, Colorado Springs, Col., or to F. W. Nelson, Broker, Water street, Peterborough.

ALASKA IS GROWING WARMER

Ocean Current Changes Course and Modifies Severe Climate

Tacoma, Wash., Feb. 11—Sea Captains lately arrived from the western coast of Africa announce their belief that the Japan current has changed its course in the eastern part of the Pacific ocean and is now running several hundred miles to the north and east of its former channel.

Since the fall of 1899 these mariners hold that this warm ocean current has been sweeping with constantly increasing strength toward the Alaskan shore line.

In the fall of 1899 the western coast of Alaska was shaken by a terrific earthquake. Since that time Alaska's climate has been changing. It is believed that the Japan current was turned eastward by a stupendous submarine upheaval, which formed a new chain of submarine mountains, throwing the current against the shore.

At first it was cooled by sea level glaciers, which accounts for the gradual change in temperature. The current has finally resumed its warmth and the whole Alaskan climate has become milder. Last summer the climate there was rainy and warm like Puget Sound, 1000 miles further south. The entire winter has been mild and rainy from Nome to Juneau.

A PRO-BOER BEATEN

Doukhobor Would Not Hear Anti-British Agitator

Severity Punished Another Foreigner Who Has Not Been Seen in the City Since.

Winnipeg, Feb. 11—An incident which should go far toward disabusing people's minds of the opinion that a Doukhobor will not fight for his adopted country happened last night in a north end hotel.

For some days the attention of a great many people, especially those of foreign extraction, has been attracted by a rather peculiar looking foreigner who gave his name as Wasyl Dudinsky and who could converse in German, French and Russian with equal facility. He had a smattering of English, but generally floated around here and there confining his acquaintanceship to men of his own language and nationality.

He seemed especially interested in the Doukhobors and became acquainted with as many as possible. Though without visible means of support, he never seemed short of funds and managed to ingratiate himself with most of those with whom he came in contact.

The topic of his conversation generally turned upon the subject of the Boer war and the atrocities of British soldiers. As a general rule there was very little disagreement with his arguments so long as he paid for the beer, and, emboldened by the silence of his listeners, he gradually became stronger in his assertions. At the same time the suspicion grew among his supposed victims that he had some definite object in talking and spending his money so freely.

The explosion came while Dudinsky was spreading his doctrines before a couple of Doukhobors over several glasses of beer. He became more violent than usual in his charges against the British and finally was bold enough to assert that he was a special Boer agent sent here from Hamburg to work among the Doukhobors and Galicians.

This was as far as he went. One of the Douks, a strapping six footer, reached over the little centre table on which the beer stood, and grabbing the pro-Boer by the neck, proceeded to drag him around the room, punched his face, poured beer down his back and then threw him out into the street. Most of those who witnessed the drubbing understood the situation and said never a word. The special agent with the versatile tongue has not since been seen.

COCKRAN SHIES AT DAVIS?

Report That He Wouldn't Sit on the Stage With Him at a Pro-Boer Meeting

Boston, Feb. 10—A pro-Boer meeting was scheduled at Faneuil Hall this evening, but the affair did not take place. It is said by some of the people having the affair in charge that it was called off on account of the inability to obtain the hall, but no meeting of any kind was held in the place to-night. Another story heard about the entrance to the hall was to the effect that Bourke Cochran, who was featured as the leading speaker, would not sit on the same platform with Webster Davis. Davis was another of the advertised speakers.

FOUND DEAD IN THE SNOW

David Valentine, an Old Man, Meets a Terrible Death

David Valentine, a very respectable old gentleman, who, for some time past has been living with Mr. Hicks, a farmer residing a short distance this side of Burleigh, met a shocking and tragic death on Saturday night in the snowdrifts, his dead body being found yesterday morning. The unfortunate old gentleman had been staying in town for a few days last week, and started out on Saturday to reach his home. He was seen walking through Young's Point on Saturday afternoon, and it is thought that in the dark, and blinded by the whirling snow that filled the air he lost his way, and after wandering around in the vain hope of finding the road or some dwelling he became exhausted and sank down into the snow. He would be frozen to death in a very short time, being in an exhausted condition, after making a stubborn effort to save himself.

On finding the body, Mr. Hicks at once communicated with Dr. Grey, coroner, but as there were no marks of violence on the body, and there being no doubt as to the storm causing the old man's death, an inquest was considered unnecessary. Deceased was about 62 years of age, and belonged to St. Thomas. He was a quiet, sober, respectable man, and his shocking death came as a blow to those with whom he was acquainted.

Can Sue the Best

The man who can advertise at all can advertise in the very best medium—the newspaper which has a large circulation among the people who are able to buy things. A small advertisement in such a journal is better than a large one in a newspaper of small circulation. It has been demonstrated that no advertisement is too small to escape the attention of the majority of newspaper readers.

DE WET HAS ESCAPED AMONG THE CATTLE

Nearly Three Hundred of His Men Killed, Wounded or Taken Prisoners by the British

THE BOER DELEGATES ARE READY FOR PEACE

Willing to Submit to Conditions Laid Down by Lord Lansdowne—How Kitchener is Saving Money

London, Feb. 11.—From Wolve huck Lord Kitchener has to-day telegraphed a long description of a combine movement of numerous British columns with the object of securing Gen. De Wet. [illegible]

Lord Kitchener says the advance began the night of Feb. 5, the whole force moving from various directions and forming a continuous line of mounted men on the west bank of the Liebenberg's vlei from Frankfort as far south as Fanny's Home, and thence to Kaffir kop. The line then advanced to the west, and the following night the British entrenched with their outposts 50 yards apart. They held the line from Holland, on the Heilbron-Frankfort blockhouse line to Doorn kloof, on the Kroonstad-Lindley blockhouse line, while the columns were also working in advance of the blockhouse lines to prevent De Wet's crossing. The advance was continued Feb. 6, and De Wet was within the enclosure, but, realizing his position, he ordered his men to disperse and seek safety during the night. De Wet himself, with some men and a number of cattle, made for the Kroonstad-Lindley blockhouse line, and at one o'clock in the morning, when it was very dark, by rushing his cattle at the fence, broke his way through the line, mixed up with the cattle, and losing three men killed.

Many attempts were made to break through the line on the night of February 7, reports Lord Kitchener, the line of the outposts being attacked at various places throughout the night.

But very few escaped, and ten dead Boers were picked up in the morning near Heilbron.

"I did not get exact details of the Boer casualties," continues Lord Kitchener, "but, as far as I have ascertained they consist of 283 in killed, wounded, and prisoners, as well as about 700 tired horses and many cattle.

KRUGER MAY MOVE.

London, Feb. 11.—A despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company from Utrecht indicates the probability of the removal of the Boer headquarters to Geneva on account of friction between Mr. Kruger and his associates and the Dutch Government.

Dr. Leyds, representative in Europe of the Transvaal, is reported as declaring that the recent proposals looking to the establishment of peace in South Africa made by the Dutch Premier, Dr. Kuyper, were an unwarrantable interference in the affairs of the Transvaal. Some of the Boer delegates, it is said, are at variance with Dr. Leyds.

WANT TO VISIT SEAT OF WAR.

London, Feb. 11.—A despatch to a news agency from Brussels says:—

"It is understood here that the Boer delegates have decided to submit to the conditions laid down in Lord Lansdowne's communication to the Dutch Government, and are preparing a communication to the British Government asking permission to visit South Africa and setting forth the object of the proposed visit. It is expected that the request will reach England next week."

Mr. Chamberlain's announcement in the House of Commons on Thursday that the substance of the correspondence with the Dutch Government would be communicated through Lord Kitchener to the Boer generals puts an end to the incident which began with Dr. Kuyper's visit.

If the Boers have ever hoped for foreign intervention they cannot well hope for it any more. In these circumstances it is, of course, possible that Generals Botha, De Wet, Delarey, with or without concurrence of Mr. Schalkburger and Mr. Steyn, may give up the struggle in despair, but their course will depend upon military considerations, with which the civilian, even if he had the requisite knowledge, is incompetent to deal.

Threats have no effect upon the mass of Englishmen. Abuse by German newspapers only strengthen their determination to go on fighting. At the idea of foreign intervention they laugh.

If the Boers or any other foreigners suppose that Great Britain is unable or unwilling to carry on the war they are very much mistaken.

There is a peace party here, but it does not rest upon any disbelief in the material resources of the British Empire. Its cardinal principle is that reasonable men on both sides would agree upon a peace which would make another war in South Africa a practical impossibility.

CAPE COLONY UNITED.

Cape Town, Feb. 11.—At a meeting of citizens held here last night, at which several thousand were present, a resolution was passed refuting the Continental calumniators of the British troops. Colonial Secretary Graham delivered a strong speech.

A resolution was also adopted supporting the attitude of the Imperial Government in regard to the war. These resolutions represent the united loyal feeling through the Cape Colony.

HOW KITCHENER IS SAVING MONEY.

London, Feb. 11.—Col. Sir Charles Vincent, M.P., who has just returned from South Africa, said in the course of a speech at Eton College last night that by businesslike methods Gen. Kitchener was getting back $40,000 a month from the field canteens. Gen. Kitchener advised that people at home should not send the soldiers chocolate and cigarettes, as they can be obtained at the field canteens, but to devote the money to the soldiers' families at home. Many persons think, Col. Vincent said, that Gen. Kitchener is very austere and difficult to approach. As a matter of fact, there was no more agreeable man. He had extraordinary judgment, and a wonderful facility for work. He woke up every morning at five o'clock, telegraphed everywhere, interviewing heads of departments, and diverting the rest of the day to problems of the campaign.

ITEMS OF INTEREST

London, Feb. 1.—All the members of the royal family from the King down to the Prince of Wales' eldest son have been vaccinated. The King now goes with his arm in a sling. The queen's slight indisposition this week, which prevented her returning from Windsor on the day arranged, is also attributed to the ills following vaccination.

Lord Rosebery was vaccinated a fortnight ago and it "took" well.

London smallpox epidemic has been fluctuating, but on the whole it shows an upward tendency.

The record of 1,627 cases under treatment having been reported this week, vaccination is becoming very general. Both in the house of commons and the house of lords one may see at least half a dozen members with an arm in a sling.

Many cases of serious illness in adults from vaccination are reported. This week a fashionable wedding was postponed because the bride felt very ill from this cause.

It is a remarkable coincidence that in 1838, the year of Queen Victoria's coronation, London also had a heavy smallpox epidemic, which much interfered with the number of visitors and the size of the street crowds.

THE MANNERS OF SCHOOL CHILDREN

Dr. Hodgins, the Deputy-Minister of Education, is asking at the present time if it be true what many people of reflection are charging—that our school children are becoming devoid of politeness. As one would suppose, school teachers resent the charge as one more against themselves than against the children. There is something in this view of it, but we must sorrowfully acknowledge that thirty years ago no one would have thought of making a charge that today has only too much foundation in fact. General observations are not always convincing therefore we shall proceed to particularise: Some years ago one autumn afternoon two hundred young men or so were proceeding towwards from the school buildings. A young girl was riding a spirited horse in the opposite direction. The animal, frightened by the crowd, became alarmingly restive, when, to the horror of a few older spectators, a large majority of the young men began to shout and cat-call to the evident terror of the plucky rider. The horse became almost frantic. The spectators implored the boys to forbear, whereupon the shouting was redoubled and directed at the spectators as well. A more ignoble sight we never witnessed. Again, two of a band of school Hooligans were chosen to do some daring deed, which in this case consisted in the pulling of the whiskers of a well-known and respected citizen. For this the boys were fined. More recently the flower beds in the Victoria Gardens were despoiled of their beautiful show of flowers by some of the same highly civilized class of people. It was alleged that permission had been given by the authorities, but this of course was untrue.

In view of such happenings as these, and of the general opinion of that part of the public which remembers when these things would have been impossible, we are inclined to sympathise with Dr. Hodgins's fear that some part of the school training has been misdirected.

The Boers seem to be willing to agree to peace if Lord Salisbury will take Milner home, stop sending soldiers to South Africa, and put Kruger back in power. They do not manifest any disposition to haggle over a big war indemnity. They need more licking.

Boston has been having a "spasm" of amateur circus, in which the pink ladies with long stockings, and the men who tie themselves into knots do the thing for fun. It was known as the Barnum and Daily aggregation, and the side show feature is said to have been a "fake" which would make the professional affair seem like a class in natural philosophy.

Now we learn that Lord Rosslyn, who invented a system to "break the bank" at Monte Carlo, has retired from the contest, a heavy loser. If people who sit up nights thinking out schemes for beating other gamblers at their own game would devote the same energy and capital to some useful kind of occupation what a useful kind of people they might be.

Now unhappy France has got it. "Parties de pingue-pongue" are among the social events of the gay capital. The weary-eyed, panting devotees who win renown will no doubt soon give us an international championship contest. Who can tell but even Canada may have the world's greatest ping-pongist now feebly biffing the ball in the retirement of home.

With the arrival of Prince Henry our friends in the United States will be learning the pronunciation of a handful of German words to keep in the fashion with. French will have a rest.

A Tale of the Quick and the Dead.

AN old friend of Mr. Abell, proprietor of one of the Baltimore papers, asked to have his boy taken into that office and taught the business. He was added to the city staff as a special favor. The city editor sent the youngster out to Druid Hill Cemetery to describe that aristocratic burial place. He was instructed to prepare a list of the distinguished lot owners and to mention all the famous dead who rested under the velvety turf. The reporter was neither experienced nor careful. He went to the office of the cemetery company, and, being allowed access to the books, copied such names as seemed worthy of selection. In writing his notes the young man mixed his lists, gave to the distinguished dead the names of the living lot owners, and made up his list of the distinguished survivors from his catalogue of the dead.

The article was immediately put in type, and appeared the following morning.

When Mr. Abell reached his office that day he found a throng of citizens awaiting him.

"What can I do for you, sir?" he demanded in his brusque manner of the first man in broadcloth who pushed into his private office.

"Do? What haven't you done? I am G. Washington Smith and your paper says that I am buried at Druid Hill. It's shameful, sir; and I demand a correction."

"Does my paper say you are dead?" asked Mr. Abell gravely, looking at his visitor over the top of his glasses.

"It does, and——"

"Well, I want to say to you, Mr. G. Washington Smith, that if my paper says you're dead, you are dead. Good morning; this is no place for ghosts!"

Children's Unconscious Witticisms.

"Terra-cotta is stuff squeezed out of a little insect and used to turn puddings red."

"The zebra is like the horse, only striped, and is chiefly used to illustrate the letter Z." (Also "A donkey with a football jersey on.")

"Faith is that quality which enables us to believe what we know to be untrue."

"Parliament is the place where they go up to in London to talk about Birmingham."

"A Limited Monarchy is a government by a monarchy, who in case of bankruptcy would not be responsible for the entire national debt. In private life you have the same thing with a Limited Liability Company."—Quoted by Dr. Macnamara, M.P., in "New Liberal Review."

Equal to Three.

Public vehicles in Paris are allowed to carry only as many passengers as can find seats. After that number has been admitted no one is allowed to enter. The explanation will serve to introduce an incident reported by a correspondent of the Pittsburg "Dispatch."

A crowd of men and women, each with a numbered ticket, showing the order in which they were to enter the next street car, stood at the Place de l'Etoile station when the down-town car arrived.

Surveying the crowd, the conductor cried out: "Only three places in the car! Who has ticket No. 1?"

With that Mrs. Blank of Chicago, the stoutest woman in the American colony, approached, holding up the ticket called for.

"Step aboard, madam," said the conductor, ringing his go-ahead bell.

"Wait! Wait! I've No. 2!" called a little Frenchman.

"You're too late," replied the conductor. "Every place is taken."

The Vital Question.

He—You are truly the first girl I ever loved. She—That isn't the point. Are you sure I will be the last?

An Old Letter.

A WHOLESALE merchant of Philadelphia, in looking over old papers and records, recently came across an interesting document. It was a letter of instruction sent forty years ago by a merchant in St. Louis to his agent in San Francisco. He thus describes it in the Philadelphia "Times:"

"It related to the disposal of a lot of goods which had been shipped by way of Cape Horn, and although it contained over fifteen thousand words and a copy of a good-sized invoice, it was written on just two sheets of paper.

"The paper itself is a sort of tough, opaque tissue, very thin and light, and when folded the letter slips easily into an envelope three inches wide.

"Why it was gotten up in such a peculiar style is explained by the stamp on the corner, which is one of the old 'pony express' series, embellished with a picture of a man on horseback, spurring at a gallop across the plains.

"I know, of course, that the Pacific mail of that period was carried by relay express riders, but I never before realized what great pains were taken to reduce the weight to the lowest possible point. I am told that the letters were stored in little flat pouches under the flaps of the saddle, and that they were usually written on a specially prepared tissue.

"The one I have described must have occupied an expert clerk several days, for the penmanship, while microscopic, is beautifully executed, and as clear and legible as print.

"The stamp is of the denomination of fifty cents, and, taken altogether, it would be hard to find a more striking reminder of the astonishing progress that has been made in this country in a trifle over one generation.

"Everything about the little brown letter speaks of dangers, difficulties and rude, primitive conditions. It is difficult to realize that the route it traveled is now the great highway of a thousand rushing trains, bearing the transcontinental commerce of the nation."

In Germany.

A fat man who lived on the Rhine
Was asked: "At what hour do you dine?"
He answered: "Eleven,
Three, four, five, and seven,
Six, eight, and a quarter to nine!"
—"Life."

Australia's Governor-General.

It is feared in some quarters that the Earl of Hopetoun will not be able to complete his term as Governor-General of Australia. His Lordship has never entirely shaken off the effects of the illness which prostrated him in India on his way out to Australia, and though he was really prominent as the host of the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall, he has since, owing to his unsatisfactory health, been unable to fulfil many of his public engagements.

"Pleasant Dreams"

Cries the young maid to her mother, as she retires to rest. The mother smiles, but sighs. She knows that the pains that rack her will not stop for darkness, and that if she sleeps her dreams will only be echoes of the sufferings of the day.

Why not sleep soundly and rise refreshed at morning, with strength and courage for the day's duties? Weak, nervous women, sufferers from backache, bearing-down pains, and other womanly ailments, have found a perfect cure in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It heals the womanly diseases which cause the pains and nervousness. It makes weak women strong and sick women well.

"I deem it my duty to express my heartfelt gratitude for having been the means, under Providence, of restoring me to health," writes Mrs. E. H. Mann, of Springhill, Leon Co., Fla. "For nearly two years I suffered from female weakness so I could not stand on my feet any length of time; could scarcely walk at all. Appetite was much impaired; I had bearing-down sensations; can't express how badly I did feel. Had tried several kinds of medicine which did me little or no good. At last decided to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I had not taken all of two bottles before I saw it was benefiting me, so I continued to take it until I had taken seven bottles, when I felt entirely cured. Did not feel a touch of my old complaint. It has been over a year since I took your medicine, and I can truthfully say that my health has been better for the last year than it had been for four years previously.

"You may publish this as a testimonial."

A Scientist's Grim Discovery.

Dr. Casagrandi, in reading a paper before a medical association in Rome stated that he had employed a number of women wearing long skirts to walk for one hour through the streets of the city, and, after the promenade was over, he had taken these skirts and had them submitted to a very careful bacteriologic examination. There were found on every skirt large colonies of noxious germs, including those of typhoid fever, consumption, influenza and tetanus (or lock-jaw). Numerous other bacilli were likewise well represented on each skirt. Dr. Casagrandi maintained that, in view of these facts, women, and especially mothers, should at once discontinue wearing trailing skirts, and other members of the Medical Congress unhesitatingly expressed the same opinion, and passed resolutions to that effect. That women should subject themselves to the filth, to say nothing of the possible dangers of trailing gowns, has long been a wonder to those acquainted with bacteriology. Nevertheless, so long as fashion calls for long skirts, no reform can be expected, for the great majority of women are bound to be in the fashion regardless of any ordinary considerations. There is some encouragement, however, in the fact that many of the younger women of the present wear their golf and bicycle skirts throughout the day, and merely dress for dinner and the evening.

A mother not spoken well of by her children is an enemy of the state; she should not live within the kingdom's wall.

A Fox's Revenge.

A gentleman out shooting one day came to a river, where he saw six geese beyond shot. He determined to wait for them to approach the shore. While sitting there he saw a fox come down to the shore and stand some time and observe the geese. At length he turned and went into the woods and came out with a very large bunch of moss in his mouth. He then entered the water very silently, sank himself, and then, keeping the moss above the water, himself concealed, he floated among the geese. Suddenly one of them was drawn under the water, and the fox soon appeared on the shore with the goose on his back. He ascended the bank, and found a hole made by the tearing up of a tree. This hole he cleared, placed in it the goose, and covered it with great care, strewing leaves over it. The fox then left; and while he was away the hunter unburied the goose, closed the hole and resolved to wait the issue. In about an hour the fox returned with another fox in company. They went directly to the place where the goose had been buried, and threw out the earth. The goose could not be found. They stood regarding each other for some time, when suddenly the second fox attacked the other most furiously, as if offended by the trick of his friend. During the battle the hunter shot them both.

Mining For Rubies.

ONE advantage gained by the victory of the British over King Thebaw of Burmah some years ago, was the acquisition of the famous ruby mines, from which had come the finest "pigeon-blood" stones in the world, and it was expected that an immense treasure of these gems would be found in the royal palace. But, although in the looting of the monarch's hastily-abandoned residence, jars filled with rubies were discovered, nearly all of them were of little value, being flawed and in other respects poor specimens.

It was a great disappointment. Nevertheless, confidence in the resources of the mines was unshaken, and capitalists in England were so eager to buy shares in a company organized to exploit the ruby fields that the police were obliged to defend, with drawn clubs, the officers of the concern against a swarm of half-crazed would-be investors.

Shares in the enterprise were boomed to astonishing figures, but tumbled alarmingly when news began to leak out that the ruby craze was likely to prove a bubble. Mining had been begun on an extensive scale, but somehow the gems did not materialise, and it looked as though the fields were much less valuable than had been supposed, or as if the deposits had been exhausted. After some years investors made up their minds that their money was as good as lost. Hence the great and delightful surprise conveyed by the recent intelligence that the mines have begun to pay dividends.

Experience has taught improved methods of mining, and an electrical power plant has been set up by the company for washing the ruby-bearing earth, called "byon." This byon is widely distributed throughout the Mogok Valley. Natives have worked the upper crust of it for centuries, says the "Saturday Evening Post," and the idea now in view is to get at the lower levels and dig down to bed-rock, where, because of their weight, the largest crystals are likely to be found. A fine stone of twenty-eight carats was picked up recently, and its value may be imagined from the fact that a ruby of one carat is worth four times as much as a diamond of the same size.

The British company (as reported by Mr. G. F. Kunz to the Geological Survey) is now producing fully one-half of the world's yield of rubies, and its leases are said to include practically all of the ruby-bearing territory of Burmah.

Protection of Words.

IN the November "Era" William S. Walsh pleads for much-abused words and phrases:

"In these days when everybody is writing and everybody seems to succeed, would it not be well to start a Society for the Protection of Words and Phrases? Many of these are so brutally overworked by the amateur! The winged words, the words that burn, the thoughts that breathe, the telling phrases, do they not clamor loudly for a rest? That very sentence affords an illuminating example of what I mean. How apt, how vivid, how expressive it would be if all its epithets had not lost their vitality through overwork. To the sated reader the whole sentence is but the echo of an echo, it not merely means nothing, but it is robbed even of its sound and fury. The greenhorn who complained of Hamlet that it was too full of quotations unconsciously expressed a great fact through the medium of a bull. In a wrongheaded way he pointed out that constant reiteration has reduced the grandest passages in the language to mere commonplaces. Give our familiar quotations a rest. Lay to sleep our household words. Let fortune for a while cease to favor the brave. Let us feign that the poet is made. Let a man who would steal another's thunder be arrested for felony. Let us win no more golden opinions. Let the favored few withdraw to some select seclusion, and the countless thousands to some dry-eyed privacy. Thus may nouns, adjectives and phrases, after a long rest, reawaken with the freshness of the morning upon them, their original meanings recreated, energetic, effective, brilliant, as on the day when they were first conceived and brought forth."

A Dream Story.

From time to time I have been so interested and amused by reading in the "Spectator" accounts of vivid and realistic dreams that I feel tempted to narrate one that happened to me, leaving it to your judgment as to whether it is worthy of notice in your paper. In November, 1898, I awoke one morning fully impressed with the idea that I was receiving as a gift an unusually large gypsy ring, set with a single sapphire with a brilliant on each side. The dream was a pleasant one to the female mind, and I soon fell asleep again, but only to awake with a still stronger impression that the jewel was actually in my hands. So curious were my sensations that on my maid entering my room at 8 o'clock I told her of the two dreams, most minutely describing the ring, and I also asked my husband to bear witness to the statement should anything follow to confirm the dream. Two hours later the postman arrived, and so great was my excitement and astonishment at seeing a small, neatly done up packet (evidently a ring case) that I dare scarcely open it, and decided to ask my maid to do so. Before breaking the seal I asked her to repeat the description of the ring that I had previously given her, and then the little packet was opened, and the joyful exclamation followed: "Why, my lady, here it is!" The ring was sent to me by a friend in memory of his wife, who had died some months before; but I had absolutely no idea that I should be the recipient of any souvenir of her, nor did I ever see her wearing the ring in question. The same maid is still in my service, and can (as well as Sir Ashley) substantiate my story.—Letter in the London "Spectator."

Stevenson's Grave.

A visit to the grave of R. L. Stevenson would disappoint many people. While some time back visits to this famous hill were most frequent, the limit must now be six persons yearly. And no wonder! The place is quite overgrown with weeds, and perhaps will some day be hard to discover.—New Zealand "Times."

Curious Bits of News.

That the German authorities in Samoa are determined to thoroughly Germanize that country is shown by the fact that the English missionaries in the islands have now been ordered to instruct their pupils and adherents in the Teuton tongue. American and Chilian dollars, as well as British coins, are also to make way for German money, and apparently Samoa will presently become as purely a German colony as New Caledonia is French.

"The latest in 'yells,'" says the Kansas City "Journal," "is that of the convicts on their way from the jail in the county in which they were sentenced to the penitentiary. A gang of fifteen of them from Buchanan County, the sheriff's 'guests' on a special car, gave vent to this yell at each railway station they passed between St. Joseph and Jefferson City a few days ago: 'Two years—five years—we will stay; didn't like St. Joe anyway!'"

The subject of a tunnel connecting Ireland and Scotland has been brought before the British Government, and the project will be pushed if the requisite financial support can be obtained. The estimated cost is $50,000,000. The route provisionally selected is from Stranraer in Scotland to Belfast in Ireland. The total distance is 51 1-2 miles, of which 34 1-2 miles would be tunnel, and 25 miles of the tunnel would be under the sea, along a line where the maximum depth is 480 feet. Electric motors would be used to drive the trains at an average speed of 60 to 70 miles per hour.

Susie E. Jenkins, twenty years old, of Philadelphia, says: "I have seen nearly all the funny shows that have come to Philadelphia in recent years, and not one of them could make me laugh. My mother has often tried to make me laugh by tickling me, but even that won't work. Ever since I can remember people have been telling me funny stories and cutting up all sorts of capers in the hope that I could be induced to smile; but all their efforts have been in vain. No; I have never consulted a doctor about it, for I have always enjoyed perfect health. I want to exhibit myself in public, and offer a prize to anyone who can make me laugh. It must be a queer sensation."

It has been recently asserted that mosquitoes are strongly attracted by certain sounds. This is confirmed by Sir Hiram Maxim, who in a letter to the London "Times" states that one of the electric lamps which he put up at Saratoga Springs, N.Y., in 1878, emitted a musical note; or rather the note proceeded from the box containing the dynamo-machine under the lamp. "One evening while examining the lamp he found that everything in the immediate vicinity was covered with small insects. They did not appear to be attempting to get into the globe, but into the box that was giving out the musical note. A close examination of these insects showed that they were all male mosquitoes. Although there were certainly two hundred times as many female mosquitoes on the ground as males, not a single female mosquito was found to have been attracted in the least by the sound."

An Uncollected Poem by Whittier.

There are hundreds of Whittier's early poems which were never placed by him in any collection of his works. They are to be found in the papers he edited and to which he contributed in the days before he consecrated all his powers to humanitarian work. They gave him a measure of literary reputation which must have gratified him at the time; but when he was baptized into the new spirit which informed all his later work he took pains to prevent the collection of the verses written in the vein of an outgrown ambition. His wish in this matter should be respected. And yet, while studying his early work, I find some poems which I fancy he would have preserved if they had not been overlooked when making his selections, writes S. T. Packard in the New York "Independent." Among these is this paraphrase from the German, which I find in "The Liberator" of August 10, 1833:

LINES FROM THE GERMAN OF LAMITER.

Thought after thought ye thronging rise,
Like spring doves from the startled wood,
Bearing like them your sacrifice
Of music unto God!
And shall those thoughts of joy and love
Come back again no more to me—
Returning like the patriarch's dove,
Wing-weary from the eternal sea—
To bear within my longing arms
The promise-bough of kindlier skies,
Plucked from the green immortal palms
Which shade the bowers of Paradise?

Child of the sea, the mountain stream
From its dark cavern hurries on,
Ceaseless by night and morning's beam,
By evening's star and noontide's sun—
Until at last it sinks to rest
O'erwearied in the waiting sea,
And moans upon its mother's breast—
So turns my soul to Thee.

Breaking it Gently.

"What do you want, little boy?"

"Is this where Mr. Upjohn lives, ma'am?"

"Yes."

"The Mr. Upjohn that runs the bank?"

"He is an officer in the bank."

"The Mr. Upjohn that went down town on a trolley car this morning?"

"I presume he went on a trolley car. What——"

"Is he the Mr. Upjohn that was in that horrible street car accident?"

"I haven't heard of his being in any street car accident."

"Didn't you hear 'at he'd sprained his ankle jumpin' out o' the car when the train run into it?"

"No, my little boy, you frighten me. What has——"

"Didn't you hear how he run into a drug store for a piece o' court-plaster to stick on a little cut he'd got over the eye?"

"Not at all. For mercy's sake—"

"He isn't in, is he, ma'am?"

"No, he's—"

"Name's John U. Upjohn, isn't it?"

"Yes, that's his name."

"Then he's the same man. He won't be here for an hour or two, I guess, 'cause he's stoppin' to have one of his teeth tightened that got knocked a little bit loose when he was jumpin' out o' danger, y' know."

"Little boy, tell me the whole story. I think I can bear it now."

"Well, ma'am, he's in the hospittle with four ribs broke an' one leg's in a sling an' his nose is knocked kind o' sideways, but he's getting along all right, an' he'll be out again in about a month, an' here's a letter f'm the doctor tellin' ye all about it, ma'am."

A school inspector, having a few minutes to spare after examining the school, put a few questions to the lower form boys on the common objects in the schoolroom.

"What is the use of that map?" he asked, pointing to one stretched across the corner of the room; and half a dozen shrill voices answered, in measured articulation:

"It's to hide the teacher's bicycle, sir!"—"Tit-Bits."

The owner of the animal (a black bear, by the way) dug up the barrel twice during the winter, but did not awaken the occupant, who was permitted to sleep on till May.

He is twenty years old, wears a number twenty-one shoe and a number twenty-one collar.

A Chinese manuscript lately discovered in the Paris library proves the startling fact that anaesthetics were used in China seventeen hundred years ago. A certain concoction, it states, was given by the doctors before performing an operation, which rendered the patient unconscious. The anaesthetic was a simple preparation of hemp.

The translation of the Bible from ancient to modern Greek, against which students in the Grecian capital have been rioting, and coming into fatal conflicts with troops, was ordered by Queen Olga, because she found so many Greeks could not read the language of their classic ancestors. The students oppose the translation on the ground that it would be desecration to put the Bible into Greek as it is now spoken.

Four hundred and ten thousand immigrants landed on the shores of the United States last year. Many of them were Christians, many others were not. The majority even of those who were had no copy of the Bible. In the hands of each, as he set foot upon the soil of his new home, the New York Bible Society placed a copy of the Scriptures. Twenty-one different languages were represented, the largest number being in German, the next largest in Swedish.

Because a beautiful young white woman, the heroine in Sir Walter Besant's serial story, "No Other Way," is forced to marry a negro criminal, the "Sunny South," one of the leading literary weeklies of the South, has announced the discontinuance of the publication of the story. The "Sunny South" declares the story passes the dead-line of Southern sentiment. It appears that the novel was selected after a synopsis had been submitted, and not until the fourth instalment were the objectionable features discovered. The editors declare the plot of the story to be "an obsession, the result of mental indigestion, from which we shall endeavor to save our readers."

Hang Trouble on a Chair.

"LAUGH and grow fat" is a saying as old as the hills. It has long been an accepted fact that humor is a promoter of digestion and merry words the deadliest foes of disease. A doctor named Kennedy writes an interesting article on the value of laughter, in which he shows it is not only a remedial agent, but is also a valuable preventive against a host of diseases. The physical effects of laughter are thus put down by Dr. Kennedy: Laughter increases the blood circulation. It enlarges the heart. It expands the lungs. It jiggers the diaphragm. It promotes the disculation of the spleen. In other words, laughter stirs up the vital regions of the body, gives them healthful exercise, and produces a mental exhilaration which acts upon the system much as a brisk walk in a crisp atmosphere does upon the appetite. As strong allies to laughter, Dr. Kennedy gives the following directions for mental peace of mind: Beware of theologians who have no sense of mirth; they are not altogether human. Keep your chin up. Don't take your troubles to bed with you; hang them on a chair with your trousers or drop them in a glass of water with your teeth.

Society Slang.

IT is rather amusing to watch the changes in society slang; for the "best" society has its own special vulgarities, which change from decade to decade—even from year to year. Lady Blessington, if she were reincarnated and suddenly projected into a woman's afternoon chatter at a smart club, would think she had missed her country, observes an English exchange. A few years ago it was the mode to scatter Gallicisms freely into conversation. But the French craze has passed, and even such an old servant as "chic" is never heard, and rarely seen but in the fashion articles. To-day's slang—in the "best" circles of England—has probably reached the lowest depth of fatuous vulgarity. Its keynote is abbreviation. What are "undies?" Well, they are the things that a woman puts on first in the morning and takes off last at night, when she gets into her "nighties." "Tissy-wissy" is another favorite Masonic word among those in the social know. It corresponds to the 'bus conductor's "little bit of all-right." And if you want to go a step further in compliment, you may describe your new frock—if you are a woman in the "best" set—as "quite too deevie for words." We hope Dr. Murray has a contributor on the pounce for these words in Mayfair. He has missed "deevie" from the New English Dictionary, but he is in time for "tizzy-wizzy," to say nothing—as, of course, nothing should be said—of "undies."

Surgeon (after the operation)—I am glad to be able to assure you, Mrs. Tyte-Phist, that the danger is now over and your husband will recover. We have successfully removed the appendix vermiformis, and it is of such a unique formation that I shall preserve it for use in my medical lectures. Mr. Tyte-Phist (opening his eyes) — You'll allow me something for it, I suppose, doctor?—Ex.

"How did it happen?" "Oh, I got into a game where the limit was the ceiling—and somebody took off the ceiling."

Ever since the Forth bridge was opened—eleven years ago—painting has gone on continuously, according to the "Mechanical Engineer." "Beginning at the south end, the workmen take three years to cover the entire length of the bridge, and, as three years represents approximately the life of the paint, no sooner are they finished than the men have to begin again. In this way every square inch of steel comes under observation at least once in three years. The staff of men employed varies in number from the maximum of 36."

A Serious Man's Thoughts on Winter.

AT the moment of writing it is only fair to say that King Frost has not yet got us in his icy grip. But as it is not unusual to expect something of the sort at this season of the year, we may very well stand up and look at the prospect of sport which any seasonable weather of the kind may bring us. There is sliding for instance. If you don't happen to possess a pair of skates, or to own a friend who will lend you a pair, Nature is determined that you shall not lose all chance of risking your neck, just because you are lacking the usual outfit.

Of course for really superior slides you ought to put a little water down overnight; but as you have probably grown out of little frivolities of that sort, you can confidently rely on your next door neighbor's little boy doing what is necessary in the matter. Doubtless you will not leave your house in the morning with any idea of becoming actively engaged as a display slider. It is not until you find one of your feet slowly but surely creeping upwards to the sky, as the song says, that it will occur to you to throw up your hands and drop into the conventional attitude as a measure of self-protection. You will probably be encouraged in this course by noticing that a small but enthusiastic knot of bystanders is endeavoring to raise a cheer for your benefit. The next moment the programme comes off with a loud bang and you scramble to your feet, and address yourself loudly to nobody in particular in a way that makes the thoughtful observer trustfully hope that the recording angel wasn't looking your way at the moment.

It is commonly understood that the gentler sex are denied the relief that is afforded to mere man by the possession of an elastic vocabulary. But a casual slide that is spread out on the pavement is perfectly catholic in its tastes, and is open to receive all comers. The slide makes no invidious distinctions as to age or sex. Anybody with a limb to break is warmly welcome. It seems a little hard, however, that when an accident of this kind does take place by the unexpected co-operation of a member of the fair sex, the unhappy victim is almost invariably a lady who should be old enough to know better. The young and flighty damsels who could fall on an extemporaneous slide and make quite an elaborate and picturesque display of the business, are usually most successful in avoiding accidents of the kind; while, on the other hand, elderly ladies will practically make a bee-line for the trouble and then shower a liberal perspective of knitted wool and red flannel on the unsympathetic spectator.

The part that snow plays in our lives varies according to circumstances. As the poet said, distance lends enchantment to the view. And when you are looking at the snow-clad landscape over the top of something cheerful and hot in a large glass, there is doubtless a good deal to be said for the poetic side of beautiful snow. At the same time, I am not one who believes in coddling when the snow is on the ground. I am glad to say I can enjoy as well as anyone a brisk walk along the open country when the snow is lying thickly around; and I think there are few moments when one feels more keenly than at such times what a glorious lark it is to be alive. The tingling of the blood as it comes through the veins, imparting a healthy glow to the cheek and all the rest of the details, as per patent medicine advertisement, are all benefits of the snow that I keenly recognise and cordially appreciate. But what does me all up, so to speak, is to have a small boy come up behind and sock me unawares in the neck with a half-melted snowball.

Of course, we are all young, and, after all, we can afford to laugh at trouble of that kind. Usually, if I am out in a fair-to-medium suit of clothes, and I find that snowballing is in the air, I endeavor to make for cover. But if the worst comes to the worst, and I find that my hat has been knocked off and my clothes are more or less blobbed with melting patches of snow, I consider I have lost all the dignity I set out with, and that I may as well start throwing back. I have a sort of feeling that, since I am no longer respectable, I may as well go the whole hog and have my fling with the crowd. I always look forward with some dread to the winter in the distant future when I may have become too old, or as the East End damsel said, "too much of a bloomin' lydy," to throw back. It seems to me that it is very cruel to snowball an old fellow who can only dance around and squirm and call on high Heaven for help; and I have no doubt that it is precisely this aspect of the case that makes it so deliriously enjoyable to the average boy on the snowballing lay. Indeed, to regard the matter from a sportive standpoint, the boy may consider that the old gentleman is in the same boat as the hunted fox, who is said to enjoy the hunt as much as anybody.

A Queer Lawsuit.

The other day Mrs. Norma Adams and Samuel Gardner, who live on adjoining farms, began suit to determine the ownership of a brood of fourteen turkeys, says the San Francisco "Argonaut." The brood, headed by two old hens, a white and a bronze, had been running the fields of both farms all summer. Mrs. Adams owned the bronze hen and Mr. Gardner the white. Each claimed that their respective hen was the mother of the brood. One of the witnesses before the justice testified that he had once turned a dog upon the straggling band of turkeys. At the approach of the dog the young birds flew into a tree, the bronze hen ran into the woods, while the white hen stood under the tree and gave battle to the dog, which she repulsed, then called the brood to her, and they marched off. After hearing this witness, the justice decided that the white hen was the mother of the brood, and gave the turkeys to Gardner.

Rebuttal Evidence.

"There, my dear," said the returned hunter, "there's one bird for you, anyway. Bagged him just as I was about to give up in disgust." "Oh, George!" she exclaimed, "it's a carrier-pigeon, isn't it?" "Not much! It's a quail." "But it has a card tied to its leg, with some message on it. Let's see. It says, 'John Jones, Poultry and Game, Central Market.'"—Philadelphia "Press."

How to Get Up an Appetite

Distaste for food often follows Grippe, and fevers, and is associated with a general weakness of the system. To impart a real zest for food, and give power to the stomach to digest and assimilate, no remedy can equal Ferrozone. This is a new and startling discovery. It strikes at the root of disease and by removing the cause, cures quickly and permanently. Ferrozone will quickly enable you to eat and digest anything. Ormond & Walsh, druggists, can tell you a great deal more about Ferrozone, how it cures and why it cures. Call to-day and see him.

The Water Commissioners

The Water Commissioners met yesterday afternoon at four o'clock. Plans for the working of the system were discussed at some length. The question of by-laws was taken up and some were drafted. These will be further discussed at the next meeting. The selling of debentures will be proceeded with in a few days as soon as the debenture certificates etc., have been signed.

One of Mr. Snowden's Jokes

One day Mr. Snowden, while at Gold Lake hunting for deer, took his gun and strolled off on a still hunt, all by himself. He was fortunate enough to kill a wild goose, which was prepared for the table next day. After dinner, he remarked, with a merry twinkle in his eye: "When we sat down, boys, you noticed a goose stuffed with sage. Now you may observe a sage stuffed with goose."

A VERY SUDDEN DEATH.

MISS CELIA SANDERSON EXPIRED SUDDENLY

After Leaving Work—Had Proceeded Only a Short Distance When She Fell on the Sidewalk.

Miss Celia Sanderson, an employee of the Electric Works, and whose parents live in the country, met death in a very sudden and altogether unexpected manner last evening a few minutes after six o'clock. Miss Sanderson and a companion had proceeded but a short distance from the Electric Works, when without warning she fell to the sidewalk. Her companion called for help which soon arrived, and the girl was carefully lifted and carried to a store, which was only a short distance off. Medical help was immediately called and everything was done that could be thought of. In a few minutes Dr. Young arrived but life was extinct. After careful inquiry he pronounced heart failure as the cause of her death.

Miss Sanderson boarded with her sister, Mrs. J. LeBar, on Stewart street, and was well known among a very large circle of friends. Her bright and cheerful disposition made her a favorite with all who knew her. Some time ago she graduated from the Peterborough Business College, where she had taken a very successful course. The news of the terribly sudden and unexpected death will be a painful shock to her many friends. The arrangements for the funeral were not completed up to a late hour last night.

Hotel Changes Hands

The firm of Moon & Conroy, who managed the National Hotel for some time past, has been dissolved, Mr. Moon retiring. The hotel will now be under the management of Mr. John Conroy, whose wide experience and popularity speak well for the future success of the hotel. Mr. Moon has not decided as yet, whether he will continue to reside in town or not.

COASTING ON SIDEWALKS

A Dangerous Practice Indulged in by Many of the Children in Town

Some years ago the council passed a by-law, forbidding children to coast down the sidewalks in town. Recently this forbidden custom has been revived by the children, and is indulged in every day in the week on the different hills in town. A few days ago the scholars were leaving the Collegiate Institute at noon, and a daring, reckless little fellow was coming down the Murray street sidewalk on a handsleigh, and, without any warning crashed into a young girl and knocked her down, severely bruising her limbs. This dangerous sport should be stopped. Nearly every day people are obliged to wade into the deep snow to avoid meeting a sleigh. What is pleasure for some, is often very dangerous for others, and the parents of the children or the authorities should put a stop to this.

Paine's Celery Compound

Brings Gladness and Joy to Homes Where Sickness Prevails.

IT HAS A MARVELLOUS RECORD AS A LIFE SAVER

Paine's Celery Compound makes sick people well. It is the one true specific recognized and prescribed to-day by our best physicians for diseases arising from a debilitated nervous system. Professor Phelps, M.D., the discoverer of Paine's Celery Compound, gave his wonderful prescription to his profession as a positive cure for wasting strength, nervous debility, sleeplessness, liver complaint, kidney disease, rheumatism and neuralgia, and the marvellous medicine has saved tens of thousands from death.

Paine's Celery Compound is the only true nerve and tissue builder; it quickly fortifies the weak parts of the body and promotes the healthy activity of the organs that make the blood and keep it pure. Let us urge you to test the power and virtues of one bottle; it cannot disappoint you; it has cured others suffering as you now suffer, and will most assuredly do the same for you.

Mr. J. Ralston, Nixon, Ont., testifies as follows: "It gives me great pleasure to add my testimony to the ever-increasing popularity of your preparation known as Paine's Celery Compound. It is now a year past since I had a severe attack of nervous prostration caused by chronic dyspepsia, and for a year I could not sleep at night. This condition of sleeplessness brought on delirium. I was attended by four of the best doctors of the county, and took a great quantity of medicine, but all failed to do me any good. I then decided to try your Paine's Celery Compound. After I had used four bottles the nervousness and dyspepsia left me, and I have done more work since than for years past. I now enjoy excellent health and consider myself completely cured. I have highly recommended your Paine's Celery Compound to others."

What He Wants to Know

In reply to a request of a subscriber, the following information is given in regards to the Trent Valley Canal: This waterway of 200 miles in length can be completed for $3,000,000. When complete it will give continuous barge navigation of 800 tons burden—and of twice the capacity of the Erie Canal—from Montreal to Sault Ste. Marie. It will shorten the distance between all the great western lake ports and Liverpool by 727 miles. It is capable of being operated during a season of seven months in a year and of transporting two hundred million bushels of grain per annum. By means of the numerous lakes and rivers which it utilizes and intersects, it will give a shore line of 1000 miles and lay under tribute six million acres of agricultural forest and mineral lands capable of yielding from 50 to 100 tons of freight per acre. It will utilize the finest continual system of water powers on the globe. 140 miles of this waterway is now completed, but bottled up at both ends, yet it is giving employment for internal commerce and tourist travel to 60 steamboats, besides numerous smaller craft.

ST. LUKE'S ENTERTAINMENT

Last Night Proved to be a Most Enjoyable and Successful Affair

The entertainment at St. Luke's last night, under the auspices of the Girls' Guild was a most enjoyable and successful affair. In the absence of Rev. Mr. Langfeldt, the chair was taken by Mr. E. A. Peck, who performed the duties in a most pleasing manner. The different parts of the program were introduced in a few well chosen and appropriate words.

The first number on the program was a duet by Miss E. Burnham and Miss K. Calcutt, which was admirably rendered, and was heartily applauded. Miss Nellie Davies rendered a solo in a most pleasing voice, and received a very hearty applause.

A dialogue, entitled, "The Old Maids' Convention," was presented by twenty young ladies, attired in old maids' costumes of a very ancient style. The platform was specially arranged for the piece, and mottoes of a very appropriate nature were hung on the walls. The reading of the President's and Treasurer's address, threw the audience into fits of laughter. After these were concluded, the "Old Maids" held an open meeting, and discussed the question of matrimony. While some were in favor of it, others held up their hands in horror, and denounced such a proceeding. At this stage of the proceedings, Prof. Pinkerton appeared on the scene with an electrical apparatus he called a transformer, and told the old maids that he could transform them into anything they wished to be. Some wanted to be singers, and one old maid thought if she could be transformed into a man she would be all right. They were put through a process of transformation, and all apparently got their wishes except the one who wanted to be a man. During the dialogue the audience could hardly restrain themselves.

The last dialogue was "The Dairy Maids' Drill," by twelve girls, all attired as dairy maids. The acting was very prettily done, and they received very warm applause.

Before closing, Rev. Mr. Langfeldt addressed the audience, and thanked them for the splendid attendance, and hoped they had enjoyed the evening. The entertainment closed with singing "God Save the King."

The Sunday school room, in which the entertainment was held, was packed to the doors, and many who could not gain admittance were turned away.

Grant to Volunteers

Editor Morning Times.

Dear Sir, — Allow me to inquire, through the columns of your paper, if the Town Council propose to make any grant to the volunteers who left here with the second draft of men for the third Canadian contingent. It is now some time since the men left here and I have not heard of the Council giving them any grant. The men of the second contingent and the men of the first detachment of the third contingent received their grants and I think it is only right that the others receive a similar amount. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your space, I remain,

NORTH AMERICAN OIL & REFINING COMPANY'S

Stock and It Will Make You Rich

The company owns 2,080 acres of land located in the Newhall-Acton White Oil Fields of Los Angeles County, California. Our manager, Mr. J. H. Parker, writes us under date of Jan. 15th that they have opened up two oil wells near our property, one being a gusher of white oil just as clear as alcohol, and of 52 degrees gravity. This oil is worth and is selling at $4.00 per barrel at the well, and producing better than 50 barrels per day. Our derrick is up and the machinery purchased; we expect to be drilling in a very short time. We now offer to the public 100,000 shares of this meritorious company's stock at the low price of 10 cents per share, and it is worth a great deal more money at the present time with the showing we have in the property. The demand for this oil is far greater than the supply, which is not so of the black oils of Lower California and Beaumont, Texas, that are a drug upon the market.

Regarding the officers of the company, they are all men of honor and means. There are no salaries paid to any of the officers, not even our General Manager, until our company is put on a paying basis.

INCORPORATION.

The company is capitalized for 1,500,000 shares, the incorporation having been effected under the laws of Wyoming, stock being all common stock, issued absolutely fully paid and forever non-assessable. The incorporation laws of Wyoming are peculiarly favorable to oil enterprises, and the par value of the stock has been fixed at One Cent per share in order to avoid the excessive revenue tax paid on stocks of a high par value.

LIABILITIES.

The company has no debts; all stock is fully paid and non-assessable, there are no stockholders' liabilities, and we have no royalties to pay for any purpose.

OUR LANDS.

The company's lands have been carefully selected by their engineer, Mr. J. H. Parker, who is also Vice President and General Manager, in conjunction with four of the best oil experts, who are well known throughout the state. These experts each unbeknown to the other went over our vast territory to locate a site to sink our first well; their reports are on file in the company's office, and we will be pleased to mail a copy of the same upon application, also maps of the oil fields with our property showing in the red. The directors call special attention to the maps, which have been drawn from actual surveys and personal inspection of the land and is accurate. The company's lands are distinctly shown as well as their relation to other oil lands and the location of oil wells, oil seepages and oil springs. A careful inspection of the map will aid prospective investors to judge of the oil under the company's lands.

The geological formation is perfect, the Anticlinal passing through the entire property, and being unbroken by granite formations.

GUARANTEE.

The officers and directors of the company have such great faith in the proposition that they will redeem all stock sold for cash, providing they do not strike oil as designated.

TREASURY STOCK.

The company holds in the treasury over 500,000 shares of treasury stock and some money. The proceeds of sale from the 100,000 shares now offered to the public will be used for the purpose of sinking wells.

REGISTRATION.

The stock is registered with the Colorado Title & Trust Company of Colorado Springs, Colorado, which guarantees any over-issue of stock.

The company would like to employ a few good Fiscal Agents to handle any part of this 100,000 shares of stock, giving them a very liberal commission. We take pleasure in recommending this stock to the good people of Peterborough and vicinity at the very low price of 10 cents per share; considering the condition of the property the stock is worth more money than what we are asking for it.

A CANADIAN VISITS THE BOER COLONY

A Winnipeger's Trip to the Island of Bermuda

What He Has to Say Regarding the Boer Colony

The Prisoners Well Cared for and Generously Treated by the British

Winnipeg, Feb. 11—Joseph T. Dumouchel, the well-known insurance man of this city, has just returned from an extended eight months' trip through the Americas and the West India Islands.

"The finest climate in the world, I believe," said Mr. Dumouchel, "is in Bermuda, where I spent several weeks. The island of Bermuda is somewhat oblong in shape and contains about 18,000 inhabitants, one-third of whom are whites. The largest town is Hamilton, which has a population of 3,000. It is the most interesting country in many ways in the world. During two or three months in the summer it is said to be extremely hot, but during the remainder of the year the climate is simply perfect.

LITTLE DRUNKENNESS

"There was one thing," said Mr. Dumouchel, "at which I was very much surprised. That was the scarcity of excessive drinking considering the fact that Jamaica rum is only two cents per glass and at the hotels a couple of men can have a small room to themselves and all they want to drink for two or three hours for the small sum of twelve cents. Yet I saw only one man the worse for liquor during my whole stay, and their police courts and jails have seldom an occupant. Crime is almost unknown and yet no prohibition is placed upon the liquor traffic. Cigars are only one cent each and they are of the finest."

THE BOER COLONY.

"Did you visit the colony of Boer prisoners in Bermuda? was asked.

"I was kindly granted permission to visit the colony though I was given stringent orders not to talk to any or to answer their queries concerning the outside world. There are about 16,000 prisoners there, about one-half of whom are women and children. They are confined on a group of small islands in a bay at one end of the island and appear to be well used. They have their own schools and religious services and are in good health, as fever and other epidemic diseases are not known."

"As soon as I arrived among the prisoners they came flocking around making all kinds of enquiries about the war and the outside world. "Have the British caught Dewet yet?" asked one man who looked like an officer among the rest.

"I told them I could give them no information about the matter, and they seemed disappointed. On the whole I think they are very well cared for, and as happy as can be expected under the circumstances.

ONE PRISONER ESCAPED

"One of the young Boer prisoners managed to make his escape. He swam for a couple of miles to a narrow channel through which a steamer bound for New York had to pass out of the harbor, where it then lay. He managed to climb on board, or possibly was hauled up by the stokers, with whom he hid himself during the voyage. In the meantime his escape had been discovered, and the authorities had wired to New York to have the ship searched. On its arrival there the officers boarded the vessel, and demanded the fugitive. The captain disavowed all knowledge of the affair, but finally the fugitive was found. He could not be taken back, however, and if he once got on shore he was a free man. He had no money, however, and therefore he could not land. In ten minutes the crowd of passengers who had gathered around had made up a purse and when the man was taken ashore he was carried joyfully on the shoulders of the populace. Money was supplied him, and he was at once set up in business on his own account. It was one of the most daring escapes ever executed."

Mr. Dumouchel was much impressed with the good treatment given the Boer prisoners by the British. They are fed on the best, and every comfort and convenience possible is provided. They are permitted to work at their own discretion and many of them employ their spare time in artistic pursuits, such as painting, drawing, carving and needlework. Since the escape of the young Boer prisoner the vigilance of the guards has been redoubled, and the regulations over the prisoners strictly enforced.

GERMANY PROVED A VERY GREEDY PARTNER

Britain is Distrustful of Any Alliance with Her—Chinese Negotiations Has not Kindled a Feeling of Security

London, Feb. 10.—English opinion awaits with a complacency not far removed from indifference Prince Henry's visit to America. Personally, the Prince is much liked in the Far East, and on his visits to London. He is, they say, the best of good fellows, ever ready to show the warmest spirit of comradeship, but he is no politician. "We can't have two in one family," he is reported to have said to one of his friends. No one supposes for a moment that his sojourn in America will have any more political result than is now following the recent friendly visit of the Prince of Wales to the Kaiser.

In truth, English opinion, so far as it finds an expression in the press, and at the clubs, is beginning more and more to discount the value to Great Britain or the United States of political intimacy with Germany. Englishmen cynically point to the Anglo-German agreement as the only kind of reciprocity Germany understands, and nobody yet has succeeded in discovering one little advantage that England has received in return for her complacency over Germany's theft of Shantung, her admission of Germany to a practical partnership in the Yang-tse Valley, and the use of her influence with the Sultan in behalf of the Kaiser's ambitions in Asia Minor.

ANGLO-GERMAN ALLIANCE.

When a year or so ago Mr. Chamberlain talked on public platforms about a British alliance with Germany, men shrugged their shoulders and said, "Oh, well, Chamberlain is no diplomatist, and does not mean an alliance in the formal sense." It would expose Mr. Chamberlain or any other Minister to far severer criticism if to-day he suggested, not an alliance, but even a continuance of the policy of which the Anglo-German agreement was the definite outcome, and, thinking of American foreign policy as running along in parallel lines with their own Englishmen cannot conceive of any less disappointment to American statesmen should they now respond to German wooing.

To-day the weekly reviews speak out unhesitatingly what is in the minds of most Englishmen. The Spectator says: "There is no sharing with Germany. She must rule absolutely, or at all. She means, if she can, to pull down the British Empire, and erect on its ruins, a Teutonic world-power, just as she hopes to build up on the ruins of the Austro-Hungarian Empire a European State which shall embrace all German-speaking Europe. An intense popular animosity is felt in Germany towards England. It is not sentimental, fictitious, or unreal; it is deep and genuine, or, as a German philosopher would say, positive and categorical. Germans realise instinctively that human beings cannot destroy a great human organization unless they feel morally justified in doing it. So they mean to try to destroy us like a logical people. They are preparing the necessary moral indignation.

GERMANY TOO GREEDY.

This sounds almost provocative, and would certainly be frowned upon if submitted to the British Foreign Office, but it little exaggerates the sort of talk one hears most generally among English politicians and journalists. Englishmen are quite ready to meet Americans in a fair commercial rivalry, and looking to their own industrial position and the growing cohesiveness of the Empire, they have the strongest faith in the British industrial future, but in the case of Germany they see a rival who, not content with trade competition, persists in dogging Great Britain's footsteps, ready to take every conceivable political advantage now, and eagerly awaiting the day when the completion of the German navy will give her new means of aggression at the expense of England, America, or any one else. They see, moreover, that wedged in as Germany is, between France and Russia, naval strength alone will never avail her.

Col. Picquart shows in the current number of the Grand Revue how a mere understanding between France and Great Britain, such as is quite conceivable in a day of international difficulty, and such as the Niger agreement might easily have led up to had the British Ministers desired it, would at once entail on Germany a fight for life. The bitterness of the present phase of English opinion will, of course, pass, but a substantial divergence between British and German politics must remain.

SIDE LIGHT ON SITUATION.

A sidelight is thrown on Anglo-Germanism by the belief that the British Government will announce in Parliament on Monday the abandonment of Wei Hai-Wei as a naval base, though it was England's vaunted offset to Germany's Kiachou and Russia's Port Arthur seizures. The lobbyists say that the ultimate destination of Wei-Hai-Wei is German hands, Germany conceding something in South Africa. Meanwhile the administration of Wei-Hai-Wei last week was transferred by the Admiralty to James Haldane Lockhart, Colonial Secretary at Hong Kong.

The British reply to the Dutch advances is accepted as a decisive rejection of the Boer delegates in Europe as negotiators, but leaves the way open for renewed negotiations by General Botha, through Lord Kitchener. Meanwhile, the blockhouse system wears down the enemy at the rate of 400 per week.

IN FILIPINO TORTURE TRAP

Two Officers Precipitated Into Pit Filled With Spikes

Washington, D.C., Feb. 11—An example of the atrocity of the Filipinos and the barbarous method of their warfare is found in a mail report to the War Department, telling of the narrow escape from death of Lieutenant Richard Wetherill and Lieutenant Geo. I Feeter of the Nineteenth Infantry, who were with detachments of their regiments scouting in the mountains of Loboc.

Having occasion to search a house which excited their suspicion they were on entering the main floor precipitated into a pit bristling with sharp pointed bamboo sticks. This form of atrocity in the trenches was frequent during the early days of the war in the island. Both officers were badly injured and the guide with them was impaled and died before he could be removed.

Another report tells in detail of a most elaborate plan to kill a number of men through which the floor of a large building to be occupied by troops was released from its supports in a way to be carefully balanced on a central pillar, with the greater weight placed at one end the occupants would have been thrust into a cellar beneath equipped with rusty bayonets and the favorite sharpened bamboo placed on end.

PASSING OF THE BICYCLE

They Have Almost Entirely Disappeared in Many American Cities

New York, Feb. 11—Statistics of the bicycle trade disclose the surprising fact that only twenty-four factories were in operation in the United States on January 1, as compared with sixty-nine a year previous, and 280 in 1900. The decrease in the output has fallen off more than 80 per cent in two years.

As wheels are dirt cheap, while the country is prospering, the conclusion is inevitable that the bicycle craze has passed. An evidence of this was recently contained in a report from Chicago, which said the little two wheeled machines had almost disappeared from the streets of the Windy City. In Kansas City fewer bicycles are seen than formerly. Denver, Colo., is said to be the home of more wheels than any other city in America, owing to its level and uncrowded streets.

The advent of the automobile was one of the factors in checking the sale of bicycles. Automobiles are still too costly to come into general use, but nobody knows what is to be the next stage of their development. In addition to the factories already established, Henri Fournier, the winner of the great Paris-Berlin race, has decided to erect a $2,000,000 automobile plant in New York. Apart from the coal mining and big metallurgic industries, it is estimated that automobile making directly and indirectly employs more people in France than any other industry.

The predicted relegation of the horse to the boneyard as a consequence of the bicycle's appearance has failed to materialise. Horses are to-day more popular, and they sell for more money, than before the bicycle was invented.

As a health builder the bicycle is no longer regarded as supreme. The stooping and cramped position of the rider is condemned by the doctors. Over-exertion on the wheel has injured more people than temperate exercise has helped. But the bicycle has its legitimate uses, and its continued employment is certain, although not as a fad.

Foreign Hatred Of England, From a British Point of View

London, Feb. 11—It is sad in this year of grace 1902 to contemplate a nation frothing at the mouth, snarling and baying at another for no obvious reason. It makes a Britisher sigh and look anxiously over the navy list. It makes no difference what England does, she is, and has long been, the object of the unreasoning hate of continental Europe. And in this we see a probable cause for England's not always well met advances to the United States, and the eagerness with which she has turned to the colonies. Nations, like individuals, crave affection. England's isolation may be splendid, but its loneliness makes it hard to bear. Hence England turns to her kin across the seas, offering them a genuine and deep regard, hoping that with an open-hearted communion with a related nation she may find far more than a compensation for the fierce enmity which ever blazed from the eyes of her near neighbors. At present, unfortunately, the people of the United States are not ready to freely return England's good will. But, educating influences extending from the better thinking portion downward through the ignorant prejudices of the lower classes, together with the ever-growing intimacy of the two peoples, and the unifying influences of their literatures, will work a change in the sentiments of those classes in which a dislike for England is now most marked.

AT BALAKLAVA

The Man Showed Himself as a Hero and Two Medals Attested the Fact.

New York, Feb. 11—James Reid, a British veteran, whose personal heroism at Sebastopol and on the field of Balaklava in the famous charge of the Light Brigade had won him two medals, is dead in this city from asphyxiation. The old soldier, on retiring, had turned the stopcock of a gas heater in the wrong direction, and when he was found in his little three-room flat the gas fumes had done what the bullets of the Crimea failed to do.

Mr. Reid, who was in his seventy-third year, kept a small cigar and stationery store. He was born in Edinburgh, Scotland. When he was 18 years old, his father, who had distinguished himself in the battle of Waterloo, moved to Australia. James preferred to follow a soldier's career, as his father had done, and he enlisted in the British army. During the Crimean campaign he rose to the rank of quarter-master sergeant in his command, the Chestnut troop of the Royal horse artillery. This rank he won by personal gallantry in action, and he had two medals to attest the fact.

Again he distinguished himself during the cholera outbreak in the army, and won special honorable mention for his fearless and devoted attention to duty in the stricken camp.

Sergeant Reid purchased his discharge from the army and came to America in 1885.

A SPLENDID INVESTMENT

An Oil Struck That is Sure to be a Big Money Maker.

We call the attention of capitalists and investors to the Advertisement elsewhere of the North American Oil and Refining Company, which appears in this issue.

This stock should meet with ready sale, as it is likely to prove a bonanza to investors. Oil has been struck very close to the company's property, and it is known that the same oil channels run through it. The stock being disposed of is treasury stock, and not personal stock.

The company is controlled by men of undoubted honor and probity, being: Hon. E. A. Sunderlin, Colorado Springs; J. H. Parker, Vice-President and General Manager, who is a man of broad experience in the oil business, having passed upon 397 wells, and out of that number only had three failures; Mr. Geo. Cockburn, banker, President of a number of mining companies and Sec.-Treas. of the Boulder Oil Co., the stock of which is worth four times par price.

The latter fact shows what money there is in oil. A man, for instance, who invested $100 in the Boulder Company a short time ago can get $400 for his stocks. There is every hope that the North American will be even more successful.

Further particulars may be obtained on application to Mr. G. A. Cockburn, Colorado Springs, Col., or to F. W. Nelson, Broker, Water street, Peterborough.

ALASKA IS GROWING WARMER

Ocean Current Changes Course and Modifies Severe Climate

Tacoma, Wash., Feb. 11—Sea Captains lately arrived from the western coast of Africa announce their belief that the Japan current has changed its course in the eastern part of the Pacific ocean and is now running several hundred miles to the north and east of its former channel.

Since the fall of 1899 these mariners hold that this warm ocean current has been sweeping with constantly increasing strength toward the Alaskan shore line.

In the fall of 1899 the western coast of Alaska was shaken by a terrific earthquake. Since that time Alaska's climate has been changing. It is believed that the Japan current was turned eastward by a stupendous submarine upheaval, which formed a new chain of submarine mountains, throwing the current against the shore.

At first it was cooled by sea level glaciers, which accounts for the gradual change in temperature. The current has finally resumed its warmth and the whole Alaskan climate has become milder. Last summer the climate there was rainy and warm like Puget Sound, 1000 miles further south. The entire winter has been mild and rainy from Nome to Juneau.

A PRO-BOER BEATEN

Doukhobor Would Not Hear Anti-British Agitator

Severley Punished Another Foreigner Who Has Not Been Seen in the City Since.

Winnipeg, Feb. 11—An incident which should go far toward disabusing people's minds of the opinion that a Doukhobor will not fight for his adopted country happened last night in a north end hotel.

For some days the attention of a great many people, especially those of foreign extraction, has been attracted by a rather peculiar looking foreigner who gave his name as Wasyl Dudinsky and who could converse in German, French and Russian with equal facility. He had a smattering of English, but generally floated around here and there confining his acquaintanceship to men of his own language and nationality.

He seemed especially interested in the Doukhobors and became acquainted with as many as possible. Though without visible means of support, he never seemed short of funds and managed to ingratiate himself with most of those with whom he came in contact.

The topic of his conversation generally turned upon the subject of the Boer war and the atrocities of British soldiers. As a general rule there was very little disagreement with his arguments so long as he paid for the beer, and, emboldened by the silence of his listeners, he gradually became stronger in his assertions. At the same time the suspicion grew among his supposed victims that he had some definite object in talking and spending his money so freely.

The explosion came when Dudinsky was spreading his doctrines before a couple of Doukhobors over several glasses of beer. He became more violent than usual in his charges against the British and finally was bold enough to assert that he was a special Boer agent sent here from Hamburg to work among the Doukhobors and Galicians.

This was as far as he went. One of the Douks, a strapping six footer, reached over the little centre table on which the beer stood, and grabbing the pro-Boer by the neck, proceeded to drag him around the room, punched his face, poured beer down his back and then threw him out into the street. Most of those who witnessed the drubbing understood the situation and said never a word. The special agent with the versatile tongue has not since been seen.

COCKRAN SHIES AT DAVIS?

Report That He Wouldn't Sit on the Stage With Him at a Pro-Boer Meeting

Boston, Feb. 10—A pro-Boer meeting was scheduled at Faneuil Hall this evening, but the affair did not take place. It is said by some of the people having the affair in charge that it was called off on account of the inability to obtain the hall, but no meeting of any kind was held in the place to-night. Another story heard about the entrance to the hall was to the effect that Bourke Cockran, who was featured as the leading speaker, would not sit on the same platform with Webster Davis. Davis was another of the advertised speakers.

FOUND DEAD IN THE SNOW

David Vallentine, an Old Man, Meets a Terrible Death

David Valentine, a very respectable old gentleman, who, for some time past has been living with Mr. Hicks, a farmer residing a short distance this side of Burleigh, met a shocking and tragic death on Saturday night in the snowdrifts, his dead body being found yesterday morning. The unfortunate old gentleman had been staying in town for a few days last week, and started out on Saturday to reach his home. He was seen walking through Young's Point on Saturday afternoon, and it is thought that in the dark, and blinded by the whirling snow that filled the air he lost his way, and after wandering around in the vain hope of finding the road or some dwelling he became exhausted and sank down into the snow. He would be frozen to death in a very short time, being in an exhausted condition, after making a stubborn effort to save himself.

On finding the body, Mr. Hicks at once communicated with Dr. Grey, coroner, but as there were no marks of violence on the body, and there being no doubt as to the storm causing the old man's death, an inquest was considered unnecessary. Deceased was about 62 years of age, and belonged to St. Thomas. He was a quiet, sober, respectable man, and his shocking death came as a blow to those with whom he was acquainted.

Can Use the Best

The man who can advertise at all can advertise in the very best medium—the newspaper which has a large circulation among the people who are able to buy things. A small advertisement in such a journal is better than a large one in a newspaper of small circulation. It has been demonstrated that no advertisement is too small to escape the attention of the majority of newspaper readers.

DE WET HAS ESCAPED AMONG THE CATTLE

Nearly Three Hundred of His Men Killed, Wounded or Taken Prisoners by the British

THE BOER DELEGATES ARE READY FOR PEACE

Willing to Submit to Conditions Laid Down by Lord Lansdowne—How Kitchener is Saving Money

London, Feb. 11.—From Wolve hoek Lord Kitchener has to-day telegraphed a long description of a combine movement of numerous British columns with the object of securing Gen. De Wet.

Lord Kitchener says the advance began the night of Feb. 5, the whole force moving from various directions and forming a continuous line of mounted men on the west bank of the Liebenberg's vlei from Frankfort as far south as Fanny's Home, and thence to Kaffir kop. The line then advanced to the west, and the following night the British entrenched with their outposts 50 yards apart. They held the line from Holland, on the Heilbron-Frankfort blockhouse line to Doorn kloof, on the Kroonstad-Lindley blockhouse line, while the columns were also working in advance of the blockhouse lines to prevent De Wet's crossing. The advance was continued Feb. 6, and De Wet was within the enclosure, but, realizing his position, he ordered his men to disperse and seek safety during the night. De Wet himself, with some men and a number of cattle, made for the Kroonstad-Lindley blockhouse line, and at one o'clock in the morning, when it was very dark, by rushing his cattle at the fence, broke his way through the line, mixed up with the cattle, and losing three men killed.

Many attempts were made to break through the line on the night of February 7, reports Lord Kitchener, the line of the outposts being attacked at various places throughout the night.

But very few escaped, and ten dead Boers were picked up in the morning near Heilbron.

"I did not yet get exact details of the Boer casualties," continues Lord Kitchener, "but, as far as I have ascertained they consist of 283 in killed, wounded, and prisoners, as well as about 700 tired horses and many cattle.

KRUGER MAY MOVE.

London, Feb. 11.—A despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company from Utrecht indicates the probability of the removal of the Boer headquarters to Geneva on account of friction between Mr. Kruger and his associates and the Dutch Government.

Dr. Leyds, representative in Europe of the Transvaal, is reported as declaring that the recent proposals looking to the establishment of peace in South Africa made by the Dutch Premier, Dr. Kuyper, were an unwarrantable interference in the affairs of the Transvaal. Some of the Boer delegates, it is said, are at variance with Dr. Leyds.

WANT TO VISIT SEAT OF WAR.

London, Feb. 11.—A despatch to a news agency from Brussels says:—

"It is understood here that the Boer delegates have decided to submit to the conditions laid down in Lord Lansdowne's communication to the Dutch Government, and are preparing a communication to the British Government asking permission to visit South Africa and setting forth the object of the proposed visit. It is expected that the request will reach England next week."

Mr. Chamberlain's announcement in the House of Commons on Thursday that the substance of the correspondence with the Dutch Government would be communicated through Lord Kitchener to the Boer generals puts an end to the incident which began with Dr. Kuyper's visit.

If the Boers have ever hoped for foreign intervention they cannot well hope for it any more. In these circumstances it is, of course, possible that Generals Botha, De Wet, Delarey, with or without concurrence of Mr. Schalkburger and Mr. Steyn, may give up the struggle in despair, but their course will depend upon military considerations, with which the civilian, even if he had the requisite knowledge, is incompetent to deal.

Threats have no effect upon the mass of Englishmen. Abuse by German newspapers only strengthen their determination to go on fighting. At the idea of foreign intervention they laugh.

If the Boers or any other foreigners suppose that Great Britain is unable or unwilling to carry on the war they are very much mistaken.

There is a peace party here, but it does not rest upon any disbelief in the material resources of the British Empire. Its cardinal principle is that reasonable men on both sides would agree upon a peace which would make another war in South Africa a practical impossibility.

CAPE COLONY UNITED.

Cape Town, Feb. 11.—At a meeting of citizens held here last night, at which several thousand were present, a resolution was passed refuting the Continental calumniators of the British troops. Colonial Secretary Graham delivered a strong speech.

A resolution was also adopted supporting the attitude of the Imperial Government in regard to the war. These resolutions represent the united loyal feeling through the Cape Colony.

HOW KITCHENER IS SAVING MONEY.

London, Feb. 11.—Col. Sir Charles Vincent, M.P., who has just returned from South Africa, said in the course of a speech at Eton College last night that by businesslike methods Gen. Kitchener was getting back $40,000 a month from the field canteens. Gen. Kitchener advised that people at home should not send the soldiers chocolate and cigarettes, as they can be obtained at the field canteens, but to devote the money to the soldiers' families at home. Many persons think, Col. Vincent said, that Gen. Kitchener is very austere and difficult to approach. As a matter of fact, there was no more agreeable man. He had extraordinary judgment, and a wonderful facility for work. He woke up every morning at five o'clock, telegraphed everywhere, interviewing heads of departments, and devoting the rest of the day to problems of the campaign.

ITEMS OF INTEREST

London, Feb. 3.—All the members of the royal family from the King down to the Prince of Wales' eldest son have been vaccinated. The King now goes with his arm in a sling. The queen's slight indisposition this week, which prevented her returning from Windsor on the day arranged, is also attributed to the ills following vaccination.

Lord Rosebery was vaccinated a fortnight ago and it "took" well.

London smallpox epidemic has been fluctuating, but on the whole it shows an upward tendency.

The record of 1,[illegible] cases under treatment having been reported this week, vaccination is becoming very general. Both in the house of commons and the house of lords one may see at least half a dozen members with an arm in a sling.

Many cases of serious illness in adults from vaccination are reported. This week a fashionable wedding was postponed because the bride felt very ill from this cause.

It is a remarkable coincidence that in 1838, the year of Queen Victoria's coronation, London also had a heavy smallpox epidemic, which much interfered with the number of visitors and the size of the street crowds.

THE MANNERS OF SCHOOL CHILDREN

Dr. Hodgins, the Deputy-Minister of Education, is asking at the present time if it be true what many people of reflection are charging—that our school children are becoming devoid of politeness. As one would suppose, school teachers resent the charge as one more against themselves than against the children. There is something in this view of it, but we must sorrowfully acknowledge that thirty years ago no one would have thought of making a charge that today has only too much foundation in fact. General observations are not always convincing therefore we shall proceed to particularize: Some years ago one autumn afternoon two hundred young men or so were proceeding townwards from the school buildings. A young girl was riding a spirited horse in the opposite direction. The animal, frightened by the crowd, became alarmingly restive, when, to the horror of a few older spectators, a large majority of the young men began to shout and catcall to the evident terror of the plucky rider. The horse became almost frantic. The spectators implored the boys to forbear, whereupon the shouting was redoubled and directed at the spectators as well. A more ignoble sight we never witnessed. Again, two of a band of school Hooligans were chosen to do some daring deed, which in this case consisted in the pulling of the whiskers of a well-known and respected citizen. For this the boys were fined. More recently the flower beds in the Victoria Gardens were despoiled of their beautiful show of flowers by some of the same highly civilized class of people. It was alleged that permission had been given by the authorities, but this of course was untrue.

In view of such happenings as these, and of the general opinion of that part of the public which remembers when these things would have been impossible, we are inclined to sympathise with Dr. Hodgins's fear that some part of the school training has been misdirected.

The Boers seem to be willing to agree to peace if Lord Salisbury will take Milner home, stop sending soldiers to South Africa, and put Kruger back in power. They do not manifest any disposition to haggle over a big war indemnity. They need more licking.

Boston has been having a "spasm" of amateur circus, in which the pink ladies with long stockings, and the men who tie themselves into knots do the thing for fun. A Tale of the Quick and the Dead.

AN old friend of Mr. Abell, proprietor of one of the Baltimore papers, asked to have his boy taken into that office and taught the business. He was added to the city staff as a special favor. The city editor sent the youngster out to Druid Hill Cemetery to describe that aristocratic burial place. He was instructed to prepare a list of the distinguished lot owners and to mention all the famous dead who rested under the velvety turf. The reporter was neither experienced nor careful. He went to the office of the cemetery company, and, being allowed access to the books, copied such names as seemed worthy of selection. In writing his notes the young man mixed his lists, gave to the distinguished dead the names of the living lot owners, and made up his list of the distinguished survivors from his catalogue of the dead.

The article was immediately put in type, and appeared the following morning.

When Mr. Abell reached his office that day he found a throng of citizens awaiting him.

"What can I do for you, sir?" he demanded in his brusque manner of the first man in broadcloth who pushed into his private office.

"Do? What haven't you done? I am G. Washington Smith and your paper says that I am buried at Druid Hill. It's shameful, sir; and I demand a correction."

"Does my paper say you are dead?" asked Mr. Abell gravely, looking at his visitor over the top of his glasses.

"It does, and——"

"Well, I want to say to you, Mr. G. Washington Smith, that if my paper says you're dead, you are dead. Good morning; this is no place for ghosts!"

Equal to Three.

Public vehicles in Paris are allowed to carry only as many passengers as can find seats. After that number has been admitted no one is allowed to enter. The explanation will serve to introduce an incident reported by a correspondent of the Pittsburg "Dispatch."

A crowd of men and women, each with a numbered ticket, showing the order in which they were to enter the next street car, stood at the Place de l'Etoile station when the down-town car arrived.

Surveying the crowd, the conductor cried out: "Only three places in the car! Who has ticket No. 1?"

With that Mrs. Blank of Chicago, the stoutest woman in the American colony, approached, holding up the ticket called for.

"Step aboard, madam," said the conductor, ringing his go-ahead bell.

"Wait! Wait! I've No. 2!" called a little Frenchman.

"You're too late," replied the conductor. "Every place is taken."

An Old Letter.

A WHOLESALE merchant of Philadelphia, in looking over old papers and records, recently came across an interesting document. It was a letter of instruction sent forty years ago by a merchant in St. Louis to his agent in San Francisco. He thus describes it in the Philadelphia "Times:"

"It related to the disposal of a lot of goods which had been shipped by way of Cape Horn, and although it contained over fifteen thousand words and a copy of a good-sized invoice, it was written on just two sheets of paper.

"The paper itself is a sort of tough, opaque tissue, very thin and light, and when folded the letter slips easily into an envelope three inches wide.

"Why it was gotten up in such a peculiar style is explained by the stamp on the corner, which is one of the old 'pony express' series, embellished with a picture of a man on horseback, spurring at a gallop across the plains.

"I know, of course, that the Pacific mail of that period was carried by relay express riders, but I never before realized what great pains were taken to reduce the weight to the lowest possible point. I am told that the letters were stored in little flat pouches under the flaps of the saddle, and that they were usually written on a specially prepared tissue.

"The one I have described must have occupied an expert clerk several days, for the penmanship, while microscopic, is beautifully executed, and as clear and legible as print.

"The stamp is of the denomination of fifty cents, and, taken altogether, it would be hard to find a more striking reminder of the astonishing progress that has been made in this country in a trifle over one generation.

"Everything about the little brown letter speaks of dangers, difficulties, and rude, primitive conditions. It is difficult to realize that the route it traveled is now the great highway of a thousand rushing trains, bearing the transcontinental commerce of the nation."

Australia's Governor-General.

It is feared in some quarters that the Earl of Hopetoun will not be able to complete his term as Governor-General of Australia. His Lordship has never entirely shaken off the effects of the illness which prostrated him in India on his way out to Australia, and though he was really prominent as the host of the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall, he has since, owing to his unsatisfactory health, been unable to fulfil many of his public engagements.

"Pleasant Dreams"

Cries the young maid to her mother, as she retires to rest. The mother smiles, but sighs. She knows that the pains that rack her will not stop for darkness, and that if she sleeps her dreams will only be echoes of the sufferings of the day.

Why not sleep soundly and rise refreshed at morning, with strength and courage for the day's duties? Weak, nervous women, sufferers from backache, bearing-down pains, and other womanly ailments, have found a perfect cure in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It heals the womanly diseases which cause the pains and nervousness. It makes weak women strong and sick women well.

"I deem it my duty to express my heartfelt gratitude for having been the means, under Providence, of restoring me to health," writes Mrs. [illegible], of Springhill, Lee Co., Fla. "For nearly two years I suffered from female weakness so I could not stand on my feet any length of time; could scarcely walk at all. Appetite was much impaired; I had bearing-down sensations; can't express how badly I did feel. Had tried several kinds of medicine which did me little or no good. At last decided to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I had not taken all of two bottles before I saw it was benefiting me, so I continued to take it until I had taken seven bottles, when I felt entirely cured. Did not feel a touch of my old complaint. It has been over a year since I took your medicine, and I can truthfully say that my health has been better for the last year than it had been for four years previously.

"You may publish this as a testimonial."

A Scientist's Grim Discovery.

Dr. Casagrandi, in reading a paper before a medical association in Rome stated that he had employed a number of women wearing long skirts to walk for one hour through the streets of the city, and, after the promenade was over, he had taken these skirts and had them submitted to a very careful bacteriologic examination. There were found on every skirt large colonies of noxious germs, including those of typhoid fever, consumption, influenza and tetanus (or lock-jaw). Numerous other bacilli were likewise well represented on each skirt. Dr. Casagrandi maintained that, in view of these facts, women, and especially mothers, should at once discontinue wearing trailing skirts, and other members of the Medical Congress unhesitatingly expressed the same opinion, and passed resolutions to that effect. That women should subject themselves to the filth, to say nothing of the possible dangers of trailing gowns, has long been a wonder to those acquainted with bacteriology. Nevertheless, so long as fashion calls for long skirts, no reform can be expected, for the great majority of women are bound to be in the fashion regardless of any ordinary considerations. There is some encouragement, however, in the fact that many of the younger women of the present wear their golf and bicycle skirts throughout the day, and merely dress for dinner and the evening.

A Fox's Revenge.

A gentleman out shooting one day came to a river, where he saw six geese beyond shot. He determined to wait for them to approach the shore. While sitting there he saw a fox come down to the shore and stand some time and observe the geese. At length he turned and went into the woods and came out with a very large bunch of moss in his mouth. He then entered the water very silently, sank himself, and then, keeping the moss above the water, himself concealed, he floated among the geese. Suddenly one of them was drawn under the water, and the fox soon appeared on the shore with the goose on his back. He ascended the bank, and found a hole made by the tearing up of a tree. This hole he cleared, placed in it the goose, and covered it with great care, strewing leaves over it. The fox then left; and while he was away the hunter unburied the goose, closed the hole and resolved to wait the issue. In about an hour the fox returned with another fox in company. They went directly to the place where the goose had been buried, and threw out the earth. The goose could not be found. They stood regarding each other for some time, when suddenly the second fox attacked the other most furiously, as if offended by the trick of his friend. During the battle the hunter shot them both.

Mining For Rubies.

ONE advantage gained by the victory of the British over King Thebaw of Burmah some years ago, was the acquisition of the famous ruby mines, from which had come the finest "pigeon-blood" stones in the world, and it was expected that an immense treasure of these gems would be found in the royal palace. But, although in the looting of the monarch's hastily-abandoned residence, jars filled with rubies were discovered, nearly all of them were of little value, being flawed and in other respects poor specimens.

It was a great disappointment. Nevertheless, confidence in the resources of the mines was unshaken, and capitalists in England were so eager to buy shares in a company organized to exploit the ruby fields that the police were obliged to defend, with drawn clubs, the officers of the concern against a swarm of half-crazed would-be investors.

Shares in the enterprise were boomed to astonishing figures, but tumbled alarmingly when news began to leak out that the ruby craze was likely to prove a bubble. Mining had been begun on an extensive scale, but somehow the gems did not materialize, and it looked as though the fields were much less valuable than had been supposed, or as if the deposits had been exhausted. After some years investors made up their minds that their money was as good as lost. Hence the great and delightful surprise conveyed by the recent intelligence that the mines have begun to pay dividends.

Experience has taught improved methods of mining, and an electrical power plant has been set up by the company for washing the ruby-bearing earth, called "byon." This byon is widely distributed throughout the Mogok Valley. Natives have worked the upper crust of it for centuries, says the "Saturday Evening Post," and the idea now in view is to get at the lower levels and dig down to bed-rock, where, because of their weight, the largest crystals are likely to be found. A fine stone of twenty-eight carats was picked up recently, and its value may be imagined from the fact that a ruby of one carat is worth four times as much as a diamond of the same size.

The British company (as reported by Mr. G. F. Kunz to the Geological Survey) is now producing fully one-half of the world's yield of rubies, and its leases are said to include practically all of the ruby-bearing territory of Burmah.

Protection of Words.

IN the November "Era" William S. Walsh pleads for much-abused words and phrases:

"In these days when everybody is writing and everybody seems to succeed, would it not be well to start a Society for the Protection of Words and Phrases? Many of these are so brutally overworked by the amateur! The winged words, the words that burn, the thoughts that breathe, the telling phrases, do they not clamor loudly for a rest? That very sentence affords an illuminating example of what I mean. How apt, how vivid, how expressive it would be if all its epithets had not lost their vitality through overwork. To the sated reader the whole sentence is but the echo of an echo, it not merely means nothing, but it is robbed even of its sound and fury. The greenhorn who complained of Hamlet that it was too full of quotations unconsciously expressed a great fact through the medium of a bull. In a wrongheaded way he pointed out that constant reiteration has reduced the grandest passages in the language to mere commonplaces. Give our familiar quotations a rest. Lay to sleep our household words. Let fortune for a while cease to favor the brave. Let us feign that the poet is made. Let a man who would steal another's thunder be arrested for felony. Let us win no more golden opinions. Let the favored few withdraw to some select seclusion, and the countless thousands to some dry-eyed privacy. Thus may nouns, adjectives and phrases, after a long rest, reawaken with the freshness of the morning upon them, their original meanings recreated, energetic, effective, brilliant, as on the day when they were first conceived and brought forth."

A Dream Story.

From time to time I have been so interested and amused by reading in the "Spectator" accounts of vivid and realistic dreams that I feel tempted to narrate one that happened to me, leaving it to your judgment as to whether it is worthy of notice in your paper. In November, 1898, I awoke one morning fully impressed with the idea that I was receiving as a gift an unusually large gypsy ring, set with a single sapphire with a brilliant on each side. The dream was a pleasant one to the female mind, and I soon fell asleep again, but only to awake with a still stronger impression that the jewel was actually in my hands. So curious were my sensations that on my maid entering my room at 8 o'clock I told her of the two dreams, most minutely describing the ring, and I also asked my husband to bear witness to the statement should anything follow to confirm the dream. Two hours later the postman arrived, and so great was my excitement and astonishment at seeing a small, neatly done up packet (evidently a ring case) that I dare scarcely open it, and decided to ask my maid to do so. Before breaking the seal I asked her to repeat the description of the ring that I had previously given her, and then the little packet was opened, and the joyful exclamation followed: "Why, my lady, here it is!" The ring was sent to me by a friend in memory of his wife, who had died some months before; but I had absolutely no idea that I should be the recipient of any souvenir of her, nor did I ever see her wearing the ring in question. The same maid is still in my service, and can (as well as Sir Anthony) substantiate my story.—Letter in the London "Spectator."

Stevenson's Grave.

A visit to the grave of R. L. Stevenson would disappoint many people. While some time back visits to this famous hill were most frequent, the limit must now be six persons yearly. And no wonder! The place is quite overgrown with weeds, and perhaps will some day be hard to discover.—New Zealand "Times."

Curious Bits of News.

That the German authorities in Samoa are determined to thoroughly Germanise that country is shown by the fact that the English missionaries in the islands have now been ordered to instruct their pupils and adherents in the Teuton tongue. American and Chilian dollars, as well as British coins, are also to make way for German money, and apparently Samoa will presently become as purely a German colony as New Caledonia is French.

"The latest in 'yells,'" says the Kansas City "Journal," "is that of the convicts on their way from the jail in the county in which they were sentenced to the penitentiary. A gang of fifteen of them from Buchanan County, the sheriff's 'guests' on a special car, gave vent to this yell at each railway station they passed between St. Joseph and Jefferson City a few days ago: 'Two years—five years—we will stay; didn't like St. Joe anyway!'"

The subject of a tunnel connecting Ireland and Scotland has been brought before the British Government, and the project will be pushed if the requisite financial support can be obtained. The estimated cost is $50,000,000. The route provisionally selected is from Stranraer in Scotland to Belfast in Ireland. The total distance is 51 1-2 miles, of which 34 1-2 miles would be tunnel, and 25 miles of the tunnel would be under the sea, along a line where the maximum depth is 480 feet. Electric motors would be used to drive the trains at an average speed of 60 to 70 miles per hour.

Susie E. Jenkins, twenty years old, of Philadelphia, says; "I have seen nearly all the funny shows that have come to Philadelphia in recent years, and not one of them could make me laugh. My mother has often tried to make me laugh by tickling me, but even that won't work. Ever since I can remember people have been telling me funny stories and cutting up all sorts of capers in the hope that I could be induced to smile; but all their efforts have been in vain. No; I have never consulted a doctor about it, for I have always enjoyed perfect health. I want to exhibit myself in public, and offer a prize to anyone who can make me laugh. It must be a queer sensation."

It has been recently asserted that mosquitoes are strongly attracted by certain sounds. This is confirmed by Sir Hiram Maxim, who in a letter to the London "Times" states that one of the electric lamps which he put up at Saratoga Springs, N.Y., in 1878, emitted a musical note; or rather the note proceeded from the box containing the dynamo-machine under the lamp. "One evening while examining the lamp he found that everything in the immediate vicinity was covered with small insects. They did not appear to be attempting to get into the globe, but into the box that was giving out the musical note. A close examination of these insects showed that they were all male mosquitoes. Although there were certainly two hundred times as many female mosquitoes on the ground as males, not a single female mosquito was found to have been attracted in the least by the sound."

An Uncollected Poem by Whittier.

There are hundreds of Whittier's early poems which were never placed by him in any collection of his works. They are to be found in the papers he edited and to which he contributed in the days before he consecrated all his powers to humanitarian work. They gave him a measure of literary reputation which must have gratified him at the time; but when he was baptised into the new spirit which informed all his later work he took pains to prevent the collection of the verses written in the vein of an outgrown ambition. His wish in this matter should be respected. And yet, while studying his early work, I find some poems which I fancy he would have preserved if they had not been overlooked when making his selections, writes S. T. Packard in the New York "Independent." Among these is this paraphrase from the German, which I find in "The Liberator" of August 10, 1833:

LINES FROM THE GERMAN OF LAMITER.

Thought after thought ye thronging rise,
Like spring doves from the startled wood,
Bearing like them your sacrifice
Of music unto God!
And shall these thoughts of joy and love
Come back again no more to me—
Returning like the patriarch's dove,
Wing-weary from the eternal sea—
To bear within my longing arms
The promise-bough of kindlier skies,
Plucked from the green immortal palms
Which shade the bowers of Paradise?

Child of the sea, the mountain stream
From its dark cavern hurries on,
Ceaseless by night and morning's beam,
By evening's star and noontide's sun—
Until at last it sinks to rest
O'erwearied in the waiting sea,
And moans upon its mother's breast—
So turns my soul to Thee.

Breaking it Gently.

"What do you want, little boy?"

"Is this where Mr. Upjohn lives, ma'am?"

"Yes."

"The Mr. Upjohn that runs the bank?"

"He is an officer in the bank."

"The Mr. Upjohn that went down town on a trolley car this morning?"

"I presume he went on a trolley car. What——"

"Is he the Mr. Upjohn that was in that horrible street car accident?"

"I haven't heard of his being in any street car accident."

"Didn't you hear 'at h'd sprained his ankle jumpin' out o' the car when the train run into it?"

"No, my little boy, you frighten me. What has——"

"Didn't you hear how he run into a drug store for a piece o' court-plaster to stick on a little cut he'd got over the eye?"

"Not at all. For mercy's sake—"

"He isn't in, is he, ma'am?"

"No, he's—"

"Name's John U. Upjohn, isn't it?"

"Yes, that's his name."

"Then he's the same man. He won't be here for an hour or two, I guess, 'cause he's stoppin' to have one of his teeth tightened that got knocked a little bit loose when he was jumpin' out o' danger, y' know."

"Little boy, tell me the whole story. I think I can bear it now."

"Well, ma'am, he's in the hospittle with four ribs broke an' one leg's in a sling an' his nose is knocked kind o' sideways, but he's getting along all right, an' he'll be out again in about a month, an' here's a letter f'm the doctor tellin' ye all about it, ma'am."

A school inspector, having a few minutes to spare after examining the school, put a few questions to the lower form boys on the common objects in the schoolroom.

"What is the use of that map?" he asked, pointing to one stretched across the corner of the room; and half a dozen shrill voices answered, in measured articulation:

"It's to hide the teacher's bicycle, sir!"—"Tit-Bits."

Luigi Sarreno, a journalist of Rome, in order to get up a story on the Pope's daily life, recently secured employment in the Vatican as a gardener.

A writer in "Blackwood's Magazine" mentions as an incident of life in Labrador the burial of a live pet in a barrel under the November snow. The owner of the animal (a black bear, by the way) dug up the barrel twice during the winter, but did not awaken the occupant, who was permitted to sleep on till May.

Edward Beaupre of the Territory of Assiniboia, Canada, claims to be the tallest man in the world. His exact height is seven feet, ten and three-fourths inches, and he is still growing, and expects to reach the eight-foot mark. He is twenty years old, wears a number twenty-one shoe and a number twenty-one collar.

A Chinese manuscript lately discovered in the Paris library proves the startling fact that anaesthetics were used in China seventeen hundred years ago. A certain concoction, it states, was given by the doctors before performing an operation, which rendered the patient unconscious. The anaesthetic was a simple preparation of hemp.

The translation of the Bible from ancient to modern Greek, against which students in the Grecian capital have been rioting, and coming into fatal conflicts with troops, was ordered by Queen Olga, because she found so many Greeks could not read the language of their classic ancestors. The students oppose the translation on the ground that it would be desecration to put the Bible into Greek as it is now spoken.

Four hundred and ten thousand immigrants landed on the shores of the United States last year. Many of them were Christians, many others were not. The majority even of those who were had no copy of the Bible. In the hands of each, as he set foot upon the soil of his new home, the New York Bible Society placed a copy of the Scriptures. Twenty-one different languages were represented, the largest number being in German, the next largest in Swedish.

Because a beautiful young white woman, the heroine in Sir Walter Besant's serial story, "No Other Way," is forced to marry a negro criminal, the "Sunny South," one of the leading literary weeklies of the South, has announced the discontinuance of the publication of the story. The "Sunny South" declares the story passes the dead-line of Southern sentiment. It appears that the novel was selected after a synopsis had been submitted, and not until the fourth instalment were the objectionable features discovered. The editors declare the plot of the story to be "an obsession, the result of mental indigestion, from which we shall endeavor to save our readers."

Hang Trouble on a Chair.

"LAUGH and grow fat" is a saying as old as the hills. It has long been an accepted fact that humor is a promoter of digestion and merry words the deadliest foes of disease. A doctor named Kennedy writes an interesting article on the value of laughter, in which he shows it is not only a remedial agent, but is also a valuable preventive against a host of diseases. The physical effects of laughter are thus put down by Dr. Kennedy: Laughter increases the blood circulation. It enlarges the heart. It expands the lungs. It jiggers the diaphragm. It promotes the circulation of the spleen. In other words, laughter stirs up the vital regions of the body, gives them healthful exercise, and produces a mental exhilaration which acts upon the system much as a brisk walk in a crisp atmosphere does upon the appetite. As strong allies to laughter, Dr. Kennedy gives the following directions for mental peace of mind: Beware of theologians who have no sense of mirth; they are not altogether human. Keep your chin up. Don't take your troubles to bed with you; hang them on a chair with your trousers or drop them in a glass of water with your teeth.

Society Slang.

IT is rather amusing to watch the changes in society slang; for the "best" society has its own special vulgarities, which change from decade to decade—even from year to year. Lady Blessington, if she were reincarnated and suddenly projected into a woman's afternoon chatter at a smart club, would think she had missed her country, observes an English exchange. A few years ago it was the mode to scatter Gallicisms freely into conversation. [illegible] the French craze has passed, [illegible] even such an old servant as "chic" [illegible] never heard, and rarely seen but [illegible] the fashion articles. Today's sla[ng] —in the "best" circles of England—[i]s probably reached the lowest depths of fatuous vulgarity. Its keynote is abbreviation. What are "undies?" Well, they are the things that a woman puts on first in the morning and takes off last at night, when she gets into her "nighties." "Tissy-wissy" is another favorite Masonic word among those in the social know. It corresponds to the 'bus conductor's "little bit of all-right." And if you want to go a step further in compliment, you may describe your new frock—if you are a woman in the "best" set—as "quite too deevie for words." We hope Dr. Murray has a contributor on the pounce for these words in Mayfair. He has missed "deevie" from the New English Dictionary, but he is in time for "tissy-wissy," to say nothing—as, of course, nothing should be said—of "undies."

Surgeon (after the operation)—I am glad to be able to assure you, Mrs. Tyte-Phist, that the danger is now over and your husband will recover. We have successfully removed the appendix vermiformis, and it is of such a unique formation that I shall preserve it for use in my medical lectures. Mr. Tyte-Phist (opening his eyes)—You'll allow me something for it, I suppose, doctor?—Ex.

"How did it happen?" "Oh, I got into a game where the limit was the ceiling—and somebody took off the ceiling."

Ever since the Forth bridge was opened—eleven years ago—painting has gone on continuously, according to the "Mechanical Engineer." "Beginning at the south end, the workmen take three years to cover the entire length of the bridge, and, as three years represents approximately the life of the paint, no sooner are they finished than the men have to begin again. In this way every square inch of steel comes under observation at least once in three years. The staff of men employed varies in number from the maximum of 35."

A Serious Man's Thoughts on Winter.

AT the moment of writing it is only fair to say that King Frost has not yet got us in his icy grip. But as it is not unusual to expect something of the sort at this season of the year, we may very well stand up and look at the prospect of sport which any seasonable weather of the kind may bring us. There is sliding for instance. If you don't happen to possess a pair of skates, or to own a friend who will lend you a pair, Nature is determined that you shall not lose all chance of risking your neck, just because you are lacking the usual outfit.

Of course for really superior slides you ought to put a little water down overnight; but as you have probably grown out of little frivolities of that sort, you can confidently rely on your next door neighbor's little boy doing what is necessary in the matter. Doubtless you will not leave your house in the morning with any idea of becoming actively engaged as a display slider. It is not until you find one of your feet slowly but surely creeping upwards to the sky, as the song says, that it will occur to you to throw up your hands and drop into the conventional attitude as a measure of self-protection. You will probably be encouraged in this course by noticing that a small but enthusiastic knot of bystanders is endeavoring to raise a cheer for your benefit. The next moment the programme comes off with a loud bang and you scramble to your feet, and address yourself loudly to nobody in particular in a way that makes the thoughtful observer trustfully hope that the recording angel wasn't looking your way at the moment.

It is commonly understood that the gentler sex are denied the relief that is afforded to mere man by the possession of an elastic vocabulary. But a casual slide that is spread out on the pavement is perfectly catholic in its tastes, and is open to receive all comers. The slide makes no invidious distinctions as to age or sex. Anybody with a limb to break is warmly welcome. It seems a little hard, however, that when an accident of this kind does take place by the unexpected co-operation of a member of the fair sex, the unhappy victim is almost invariably a lady who should be old enough to know better. The young and flighty damsels who could fall on an extemporaneous slide and make quite an elaborate and picturesque display of the business, are usually most successful in avoiding accidents of the kind; while, on the other hand, elderly ladies will practically make a bee-line for the trouble and then shower a liberal perspective of knitted wool and red flannel on the unsympathetic spectator.

The part that snow plays in our lives varies according to circumstances. As the poet said, distance lends enchantment to the view. And when you are looking at the snow-clad landscape over the top of something cheerful and hot in a large glass, there is doubtless a good deal to be said for the poetic side of beautiful snow. At the same time, I am not one who believes in coddling when the snow is on the ground. I am glad to say I can enjoy as well as anyone a brisk walk along the open country when the snow is lying thickly around; and I think there are few moments when one feels more keenly than at such times what a glorious lark it is to be alive. The tingling of the blood as it comes through the veins, imparting a healthy glow to the cheek, and all the rest of the details, as per patent medicine advertisement, are all benefits of the snow that I keenly recognize and cordially appreciate. But what does me all up, so to speak, is to have a small boy come up behind and sock me unawares in the neck with a half-melted snowball.

Of course, we are all young, and, after all, we can afford to laugh at trouble of that kind. Usually, if I am out in a fair-to-medium suit of clothes, and I find that snowballing is in the air, I endeavor to make for cover. But if the worst comes to the worst, and I find that my hat has been knocked off and my clothes are more or less blobbed with melting patches of snow, I consider I have lost all the dignity I set out with, and that I may as well start throwing back. I have a sort of feeling that, since I am no longer respectable, I may as well go the whole hog and have my fling with the crowd. I always look forward with some dread to the winter in the distant future when I may have become too old, or as the East End damsel said, "too much of a bloomin' lydy," to throw back. It seems to me that it is very cruel to snowball an old fellow who can only dance around and squirm and call on high Heaven for help; and I have no doubt that it is precisely this aspect of the case that makes it so deliriously enjoyable to the average boy on the snowballing lay. Indeed, to regard the matter from a sportive standpoint, the boy may consider that the old gentleman is in the same boat as the hunted fox, who is said to enjoy the hunt as much as anybody.

A Queer Lawsuit.

The other day Mrs. Norma Adams and Samuel Gardner, who live on adjoining farms, began suit to determine the ownership of a brood of fourteen turkeys, says the San Francisco "Argonaut." The brood, headed by two old hens, a white and a bronze, had been running the fields of both farms all summer. Mrs. Adams owned the bronze hen and Mr. Gardner the white. Each claimed that their respective hen was the mother of the brood. One of the witnesses before the justice testified that he had once turned a dog upon the straggling band of turkeys. At the approach of the dog the young birds flew into a tree, the bronze hen ran into the woods, while the white hen stood under the tree and gave battle to the dog, which she repulsed, then called the brood to her, and they marched off. After hearing this witness, the justice decided that the white hen was the mother of the brood, and gave the turkeys to Gardner.

Rebuttal Evidence.

"There, my dear," said the returned hunter, "there's one bird for you, anyway. Bagged him just as I was about to give up in disgust." "Oh, George!" she exclaimed, "it's a carrier-pigeon, isn't it?" "Not much! It's a quail." "But it has a card tied to its leg, with some message on it. Let's see. It says: 'John Jones, Poultry and Game, Central Market.'"—Philadelphia "Press."

A VERY SUDDEN DEATH.

MISS CELIA SANDERSON EXPIRED SUDDENLY

After Leaving Work—Had Proceeded Only a Short Distance When She Fell on the Sidewalk.

Miss Celia Sanderson, an employee of the Electric Works, and whose parents live in the country, met death in a very sudden and altogether unexpected manner last evening a few minutes after six o'clock. Miss Sanderson and a companion had proceeded but a short distance from the Electric Works, when without warning she fell to the sidewalk. Her companion called for help which soon arrived, and the girl was carefully lifted and carried to a store, which was only a short distance off. Medical help was immediately called and everything was done that could be thought of. In a few minutes Dr. Young arrived but life was extinct. After careful inquiry he pronounced heart failure as the cause of her death.

Miss Sanderson boarded with her sister, Mrs. J. Leiter, on Stewart street, and was well known among a very large circle of friends. Her bright and cheerful disposition made her a favorite with all who knew her. Some time ago she graduated from the Peterborough Business College, where she had taken a very successful course. The news of the terribly sudden and unexpected death will be a painful shock to her many friends. The arrangements for the funeral were not completed up to a late hour last night.

Hotel Changes Hands

Mr. Moon has not decided as yet, whether he will continue to reside in town or not.

COASTING ON SIDEWALKS

A Dangerous Practice Indulged in by Many of the Children in Town

Some years ago the council passed a by-law, forbidding children to coast down the sidewalks in town. Recently this forbidden custom has been revived by the children, and is indulged in every day in the week on the different hills in town. A few days ago the scholars were leaving the Collegiate Institute at noon, and a daring, reckless little fellow was coming down the Murray street sidewalk on a handsleigh, and, without any warning crashed into a young girl and knocked her down, severely bruising her limbs. This dangerous sport should be stopped. Nearly every day people are obliged to wade into the deep snow to avoid meeting a sleigh. What is pleasure for some, is often very dangerous for others, and the parents of the children or the authorities should put a stop to this.

Paine's Celery Compound Brings Gladness and Joy to Homes Where Sickness Prevails.

IT HAS A MARVELLOUS RECORD AS A LIFE SAVER

Paine's Celery Compound makes sick people well. It is the one true specific recognized and prescribed to-day by our best physicians for diseases arising from a debilitated nervous system. Professor Phelps, M.D., the discoverer of Paine's Celery Compound, gave his wonderful prescription to his profession as a positive cure for wasting strength, nervous debility, sleeplessness, liver complaint, kidney disease, rheumatism and neuralgia, and the marvellous medicine has saved tens of thousands from death.

Paine's Celery Compound is the only true nerve and tissue builder; it quickly fortifies the weak parts of the body and promotes the healthy activity of the organs that make the blood and keep it pure. Let us urge you to test the power and virtues of one bottle; it cannot disappoint you; it has cured others suffering as you now suffer, and will most assuredly do the same for you.

Mr. J. Ralston, Nixon, Ont., testifies as follows: "It gives me great pleasure to add my testimony to the ever-increasing popularity of your preparation known as Paine's Celery Compound. It is now a year past since I had a severe attack of nervous prostration caused by chronic dyspepsia, and for a year I could not sleep at night. This condition of sleeplessness brought on delirium. I was attended by four of the best doctors of the country, and took a great quantity of medicine, but all failed to do me any good. I then decided to try your Paine's Celery Compound. After I had used four bottles the nervousness and dyspepsia left me, and I have done more work since than for years past. I now enjoy excellent health and consider myself completely cured. I have highly recommended your Paine's Celery Compound to others.

What He Wants to Know

In reply to a request of a subscriber, the following information is given in regards to the Trent Valley Canal: This waterway of 200 miles in length can be completed for $3,500,000. When complete it will give continuous barge navigation of 800 tons burden—and of twice the capacity of the Erie Canal—from Montreal to Sault Ste. Marie. It will shorten the distance between all the great western lake ports and Liverpool by 727 miles. It is capable of being operated during a season of seven months in a year and of transporting two hundred million bushels of grain per annum. By means of the numerous lakes and rivers which it utilizes and intersects, it will give a shore line of 1000 miles and lay under tribute six million acres of agricultural forest and mineral lands capable of yielding from 60 to 100 tons of freight per acre. It will utilize the finest continual system of water powers on the globe. 140 miles of this waterway is now completed, but bottled up at both ends, yet it is giving employment for internal commerce and tourist travel to 50 steamboats, besides numerous smaller craft.

ST. LUKE'S ENTERTAINMENT

Last Night Proved to be a Most Enjoyable and Successful Affair

The entertainment at St. Luke's last night, under the auspices of the Girls' Guild was a most enjoyable and successful affair. In the absence of Rev. Mr. Langfeldt, the chair was taken by Mr. E. A. Peck, who performed the duties in a most pleasing manner. The different parts of the program were introduced in a few well chosen and appropriate words.

The first number on the program was a duet by Miss E. Burnham and Miss K. Calcutt, which was admirably rendered, and was heartily applauded. Miss Nellie Davies rendered a solo in a most pleasing voice, and received a very hearty applause.

A dialogue, entitled, "The Old Maids' Convention," was presented by twenty young ladies, attired in old maids' costumes of a very ancient style. The platform was specially arranged for the piece, and mottoes of a very appropriate nature were hung on the walls. The reading of the President's and Treasurer's address, threw the audience into fits of laughter. After these were concluded, the "Old Maids" held an open meeting, and discussed the question of matrimony. While some were in favor of it, others held up their hands in horror, and denounced such a proceeding. At this stage of the proceedings, Prof. Pinkerton appeared on the scene with an electrical apparatus he called a transformer, and told the old maids that he could transform them into anything they wished to be. Some wanted to be singers, and one old maid thought if she could be transformed into a man she would be all right. They were put through a process of transformation, and all apparently got their wishes except the one who wanted to be a man. During the dialogue the audience could hardly restrain themselves.

The last dialogue was "The Dairy Maids' Drill," by twelve girls, all attired as dairy maids. The acting was very prettily done, and they received very warm applause.

Before closing, Rev. Mr. Langfeldt addressed the audience, and thanked them for the splendid attendance, and hoped they had enjoyed the evening. The entertainment closed with singing "God Save the King."

The Sunday school room, in which the entertainment was held, was packed to the doors, and many who could not gain admittance were turned away.

Grant to Volunteers

Editor Morning Times.

Dear Sir, — Allow me to inquire, through the columns of your paper, if the Town Council propose to make any grant to the volunteers who left here with the second draft of men for the third Canadian contingent. It is now some time since the men left here and I have not heard of the Council giving them any grant. The men of the second contingent and the men of the first detachment of the third contingent received their grants and I think it is only right that the others receive a similar amount. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your space, I remain,

NORTH AMERICAN OIL & REFINING COMPANY'S

Stock and It Will Make You Rich

The company owns 2,080 acres of land located in the Newhall-Acton White Oil Fields of Los Angeles County, California. Our manager, Mr. J. H. Parker, writes us under date of Jan. 15th that they have opened up two oil wells near our property, one being a gusher of white oil just as clear as alcohol, and of 52 degrees gravity. This oil is worth and is selling at $4.00 per barrel at the well, and producing better than 50 barrels per day. Our derrick is up and the machinery purchased; we expect to be drilling in a very short time. We now offer to the public 100,000 shares of this meritorious company's stock at the low price of 10 cents per share, and it is worth a great deal more money at the present time with the showing we have in the property. The demand for this oil is far greater than the supply, which is not so of the black oils of Lower California and Beaumont, Texas, that are a drug upon the market.

Regarding the officers of the company, they are all men of honor and means. There are no salaries paid to any of the officers, not even our General Manager, until our company is put on a paying basis.

INCORPORATION.

The company is capitalized for 1,500,000 shares, the incorporation having been effected under the laws of Wyoming, stock being all common stock, issued absolutely fully paid and forever non-assessable. The incorporation laws of Wyoming are peculiarly favorable to oil enterprises, and the par value of the stock has been fixed at One Cent per share in order to avoid the excessive revenue tax paid on stocks of a high par value.

LIABILITIES.

The company has no debts; all stock is fully paid and non-assessable, there are no stockholders' liabilities, and we have no royalties to pay for any purpose.

OUR LANDS.

The company's lands have been carefully selected by their engineer, Mr J. H. Parker, who is also Vice President and General Manager, in conjunction with four of the best oil experts, who are well known throughout the state. These experts each unbeknown to the other went over our vast territory to locate a site to sink our first well; their reports are on file in the company's office, and we will be pleased to mail a copy of the same upon application, also maps of the oil fields with our property showing in the red. The directors call special attention to the maps, which have been drawn from actual surveys and personal inspection of the land and is accurate. The company's lands are distinctly shown as well as their relation to other oil lands and the location of oil wells, oil seepages and oil springs. A careful inspection of the map will aid prospective investors to judge of the oil under the company's lands.

The geological formation is perfect, the Anticlinal passing through the entire property, and being unbroken by granite formations.

GUARANTEE.

The officers and directors of the company have such great faith in the proposition that they will redeem all stock sold for cash, providing they do not strike oil as designated.

TREASURY STOCK.

The company holds in the treasury over 500,000 shares of treasury stock and some money. The proceeds of sale from the 100,000 shares now offered to the public will be used for the purpose of sinking wells.

REGISTRATION.

The stock is registered with the Colorado Title & Trust Company of Colorado Springs, Colorado, which guarantees any over-issue of stock.

The company would like to employ a few good Fiscal Agents to handle any part of this 100,000 shares of stock, giving them a very liberal commission. We take pleasure in recommending this stock to the good people of Peterborough and vicinity at the very low price of 10 cents per share; considering the condition of the property the stock is worth more money than what we are asking for it.

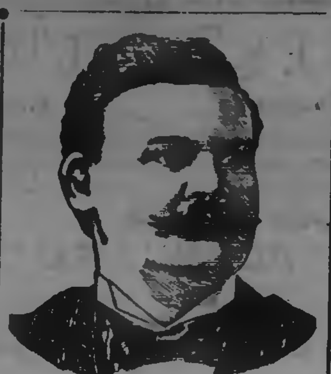
COL BOURKE AFFIRMS IT MEANS REVOLUTION

The United Irish League Propose to Inaugurate War on Britain

Ireland May be on the Brink of a Bloody Period

A Reign of Terror Exists from one End of the Island to the Other



Dublin, Feb.12—That affairs have reached a serious crisis, few who know the situation in Ireland will deny. In many places a reign of terror exists, and hundreds of tenants, who are willing and able to pay their rent, are afraid to do so. The Freeman's Gazette boasts that England is rapidly becoming a second rate power, and will soon go to pieces.

Lord Salisbury has been often criticised for his pessimism in regard to Irish affairs. He has been charged with over-rating the forces which make for disturbance, yet coincidently with his notable speech at the Junior Constitutional Club on Wednesday last came news of a political victory in the county Down which is regarded as highly significant of trouble ahead in Ireland which will try the best statesmanship. The Premier, after expressing the confidence which is felt in the future of the Empire, and the efforts for its security, referred to "the existence of a hostile feeling in Ireland," as a signal that these efforts must not be relaxed. "The maintainence of our position in Ireland" Lord Salisbury said, "is the most vital object, the Empire has." Again, he said, "The feelings of hostility which had been expressed were more uncompromising than any expressions which had ever issued from the lips of Parnell or O'Connell."

Lord Salisbury had in mind the violent aspiration for a separate form of Government for Ireland when he spoke of the power to accumulate arms and ammunition as constituting a menace as serious as that of the Boers. But the result of the election in Down on the same day is held as giving an impetus to the agitation for land reform which means an immeasurable increase of present difficulty. In place of Dr. Rentoul, a Conservative, recently appointed to the Bench, Jas. Wood, land purchase candidate, was elected over the Unionist by 147 majority. The despatch says this is the first fruits of T. W. Russell's compulsory land purchase campaign against the Government, and that a great demonstration in Dublin followed the announcement. It is certainly a striking example of the headway which Mr. Russell, himself a Unionist, has made in expressing this scheme upon his fellow-countrymen.

His position is that the Land Commission appointed under former acts does not possess public confidence. It is denounced by the landlords, who declare they are being robbed by unwarrantable reduction in rents, and that the men employed in fixing rents are incompetent. On the other hand, Mr. Russell declares that such is the disregard of the "custom of Ulster," that "no tenant in Ulster crosses the portals of the Chief Commission Court without feeling that he is going before a hostile tribunal." The main fault is in the administration of the laws rather than in the laws, yet the same radical difference between the land laws of England and Scotland and those of Ireland remains, namely, that while in those countries a landlord lets a farm as a growing concern, as the owner of the land and everything under and upon it, receiving a certain rental for an out and out full farm equipment, which he is bound to keep in repair, the Irish landlord does nothing for the land. The house, offices, drainage, fences, roads, etc., are all the legal property of the tenant, yet rent is levied upon these for the benefit of the landlord, who gives nothing back.

The Land Purchase Acts, however, have done much to alleviate the situation. Since the year 1885 the Land Commission has sanctioned an advance of £17,000,000 and created some 30,000 occupying owners. These Acts, Mr. T. W. Russell is ready to admit, have been the real success of English legislation in Ireland. Other measures have had drawbacks. Mr. Russell charges none in regard to Land purchase, save the slow rate of progress and the bad administration of the Acts by the Purchase Department. The State has lost nothing. So far, the instalments have been regularly paid. The landlords have been satisfied with the price received for their interest in the land, averaging 17 years' purchase of the rent. In the next place, Mr. Russell concedes that the Acts have been an enormous benefit to the tenant purchaser. Usually the instalment of his terminable annuity has been less by 25 or even 33 per cent. of his judicial rent, and where under the Act of 1896, the term of repayment has been extended over a longer period than 49 years the result in the way of counting amongst farmers is that 15s. go as far as £1 went before. Again the State has benefited enormously where these reforms have gone into effect, in the substitution of good order for rampant violence.

And this is the basis of Mr. Russell's agitation for extending the benefit of land purchase by making it compulsory. If asked, as to the principle of the thing his reply is, he thinks, clear. He says:—"The Parliament which in 1881 compulsorily fixed the income an Irish landlord was to receive from his estate need not scruple about deciding the form in which this income is to be paid. To say to an Irish landlord, 'You shall receive this income in the shape of certain and sure dividend warrants in place of uncertain and precarious rents,' is no departure in principle. There is in my opinion much more of reason and fair play in the one course than in the other. Parliament has taken the first step. It will require to take the second and, taking it fairly and generously, will be abundantly rewarded in the peace and contentment which such action will produce from one end of Ireland to the other. It is simply intolerable that this Irish land system should mar the peace of a whole country and prevent its settling down to the paths of industry and progress. I have been asked whether the idea of Universal Purchase, which has seized everybody in Ireland, and carried public opinion as it never was carried before, does not simply mean the final creation of a new set of Irish landlords. Certainly it is not my solution of the problem. If I thought the present race of landlords was to be got rid of only to be succeeded by another and a worse class, I should not be found in the ranks of those engaged in this great fight. What the new movement means is not a mere peasant proprietary. It means 'occupying ownership.' The thrifty and the sober will, of course, dominate the situation. The laws of Nature cannot by changed by politicians or by Parliament. The drunken and the thriftless will go under in Ireland as elsewhere. But in future transfers of property can be taken that the relation of landlord and tenant shall not be set up afresh."

GENERAL VILJOEN RODE INTO AN AMBUSH

Trap was Laid Cleverly—Royal Irish Detachment Intercepted Him on Way Back from Visit to Other Commandants

London, Feb. 11.—The capture of General Ben Viljoen and Adjutant Baster, says the Standard's correspondent, was an exceptionally clever piece of work, the credit for the conception and execution of which belongs to Captain Russell, the chief intelligence officer at Lydenburg. General Viljoen had gone from Pilgrim's Rest to Steenkampsberg to meet Mr. Schalkburger and Commandant Muller. He was accompanied by Adjutant Baster and two despatch riders named Nel and Jordan. His route lay past Krugerspost, which was held by the Boers. To the east of Roos Senekal, which lies well on the road to Steenkampsberg, Commandant Muller had stationed several hundred of his men. Mr. Schalkburger, under Muller's protection, was camped in the vicinity.

After paying a visit to Muller, Gen. Viljoen went on to see Mr. Schalkburger. On Saturday evening he started back to Krugerspost, en route to Pilgrim's Rest. That same night Major Orr, with a party of the Royal Irish regiment, accompanied by captain Russell and the intelligence staff, left Lydenburg for Steenkampsberg. A march of nine miles brought them to the bridlepath at the end of the range, along with General Viljoen was bound to make his way before descending to Krugerspost. The Royal Irish disposed themselves under the shelter of a ridge covering both sides of the track. There they awaited, in strict silence, the general's approach. The moon was shining brightly enough for them to discern any movement. Late at night the party of Boers rode into view. As they came close up they were called upon to surrender, and almost simultaneously some of our men fired, killing Nel and Jordan. The general's horse fell, shot in two places, and another bullet passed through Viljoen's coat. Adjutant Baster was unhurt. Both of them at once surrendered.

As the party were actually within the Boer lines, they made all haste back to Lydenburg, which was reached in safety on Sunday morning. Despite his somewhat dilapidated attire, General Viljoen looked well and healthy. Two days before his capture he had reconnoitred Lydenburg, with a view, it is believed, to delivering an attack, for which purpose he had some 300 men available.

UNSATISFACTORY STATE OF AFFAIRS IN THE PROVINCE OF QUEBEC

Protestants are Beginning to Resent the Action of the Heirarchy of the Church---Many Facts Brought to Light

Quebec, Feb. 12.—There is an outcry among the Episcopalians of the province of Quebec against the alleged inequality in the marriage laws affecting Roman Catholics and Protestants respectively. The matter was discussed at the recent session of the synod of the Church of England in Montreal and a committee appointed to agitate far more equitable legislation on the matter of marriage licenses. In the course of this discussion some very remarkable facts were brought to light.

In the case of the Roman Catholic community the marriage license fees are left to the jurisdiction of the Bishops. The civil power is not recognised at all, and the fees go into the church funds. The Bishops and other heads of the Protestant denominations, on the other hand, have nothing to do with the issue of marriage licenses to their people, and no control over the funds obtained by them.

This strange condition of affairs is one of the fruits of the extraordinary privileges accorded by England to her French-Canadian subjects, in order to purchase their loyalty at a time when there was every indication that they would otherwise throw in their lot with the United States. Instead of the marriage license fees paid by Protestants to this province finding their way to their several churches, as in the case of those paid by Roman Catholics, they go to the Protestant Council of Public Instruction, to be applied for purposes of education, and thus to take the place of funds which, in the case of Roman Catholic education, are furnished from the treasury of the Province. The demand of Protestant education upon the funds in the hands of the council is so great that the cost of Protestant marriage licenses is maintained at $8 in this province, while in the neighboring province of Ontario the cost is only $2.

This expose of the commerce in dispensations was read in the synod during the recent debate:

The following has been given as a summary of the traffic in the sphere of marriage among our Roman Catholic fellow citizens: The law of publication is overridden by a dispensation of one publication for $2, the dispensation of two publications for $4, the ignoring of publication in any degree, at the will of the priest, $16. But the exhaustive and arrogant system is further disclosed by the following table of charges either restrictive of indefeasible rights of man or trading upon the transgressions of divine law and subjecting the latter to the exactions of cupidity. Unions of assured unlawful degrees are effected on payment of the following fines: First and second degree of consanguinity or affinity, $100; second to third, $25, third to third, $8; fourth to fourth, $6; public honesty, $4; spiritualaffinity, $4; mixed marriage, $5; prohibited time, $4.00.

The report despondently concludes: "We can have no common country with a heirarchical wall of separations, restrictive of civil liberty, social conditions and domestic integrity."

THE SCATTERING OF BOER COMMANDOS

Christian De Wet's Brother, Piet, Fighting for the British

A LETTER FROM A QUEBEC BOY

De Wet Thought to be in Kitchener's Grasp—How the War is Progressing

Quebec, Feb. 12.—Pierre Lepine, of the South African Light Horse, sends a very interesting letter from the seat of war in South Africa. The letter is dated at Klipfontein on Christmas day, when the thermometer registered 104 in the shade. Lepine reports that his column had just had a narrow escape from annihilation, before it was discovered that they were being fired upon by their own men. This was due to the tactics of the Boers, who are constantly wearing khaki uniforms and adopting the British style of march in order to deceive their adversaries. He says that Christian De Wet's forces are being slowly but surely reduced, and that the useless disasters which the obstinate leader continues to bring upon his people are simply incomprehensible. Piet De Wet, brother of the famous leader, who was induced by the pleadings of his sister to give up the struggle, and who later joined the British forces, is now with the same column as Lepine. The latter tells that when Piet visited his brother Christian to endeavor to convince him of the uselessness and the sin of persisting in his campaign, the latter calmly listened to all he had to say and then gave him three hours to get out of his reach or to be shot as a traitor. Desertions from the Boer forces are now numerous, according to Lepine, but he admits that the policy of reducing the foe by famine seems to succeed better than that of fighting them. They are getting short of horses as well as of provisions, they find it difficult to secure remounts and the horses they have are mostly in very poor condition. The British soldiers appreciated much, he says, their Christmas gifts of plum pudding, tobacco, cigarettes, matches, handkerchiefs and other trifles from kind friends at home and in Canada.

DE WET'S ESCAPE.

London, Feb. 12.—The escape of De Wet has been the theme of many newspaper articles, both in England and in the continent. It is thought, however, that his capture is near at hand, and that he may now be in Kitchener's grasp.

COFFEE EYES.

It Attacks Many Persons There

To illustrate how coffee can affect the eyes the words of a lady in Woodland, Ia., are quoted.

"I was brought up to believe that tea was injurious but was allowed to drink coffee from childhood. Ever since I can remember I have been subject to severe attacks of headache, otherwise my health was pretty good until a short time ago my eyes became affected; they ached and pained me continually and were often badly inflamed. I also had queer, dizzy feelings in my head almost continually.

One time we were obliged to do without milk or cream for a few weeks, and not relishing my coffee clear I left off its use. In a short time I was surprised to find my eyes greatly improved, and I felt better in every way, still I did not mistrust the coffee and began its use as soon as we got cream again. (Within a few days my eyes were worse than ever. Then I resolved to quit coffee absolutely and take up Postum. This I did and my eyes quickly recovered.

My experience shows that while coffee caused headache and eye trouble Postum Food Coffee does not produce any bad effects whatever and is greatly strengthening and nourishing." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

QUEEN MARGHERITA TO VISIT UNCLE SAM

Dowager Queen of Italy Preparing to Make an American Trip

MAY ALSO VISIT THE DOMINION

The Royal Lady May Also Visit the Dominion—The Queen Will Travel Quietly

London, Feb. 12—A despatch from Rome to the Pall Mall Gazette says the Dowager Queen Margherita, widow of King Humbert, will make a visit to the United States, travelling incognito under the name of Countess Stupinigi. The Queen, it is said, always had a liking for American women, whose type of beauty, as well as frankness and self-possession, appealed to her. Mrs. Marsh, an American, exercised a considerable influence on The Queen's education through her German governess, who was frequently in consultation with Mrs. Marsh.

The Dowager Queen's desire to visit the United States was revived recently through a conversation with Mme. Ristori, the tragedienne, whose eightieth birthday was celebrated a few days ago. The actress described the wonders of the New World to the Queen in glowing terms.

Naval officers are striving for the honor of conveying the Queen to America, but she has decided to take an Atlantic liner from England to New York.

OMEMEE

The snow blockade causes our village to assume a quiet appearance, there being little or no traffic. Should the roads be passable to Peterboro on Saturday a large number of marketers will go down.

Many travellers have been compelled to remain at the Commercial house owing to the blockade.

Great sorrow, regret and anxiety was felt here over Mr. Isaac Richardson being lost in the snow in Peterborough county.

Many of our young people are anxious to seek employment in some of the Peterborough industries when opened up in spring.

Mr. James Graham, proprietor of the Commercial House sports a beautiful black driving horse.

Our junior hockey team are quite disappointed at not getting an answer from the Peterborough juniors about the proposed match.

Firemen Banqueted

Last night the members of the Fire Brigade were tendered a banquet by Mr. Harry Long, in recognition of their splendid service at the Crystal block fire A very sumptuous repast was served and a thoroughly enjoyable evening was spent. The supper was laid in the usual excellent style which is characteristic of everything Mr. Long undertakes. The party broke up at a late hour after tendering a hearty vote of thanks to their host.

ST. JOHN'S GIRLS' GUILD

Successful Entertainment Given by the Society Last Night

That the young ladies composing the Girls' Guild of St. John's church, have a pleasing and attractive way of conducting their entertainments, has long since been demonstrated. That they have lost none of their powers in this line was shown last night, when they gave an entertainment and oyster supper in the school room.

The chair was taken by Rev. Mr. Davidson at 8 o'clock, and for nearly two hours the audience listened to a bright and original program of songs, instrumental music, etc.

Then the chairman announced another feature of the evening, and proceeding to the basement, the assemblage found awaiting them a tempting and carefully, prepared repast. There were oysters a-la-mode, oysters stewed, oysters raw, oysters on the shell, and oysters on the walk. There was also a small army of dainty matrons ready to serve in any way possible. The keen appreciation of this part of the evening's enjoyment was very evident from the speed with which the oysters did the slide act.

Supper over, the second part of the literary programme was presented, closing with a patriotic tableaux "Crowning the King." Two young ladies dressed in pure white, supported a large portrait of His Majesty in the centre of the platform; on either side, in full regimentals and with arms at the present, stood one of the nation's defenders. The audience rose and sang the National Anthem. The young ladies are to be commended on the success of their effort. The proceeds, amounting to $25 or $30, go toward the purchase of a new piano for the school room.

The thanks of the ladies are tendered to the following, who kindly contributed to the literary program, and to others who helped in various ways: The Misses English, Mr. Scott, Miss Primeau, Mr. Stermer, Masters Arthur and Edward Wood, Miss White, Miss King, Mrs. Seward, Miss Browne, Miss McCalluum, Miss M. Storie, Arthur Seward.

THE MANUFACTURER'S LIFE

Fifteenth Annual Meeting He'd at Toronto on 6th Instant

We heartily congratulate the directors of the Manufacturers Life Association over the report presented at the fifteenth annual meeting, held at the head office, Toronto, on the 6th inst. It being the first annual meeting since the amalgamation of the Temperance and General Life Assurance Company and the Manufacturers Life, a great deal of interest was taken in the proceedings. The report presented is a most gratifying one, and shows that the blending of the two great companies into one was accomplished without any hitch whatever.

The increased volume of business during the year was one of the features of the report. It indicates careful management and wise governorship.

We recommend the report to the attention of our readers.

WHERE JANE WORE THE BEADS

(By our Junior Reporter)

A Port Hope maid sat alone in her room in the shades of a cold winter's night,
And bellowed and sobbed in her anguish of soul till her face was a pitiful sight;
The flowers of pleasure which [illegible] while entwined her were choked [illegible] despondency's weeds—
The hockey team which her fellow belonged to had got it where [illegible] wore the beads!

AUSTRALIANS PROTEST AGAINST SLANDERS

Pass a Resolution Expressing Annoyance at Continental Attacks on British Troops

AND CONFIDENCE IN THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT

Colonies Should Stand Shoulder to Shoulder to Prevent Such Slander—Everything Depends on Britain

London, Feb. 12.—A special despatch to The Times from Sydney, N.S.W., says that six thousand Australians attended a meeting for the purpose of expressing annoyance at continued continental slanders of British troops. Resolutions were enthusiastically adopted, declaring the confidence of the people of Australia in the British Government, and voicing the sentiment that the colonies should stand shoulder to shoulder on such occasions.

EVERYTHING DEPENDS ON BRITAIN.

London, Feb. 12.—A despatch to The Times from Vienna, says the future of the beet sugar industry in Austria depends on the attitude of Britain and her colonies. The fact caused particular anxiety to the delegates to the recent conference on the sugar question. The German growers have sent a deputation to Berlin.

London, Feb. 12.—The total number of Boers captured and surrendered during the past week aggregate 717. This is the highest number reported for any one week for some time. The fact that minor engagements have taken place in Cape Colony is not looked upon as seriously adverse to the British.

MINOR ACTIONS.

London, Feb. 12.—During the attack by a force of Boers on a British convoy near Fraserburg the other day, Colonel Crabbe arrived and drove the enemy northward after a very sharp fight, during which the British lost thirteen killed and fortyeight wounded. The Boers lost 24 killed and 47 wounded.

An outpost of one hundred men under Doran was rushed near Calvinia. The casualties during the retirement on the main body consisted of ten killed and seventeen wounded. Thirty-six Boers were captured by Major von Donop in a night rush.

BANKS DEPLETED.

Durban, Natal, Feb. 12.—At the embarkation of the 2nd Batt. Dublin Fusiliers for Aden yesterday, the officer commanding was presented with an address, in recognition of the services the regiment has performed for the colony. It is stated that less than two hundred of the men who originally landed are now in the ranks; the remainder have been either killed, wounded or invalided.

CANADIANS DEAD.

Ottawa, Feb. 11.—Cablegrams from Cape Town to Lord Minto record the death of the following Canadians from enteric fever:—Bloemfontein, 3rd February; Thomas Trickey, brother Hewson Trickey, Druish P.O., Manitoba; Heidelburg, Wilbert Egan Hodkinson, brother J. B. Hodkinson, Kincardine; Heidelburg, 3rd February, Robert James Stobo, mother Mrs. Stobo, Scarboro.

ASHBURNHAM CIVIC ASS'N.

Met in Regular Session Last Night—Officers for the Year Elected

The regular monthly meeting of the Ashburnham Civic Association was held in the Town Hall last night. The attendance was very good.

The paper read by R. B. Rogers on "Sewers and Sewerage" at the previous meeting was further discussed. The matter of beautifying the village came up before the meeting and after considerable discussion the matter was left over to the next meeting.

The question of numbering the houses in the village was discussed at some length and was finally left over.

SERVICE AT KEENE CHURCH

Conducted by Rev. D. A. Thompson of Hastings on Sunday Last

The services in the Keene Presbyterian church were conducted on Sunday by Rev. D. A. Thompson, of Hastings. The music by the choir was most appropriate for the occasion. After the sermon, Rev. Thompson read the declaration of the Presbytery announcing the pulpit to be vacant. A resolution of regret and sympathy was read from the Hiawatha Indians signed by Chief Paudash and Johnson Paudash, secretary.

Reference was made to the great kindness shown by the late Rev. Dr. Andrews, to the Indians.

The services was brought to a close by singing hymn 334, "Forever with the Lord."

INJURED BY FALLING TREE

Mr. Hamilton Who Lives Near Kinmount Seriously Injured

A man named Hamilton, who lives near Kinmount was working in the woods on Monday, when he had the misfortune to be seriously crushed across the breast by a falling tree. The particulars as to how the accident occurred are not as yet to hand.

Dr. Prust of Kinmount, was called to attend the injured man and had him at once removed by train to the Nicholls Hospital, where he arrived on Monday night. A further examination of his injures was made and it was found that he was so badly crushed that his recovery is very doubtful. At a late hour last night his condition had not improved any, and his case is growing more serious.

THE SUPREME COURT

It is pretty generally acknowledged that there is a tendency to appoint men to the Supreme Court who have passed the best period of their lives and fitness elsewhere. In our opinion no man over fifty should receive a judicial appointment of High or Supreme Court importance. At the same time care should be taken that men who have shown marked ability, and those only, shall receive these appointments. Rumor has more than once associated the name of Mr. J. M. Clark, K.C., of Toronto, with a judicial appointment. This gentleman's course at the University and at Osgoode Hall was brilliant in the extreme, and he has followed it up with the composition of a work on the Law of Mines, that has been called by competent authorities, a monument of learning and research. Canada at present is on the eve of immense mineral developments, and in a few years our courts will be the scene of much mining litigation. It is important, therefore, that such a man as Mr. Clark should receive a bench appointment, and it is a pity, since his fitness is so apparent, that the Government should wait till age has diminished his mental and physical energy before elevating him to the bench.

THAT CASE IN REGARD TO MUNICIPAL VOTING

The High Court has been called upon to decide what jurisdiction a police magistrate has in a proceeding against a voter who votes more than once unlawfully in a municipal contest. A case similar to that which was recently before Police Magistrate Denison, of Toronto, came before Justices Ferguson and Meredith in the Divisional Court the other day, the case being that of Alfred T. Turner, of St. Thomas, against Patrick Meehan, It was alleged that Meehan at the recent municipal election in St. Thomas on January 6th voted unlawfully three times and efforts were made to lay an information before Police Magistrate Glenn, of St. Thomas, in order that a summons might be issued. The latter, however, refused either to receive the information or issue the summons, holding that he had no jurisdiction.

In the Divisional Court above referred to Mr. I. F. Hellmuth made application to compel the police magistrate to receive the information and hear the complaint. The court granted a rule nisi, ordering the police magistrate to appear and show cause why he should not entertain the complaint.

The magistrate gave as the reasons for refusing to receive the information that he had granted a summons a few days previously in a like case against His Honor Judge Hughes, and that upon the hearing of that summons he held he had no jurisdiction either to hear the case and dispose of it summarily or to hold a preliminary investigation and determine whether the accused should be committed to trial if the evidence warranted him in so doing.

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND

This medicine is giving marvellous results to sick people all over Canada. The wonderful cures effected by Paine's Celery Compound during the past year speaks volumes in favor of the popular medicine. Thousands who have suffered from rheumatism, neuralgia, nervous troubles and dyspepsia now sing the praises of the medicine that has given them such happy results. EDWIN NUGENT, Druggist, Peterborough, Ont.

MUNICIPAL CARELESSNESS

The Montreal Star, in a recent issue, editorially remarks: "It is a singular fact that it is more difficult to induce citizens to perform their duty at the polls in a municipal election than in any other appeal to an electorate. It is this fact which above everything else, is the cause of careless or corrupt city government."

This remark is quite true. The ratepayers in towns and cities in Ontario take little interest in their municipal affairs and meetings of the council commonly take place without any of the ratepayers being present. If the rate-payers take no interest in municipal affairs, it can hardly be expected that the members of the Council should devote themselves very ardently or deeply to the transaction of business for other people when those people themselves take no interest in the proceedings. The Mayor of Midland, in his inaugural address, touched upon this subject and suggested that public notice should be given of the nature of the business to be transacted at the next meeting of the Council. He made the following remark:

"I would recommend that the Council adopt some rules of procedure whereby important measures will come up only upon motion given at a previous meeting, so that more mature consideration may be given, and the ratepayers have knowledge of impending matters."

In the numerous rural municipalities north of this place the population is either stationary or is actually diminishing. Such would not be the case if the inhabitants took an active, intelligent and vigorous interest in their municipal affairs and the Mayor of Midland has, by his suggestion of Councils giving public notice of the business to be transacted at their next meetings, led the way towards inducing the people to take an interest in their own business.

OUR WORK GUARANTEES SAFETY AND SATISFACTION

A MARVELLOUS MEDICINE

Paine's Celery Compound gives marvellous results in rheumatism, neuralgia and all troubles arising from impure blood and nervous affections. Paine's Celery Compound has affected more solid and permanent cures than all other combined medicines. One bottle will convince you of its extraordinary virtues. Our stock is always fresh and pure. ORMOND & WALSH, Druggists, Peterboro, Ont.

The proposal of Mr. Macdiarmid, in Legislature, to abolish the poll tax, is not likely to meet with approval. The poll tax is $1 upon every man over 21 years of age, who is not otherwise taxed. The poll tax man enjoys all the municipal advantages, and personal protection, equally with the man who is assessed for $10,000. If any change is made it should be to double the present tax. Two dollars is a small enough tax to pay for the privileges of citizenship in any community.

A COABINATON THAT DRAWS

Courteous treatment of customers, pure drugs of full strength, and low prices are all-powerful for the drawing and securing of trade. Our closest attention and best care is at all times devoted to the filling of your physician's prescriptions. Our stock of Perfumes, Toilet preparations, Atomizers, Brushes, Combs and Sponges is unsurpassed in variety and quality. One call will convince you that we are leaders in the drug trade.

A LIFE-GIVING MEDICINE

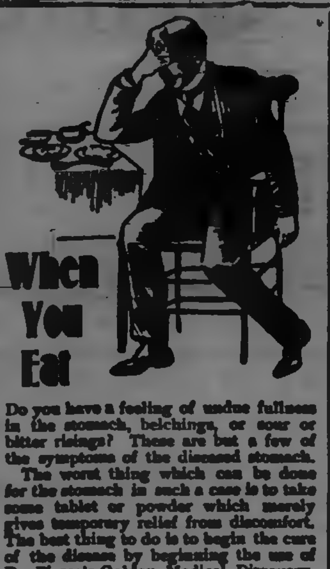
At this time when thousands are suffering from the common ills of life, we can honestly recommend the use of Paine's Celery Compound. This wonderful medicine is the prescription of one of the most eminent physicians that ever lived. It never fails to restore the sick to health. Thousands of testimonials prove that Paine's Celery Compound permanently cures rheumatism and neuralgia. WM. MADILL, Druggist, Peterborough, Ont.

A Fox's Revenge.

A gentleman out shooting one day came to a river, where he saw six geese beyond shot. He determined to wait for them to approach the shore. While sitting there he saw a fox come down to the shore and stand some time and observe the geese. At length he turned and went into the woods and came out with a very large bunch of moss in his mouth. He then entered the water very silently, sank himself, and then, keeping the moss above the water, himself concealed, he floated among the geese. Suddenly one of them was drawn under the water, and the fox soon appeared on the shore with the goose on his back. He ascended the bank, and found a hole made by the tearing up of a tree. This hole he cleared, placed in it the goose, and covered it with great care, strewing leaves over it. The fox then left; and while he was away the hunter unburied the goose, closed the hole and resolved to wait the issue. In about an hour the fox returned with another fox in company. They went directly to the place where the goose had been buried, and threw out the earth. The goose could not be found. They stood regarding each other for some time, when suddenly the second fox attacked the other most furiously, as if offended by the trick of his friend. During the battle the hunter shot them both.

To Starve is a Fallacy.—The dictum to stop eating because you have indigestion has long since been exploded. Dr. Von Stan's Pineapple Tablets introduced a new era in the treatment of stomach troubles. It has proved that one may eat his fill of anything and everything he relishes, and one tablet taken after the meal will aid the stomach in doing its work. 60 in a box, 35 cents.—64

Sold by H. H. Stinson.



When You Eat

Do you have a feeling of undue fullness in the stomach, belchings, or sour or bitter risings? These are but a few of the symptoms of the diseased stomach.

The worst thing which can be done for the stomach in such a case is to take some tablet or powder which merely gives temporary relief from discomfort. The best thing to do is to begin the cure of the disease by beginning the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It makes the "weak" stomach strong, and puts the body in a condition of vigorous health.

"I was troubled a long time with dyspepsia, torpid liver, and constipation," writes Mrs. Julia E. Beal, of [illegible], Iredell Co., N. C. "Could scarcely eat anything at all; would have attacks of pain something like colic, and sometimes it seemed as though I could not live. I wrote to Dr. R. V. Pierce, stating my condition, and in a few days received a kind letter of advice, telling me to use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I took four bottles, and one vial of Dr. Pierce's Pellets, and now I can eat anything I want and it don't hurt me. I have not been in bed a day since I took your 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and I have not since felt any symptoms of disease. I have not taken any medicine in twelve months."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation.

TOBACCO, LIQUOR AND DRUGS

Dr. McTaggart's tobacco remedy removes all desire for the weed in a few weeks. A vegetable medicine, and only requires touching the tongue with it occasionally. Price $2.

Simply marvellous are the results from taking his remedy for the liquor, morphine and other drug habits. Is a safe and inexpensive home treatment; no hypodermic injections; no publicity; no loss of time from business, and a certainty of cure.

A Comic Opera Strike.

THERE is, as a rule, little that is humorous in a strike. But a recent strike in Columbus, O., is so humorous and at the same time so extraordinary that it seems almost incredible. It sounds as if it took place in Topsy-turvydom instead of in the United States of America. It would make a good libretto for one of Gilbert and Sullivan's crazy operettas.

This is the story of the Columbus strike: C. M. Jones is editor and proprietor of the Columbus "Press-Post"—that is, he was. The paper is now apparently being edited by almost everybody but the editor. It seems that Editor Jones got into trouble with his city editor. The city editor is a member of the Newspaper Writers' Union. Now it has long been a grievance among newspaper reporters that they are not so well treated as the printers, because they have no union. On the other hand, the printers have a union which is the most powerful and prosperous trade union in the country, with the possible exception of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. The reporters have attempted to form unions. But they are like ropes of sand. So they finally decided to organize under the wing of the printers.

In every union printing-office there is a body called "the chapel," presided over by a "father." The foreman represents the employer, the father of the chapel represents the printers. Whenever there is a question at issue, the printers invariably take their orders from the father of the chapel instead of the foreman. So in the office of the "Press-Post," the reporters organized as a newspaper writers' union under the protection of the printers' chapel.

Editor Jones found City Editor Marshall unsatisfactory for various reasons. First, he had criticised some court house officials who were friends of Editor Jones; and, second, he had been "scooped" by the other Columbus papers on a railroad wreck; they had run the wreck with "scare-heads," and City Editor Marshall had not run it at all. Therefore Editor Jones requested Marshall to resign. Marshall refused. Editor Jones then informed him that he was discharged. Marshall at once ordered a strike, and Newspaper Writers' Union No. 2 walked out. Editor Jones attempted to parley with them, and offered to secure another editor. They refused to return unless Marshall was replaced. Thereupon Editor Jones broke off negotiations, got ten young men from the State University as reporters, edited their copy himself, and it was sent to the composing-room. The father of the chapel walked to the imposing-stone, rapped thereon with a mallet, a chapel meeting was held, and the printers stopped their work. The father of the chapel informed Editor Jones that if the non-union copy was not removed from the hook the printers would strike. Editor Jones took back his non-union copy. That day the "Press-Post" did not come out. The next day Editor Jones sent the paper to press without any local news, filling it up with narratives of the low-necked gowns at Newport, snake stories, accounts of the shocking attire worn by the young women at Long Branch, and other refined and pleasing miscellany of the kind usually found in the Sunday supplements of great daily newspapers. Unfortunately, Editor Jones, feeling somewhat embittered over the situation, wrote with his red right hand a savage editorial on the labor question and sent it in to the printers. Not being local news, and being written by the editor and proprietor, it might be supposed that they would print it. Not so. Again the unfortunate editor was informed that he must withdraw his non-union copy, or the printers would strike. Editor Jones withdrew his editorial.

At last accounts the "Press-Post" is still running without the local news, and Editor Jones is beseeching President Lynch of the International Typographical Union to devise some means by which he may be allowed to get his paper out.

So the question may be asked, Who is editing the Columbus "Press-Post?" Is it the proprietor, Editor Jones? or is it the discharged employee, City Editor Marshall? or is it the Newspaper Writers' Union No. 2? or is it the father of the Columbus printers' chapel? or is it the president of the International Typographical Union of North America?

When You Know How.

"I WILL be beautiful," she said, as she turned away from the mirror. "Surely in this modern, progressive age it is possible for any girl to acquire beauty."

So she invested in all kinds of cosmetics, had them applied by an artist, and went to a big ball. The next morning she scanned the society columns of the papers eagerly, but there was not a word about "the beautiful Miss Brown." She merely figured among those who were "also present."

"Still," she added, "it is possible to be beautiful when you know how, and I will experiment until I discover the secret."

Thereupon she employed a beauty doctor, and was rubbed and massaged every day for a month or more, but it was no use. The gossip departments of the papers spoke of this girl and that girl as "beautiful," but never of "the beautiful Miss Brown."

"Possibly," she thought, "something is the matter with my gowns. Much depends upon proper harmony or contrast, which often makes the beauty. I will have one designed especially for me by the most gifted of costumers."

The papers said she was "beautifully gowned," but that was all.

"I will become engaged," she cried, in despair. "If necessary, I will marry. Brides are almost invariably beautiful."

But when her engagement was announced the papers merely referred to her as "the charming and gifted Miss Brown."

"Alas!" she exclaimed, "can I not be beautiful? Is that great boon possessed by so many girls, no more favored by nature than I am, to be always denied to me? What is life to me, if I am thus handicapped? A mockery, truly! I will have none of it."

In this humor she went boating, and, giving it the appearance of an accident, deliberately fell into the water, from which she was quickly rescued by an athletic young man.

"Why," she cried, the next day, as she thought it all over, "was I not allowed to die?"

Then her glance fell upon a daily paper, and her eyes instantly brightened.

"Gallant rescue of a beautiful girl," she read. "Pretty Adele Brown, the beauty of the season, saved from a watery grave."

"Why, of course," she commented, thoughtfully. "It's very simple when you know how. Now I think of it, a rescue or a scandal will make a girl beautiful any day."—N.Y. "Town Topics."

Funny Answers.

An English teacher, commenting on the "wonderfully funny" answers given by his pupils to questions, cites the following specimens:

A boy, aged ten, thus answers a question as to the cause of the Transvaal disturbances: "Krugger and Bannerbullism is one. He is a man of blud. Mr. Chamberling has wrote to him sayin' come out and fite or else give up the bind of the English you have took. he is a boardutchman and a wickid heathin. lord Kitchener has sent for his geary blud and to bring back his scanderlus hed ded or alive."

An essay on Gladstone, by a boy of eleven, states: "Mr. Gladstone lovd everybody. he lovd publicans and sinners and Irishmen. he wanted the irish to come to England and have home reel, but Mr. Chamberlin says, no, no, so shure he got his blud up and killd Mr. Parnel. Mr. Gladstone died with great riepect and is burried in Westminster with pieceful ashes."

Ever since the Forth bridge was opened—eleven years ago—painting has gone on continuously, according to the "Mechanical Engineer." "Beginning at the south end, the workmen take three years to cover the entire length of the bridge, and, as three years represents approximately the life of the paint, no sooner are they finished than the men have to begin again. In this way every square inch of steel comes under observation at least once in three years. The staff of men employed varies in number from the maximum of 35."

The Kaiser as He Is.

"He is a brown-faced man, the brown of wind and weather, of fierce riding on land and of a glaring sun on the sea. His face is thinner than one has pictured, and there is a hint of weariness about the eyes. His hair gives the impression of being thin, and his famous moustache is not so long nor so jauntily fierce as one has imagined. There is many a dry-goods clerk in Berlin who has out-Kaisered the Kaiser in growing a moustache. But, owing to the sin of retouching, there is one thing that few of William's photographs show to advantage, and it is the most impressive characteristic of his face. And that is its singular sternness in repose. Square, iron jaws, thin, firm lips, a certain sharpness and keenness of visage, a penetrating eye, all speak of invincible determination, pride, dignity. Indeed, herein lies the force of personal majesty—for William, however much one may smile at his passion for royal display, has many of those splendid attributes of character which would make a man great in any sphere of life. It would be a large company of Germans, indeed, among whom one would fail to select him instinctively as the leader. A first impression, therefore, may thus be summed up: The Kaiser is less a great king than one has imagined, and more a great man. The longer one remains in Germany, and the more he learns of William and his extraordinary activities, the deeper grows this impression. We Americans have never quite overcome our first prejudices against the Kaiser, bred during the early days of his reign, when the mantle of royalty—and the Hohenzollern mantle at that—was new to his shoulders, and he said and did strange things; but in Europe—where they have grown accustomed to his vagaries, now, indeed, much less pronounced in their manifestations, and have set them down as the expressions of a strong and original individuality—the Kaiser occupies a place of high and genuine esteem. An American who remains long in Germany feels this change in sentiment strongly, and, when the Kaiser passes, he raises his hat with all the others, not merely because this is royalty, but because it is character and strength of purpose."

As might be expected, the Kaiser is most popular in his capital:

"One, hearing a commotion on Unter den Linden, with a flash of white plumes in the distance, and the swift clatter of hoofs, may well crowd up to see. A pair of splendid horses, traveling like the wind, two richly uniformed men on the box, and the Kaiser, the Kaiserin, and another lady in the open carriage behind. You observe that the Kaiser sits with his back to the horses, giving the place of honor to his wife, for William has set the highest ideals in courtesy to women—the Anglo-Saxon ideals, which often form a strong contrast to the rougher Teutonic customs. He wears a glistening silver helmet, which he touches with military precision as the people on the streets shout and lift their hats. No cavalcade of guards accompany the carriage, and there is apparently no effort to guard the lives of its occupants, except in so far as they are protected by the terrific speed at which the horses are always driven. It is one of William's pleasures to show himself and his family frequently to his people, and the royal carriage may be seen at all hours in the streets of Berlin. The Kaiser's departure from the palace is always signaled by the fall of a flag, which serves as a notification to the people to prepare for his appearance among them. Nearly every afternoon he rides out, usually in uniform, with some of his staff-officers, galloping down the Linden and into the Thiergarten, where he often spends an hour in exercise."

Henley's Attack on Stevenson.

THE literary sensation in London is William E. Henley's onslaught, in the Christmas number of the "Pall Mall" magazine, upon the Stevenson worshippers. In tone it is not dissimilar from that of his attack on indiscriminate eulogists of Burns. As Stevenson's closest friend, he strips Stevenson's personality of the fantastic romance woven about it, and shows him to have been at times a vain, ungrateful, self-righteous, anxious egotist, possessed of abundant but imitative gifts. Even those who attempt to defend the justice of the criticism find that it lays Henley open to charges of disloyalty and bad taste. The London "Daily News" is emphatic in its protest. It says:

"We are not surprised that the literary world is scandalized. It is astonishing that any man of ordinary feeling should have written in such terms of a dead friend. One thing is made quite clear by the article. Stevenson has a genuine hold upon the affections of his countrymen, and that affection will last long after Mr. Henley's ill-judged screed is forgotten."

This view, however, is not shared by some who cannot be charged with jealousy of Stevenson. Just as Mr. Henley knew Stevenson best in his middle and Mr. Balfour in his later life, so Miss Eve Blantyre Simpson, the authoress of "Robert Louis Stevenson's Edinburgh Days," can speak of him as boy and youth. Miss Simpson states her view as follows:

"Mr. Henley has done a brave deed in his trenchant article on his friend 'Lewis.' He depicts him as he was before he began to pose as a famed man and was by preference the thoroughbred Bohemian. Mr. Henley recalls him to Edinburgh folk as he was and as the true Stevenson would have wished to be known."

The caller explained his mission.

"It's a worthy cause," he said.

"It is, indeed," admitted the up-to-date merchant. "You may put our firm down for five hundred dollars."

"Good!" exclaimed the caller. "It's to be done very quietly and unostentatiously, of course. The money will be given in a lump sum from 'a few friends,' without any names whatever."

"No one will know who gives?" asked the merchant.

"No one," answered the caller.

"No list published?"

"None."

Curious Bit of News.

Dr. G. L. Johnson, whose studies of the eyes of mammals have recently been published, calls attention to the fact that men and monkeys alone possess parallel and convergent vision of the two eyes. On the other hand, the lower mammals possess divergent and consequently very widely extended vision. Squirrels, for instance, and probably hares and rabbits as well, are able to see an enemy approaching directly from behind without turning the head.

Among the Old Masters.

A GOOD looking young woman, who had evidently been fed on large quantities of "culturene," was piloting about the Art Museum in New York the other day a fat and comfortable middle-aged soul, whose agreeable but totally uninspired features showed that hers was the proud privilege of being mother to her companion. The girl dragged her mother from canvas to canvas, explaining things in a high-pitched voice, and a portion of their conversation is recorded by the "Tribune."

"Rembrandt was a Dutchman," she observed. "You see how full of shadows his pictures are."

"Shadows, indeed," returned the mother. "I must say, though, it was well for that lady he did put her in the shadow. He must have been well paid for painting her, I should say," she added with scorn.

The two passed on to Rubens.

"Ain't they fat, those ladies—if you can call 'em ladies!" exclaimed the portly matron, for once interested.

"He used his wife as a model, mother," volunteered the cultured one.

"Well, now," said mother, wrathfully, "to think a man would make such a show of his own wife! No, I may not be so well educated as you, but I know better than that, I hope."

The conversation, carried on in clear tones, had attracted the attention of half the room. The girl blushed deeply, and drew her mother away in the direction of the modern rooms. The hopeless remark floated back:

"No, Antoinette, it ain't no use. Them old masters all look alike to me."

Anecdotal.

At North Berwick, near Edinburgh, the other day, a golfer whose ardor is greatly in advance of his skill got into difficulties at the second hole. Repeated "foozles" left his ball badly "cupped" on the brink of a bunker. He turned to his caddie in despair. Said he: "I've tried my brassie, and my cleek, and my mashie, and none of them will lift out that ball. What should you say I should take now?" "Sir," was the perfectly respectful and sympathetic response, "I wad mysel' be taking, were it just me mysel', the four-twenty train back to Edinburgh." And he did.

The English papers are full of apocryphal incidents, alleged to have taken place in Canada during the recent Royal visit. It is related, for instance, that a proud and touchy resident in the neighborhood of Perth declined to go to Ottawa to see the Duchess because, although he went to see the Prince of Wales in 1860, the Royal family had never returned his call. Less ceremonious was the Western alderman who, grasping the Duke's hand with firmness and effusion, exclaimed, "I met your old man here forty years ago."

A recently published story of the late Lord Morris, Chief Justice of Ireland, illustrates his scorn of red tape and petty details. A question had arisen as to the cost of heating the Irish law courts, and a consequential treasury official was sent over from London to Dublin on purpose to investigate the matter. When he introduced himself and explained his errand, Lord Morris studied with suspicious blandness and said: "Certainly, I will put you in communication with the person immediately in charge of that department." Then he sent out a messenger, and presently there entered an old charwoman. Lord Morris arose and left the room, saying as he did so: "Mary, here is the young man to see about the coal."

Father Taylor, the sailors' friend, was a man who at all times spoke with an engaging frankness, which sometimes became more brusque than was desirable. A banker from the West End of Boston once visited Father Taylor's church during a fervid revival, and varied the usual character of the meeting by a rather pompous address. Its purport was that the merchant princes of Boston were a very beneficent set of men, whose wealth and enterprise gave employment to thousands of sailors, and that it was, above all, the duty of seamen to show their gratitude to the merchants. At the close of his speech the banker was somewhat taken aback when Father Taylor rose and asked, simply: "Is there any other sinner from up-town who would like to say a word?"

Not long ago a Western Kansas politician was asked by his wife to lay aside politics long enough one day to dig the potatoes in the garden. He consented, and, after digging for a few minutes, went into the house and said he had found a coin. He washed it off, and it proved to be a silver quarter. He put it in his jeans and went back to work. Presently he went to the house again and said he had found another coin. He washed the dirt off of it, and this time it was a silver half-dollar. He put it in his jeans. "I have worked pretty hard," said he to his wife; "I guess I'll take a short nap." When he awoke, he found that his wife had dug all the rest of the potatoes. But she found no coins. It then dawned upon her that she had been "worked."

At the Lotus Club dinner to Ambassador Choate, Senator Chauncey M. Depew told a story on Mr. Choate which caused the assemblage to roar with laughter. The occasion he referred to was a dinner given in New York some years ago to the Earl of Aberdeen, Governor-General of Canada, and head of the Clan Gordon. The earl attended in full regalia, "the wearing of which," said the senator, "consists in leaving off some articles of dress we deem quite essential." He continued: "At the dinner I sat on the earl's right. Choate was next me. Just after the earl seated himself, Choate whispered to me: 'Chauncey, are Aberdeen's legs really bare?' I raised the table-cloth cautiously, and gave that scratch that all Scotchmen appreciate, and said: 'Yes, Joe, they are.' When Choate got up to speak, he said: 'Gentlemen, my invitation did not convey to me the information that the Earl of Aberdeen was to be here to-night in full regalia. If I had known it I would have left my trousers at home.' Well, you never saw a madder crowd of Scotchmen. They thought it a reflection on the national costume of the earl, who had done the diners honor to appear in it. Well, four years have passed since then, and now the earl regards that as a joke, and tells it at least once a day, three hundred and sixty-five days in the year."

Smoking-Cars For Women.

SMOKING seems to be growing in favor among the fair sex, especially on the Continent. So apparent has this become of late that the railroad authorities of Belgium have been seriously considering the advisability of introducing cars in which only women shall be allowed to travel. What has particularly served to bring the matter before the officials' notice is an incident that happened a few weeks since, when a young woman entered one of the carriages on the Southern Railroad reserved for ladies, and in a few minutes after the train had started from Brussels lit a cigarette and began to smoke it. Whereupon the other women in the compartment became very indignant, threatening to complain to the guard as soon as the train stopped. "I am in a carriage reserved for ladies," observed the smoker, blandly, "and I am not aware of any law which prohibits ladies from smoking." When the train stopped, the guard was informed of the proceedings, but was loath to interfere, and the result was that when the woman smoker arrived at her destination, she consulted a lawyer, who has now by an action in court raised the interesting question: Should railroad companies be compelled to provide separate smoking cars for women who wish to smoke while they are traveling? Some of the companies, however, appear to have taken time by the forelock, for it is understood that arrangements have already been made on some of the Belgian railroads to provide smoking compartments exclusively for women addicted to the use of tobacco.

A mother not spoken well of by her children is an enemy of the state; she should not live within the kingdom's wall.

In comparison with the English tongue, foreign tongues seem parsimonious in some ways of expression and wasteful in others. For instance, it is impossible to "kick" a man in French. You must give him a "blow with the foot." The Portuguese do not "wink" at one; they "close and open the eyes." In the languages of the American Indians there is no word with which to convey the idea of "stealing," perhaps because the idea of property is so vague. It is related of one of the early missionaries that, in attempting to translate the Bible into Algonkin, he could find no word to express "love," and was compelled to invent it.

The first thing that strikes a landsman on a man-of-war is the rigid discipline observed everywhere. On some of the ships belonging to the tropical countries, however, discipline is very lax. The "Defense," a Haytian man-of-war, was lying in the harbor of Port au Prince. One day a mess cook, for some reason, cleaned about a peck of knives and forks on the gun-deck, and, being suddenly called away, and not wishing to spend time to go to the galley, he seized the mess-pot full of knives and forks and stuck it in the muzzle of the ten-inch gun, putting the tampion in after it. About an hour afterward the admiral came aboard, and as the gun was loaded with blank cartridge, they used it to fire a salute. It happened that the gun was aimed toward the town, and almost pointblank at the Grand Hotel. The guests assembled on the porch to witness the ceremonies, when they were saluted with a rain of knives and forks, which stuck against the wooden walls like quills on a porcupine. Fortunately no one was hurt, although there were many narrow escapes.

A Famous Necklace.

The famous pearl necklace of the Countess Castiglione, which has just been sold by auction to a French jewelry dealer for eighty-four thousand three hundred dollars, is one of the most beautiful things of its kind in existence. The piece consists of two hundred and seventy-nine pearls, which are threaded on five strings. Each string was put up separately and knocked down to different bids. Granberg of Paris succeeded in securing all of them, thus giving him possession of the beautiful necklace in its entirety. The countess was an eccentric character. To punish France for having become a republic she shut herself up in her house and never let the light of day shine on her, contenting herself with candles and gas. At the same time she abolished mirrors from her apartments, and thus spared herself the pain of looking at her face as it aged.

A Naval Battle on Horseback.

GENERAL PAEZ was the first president of the republic of Venezuela, and to him perhaps, more than to any other man, with the exception of Simon Bolivar, Venezuela owes her independence. Paez was a llanero—cowboy—on the llanos or plains of the Orinoco, and at the age of eighteen was superintendent of a large cattle estate. One of the most remarkable incidents of modern warfare, in which Paez played the principal part, is chronicled in Mr. W. E. Curtis's book on Venezuela.

General Paez is the only man who ever fought a naval battle on horseback. With his cavalry he actually attacked and captured a fleet of ships.

While Bolivar was trying to cross the Apure River with his army, during the struggle for independence, he was prevented by a half-dozen or more of Spanish gunboats, which anchored in the stream and moved up and down as he did.

"I would give the world to have possession of that flotilla," exclaimed he to Paez, who had then risen to be second in command, "for I can never cross the river as long as it is there! If it belonged to us, instead of to the enemy, the crossing would be an easy matter."

"I will have those flecheras (ships) or die!" exclaimed Paez; and, calling upon his llaneros—his regiment of cowboys—he said: "Let those follow Tio who dare!"

"Tio" was the pet name by which Paez was known among his reckless followers, but he never used it himself except in an emergency.

He spurred his stallion into the stream, followed by three thousand llaneros, and their horses, which are taught to swim as well as to gallop, carried them directly to the gunboats.

It was night. The Spanish fleet was taken entirely unawares. The llaneros clambered from their saddles to the decks of the vessels, and then let their horses swim back to shore. Thus, after cutting off their own retreat, it was a question of win or die. They fought desperately, and every vessel was captured.

The Manufacturers' Life

15th Annual Report.

The Amalgamation of the Temperance and General Life Assurance Company and the Manufacturers' Life Assurance Company Proves to be a Great Success

The fifteenth annual meeting of the Manufacturers Life Insurance Company was held at the head office, Toronto, Feb. 6, 1902. The report presented by the Managing Director was of the most satisfactory nature, calling forth congratulations from all sides. It was as follows:

This being the first annual meeting since the amalgamation of the Temperance and General Life Assurance Company of North America and the Manufacturers Life Insurance Company, no doubt a great deal of interest will be taken in the report of the year's transactions by the shareholders and policyholders, and it therefore gives your directors great pleasure to be able to lay before you a statement so eminently satisfactory in all particulars.

It might reasonably have been anticipated that the disturbance incident to the amalgamation of two vigorously growing concerns would have resulted for the first year at least in a considerable loss of business, but it is pleasing to learn that the opposite is the case. The only feature in the company's affairs indicating any prejudicial effect is the number of not-taken policies, which amounted to a little more than the usual percentage of the new business, and were principally from amongst the new policies written during the eight months immediately preceding amalgamation; that is, while rumors were freely circulating, and before a definite announcement could be made. On the other hand, since the actual consolidation in June last, the company has made rapid strides in every department.

The applications for new assurances were 3836, for $5,068,378, being $541,-409 in excess of the business of the combined companies for 1900. Of this amount, $606,117 was declined as not being up to the required standard. Applications for $33,804 were incomplete at the end of the year, and 3395 policies were issued, for $5,023,401. The total assurances now in force aggregate $27,129,424, of which $8,045,409 is in the Temperance section, $16,540,-020 in the General and $2,553,955 in the Foreign.

The net premium and interest income for the year was $1,061,821.98, being an increase of $103,605.67 over that of both companies for 1900. The payments to policyholders, including Death Claims, were $236,073.74, and working expenses and taxes amounted to $282,952.06, excluding the sum of $9,230.28, which was expense out of the ordinary connected with amalgamation. Had the rate of expenses to premium income continued the same as in 1900, the ordinary working expenses would have been $283,170.94, so that the saving for the six months since amalgamation has amounted to $20,238.88, or at the rate of over $10,000 a year, a result which fulfils our estimate and fully justifies the action taken by the Boards of the amalgamating companies.

The excess of income over expenditure is $572,014.67, a very substantial amount to add in one year to the reserves and surplus for policyholders.

The Claims actually falling in during the year were $196,366.10, of which $43,056.10 was in the Temperance section, $139,520 in the General and $13,-180 in the Foreign.

The Assets show an increase of $568,119.03, having almost reached the $4,000,000 mark.

The Reserves for policyholders on the Government standard amount to $3,210,701, and the surplus on policyholders' account to $502,321.50.

The date fixed by Legislation for the companies to comply with the more conservative 4 per cent. basis of valuation is Jan. 1st, 1910. This company could comply with this standard to-day and still have a considerable surplus over all liabilities and capital stock.

Altogether, with rapidly increasing assets and surplus, a thriving new business, and increasing expense ratio, the position is a very satisfactory one. Your directors have good reasons to congratulate you on such results, and to record their appreciation of the arduous labors of the officers, office staff and field force, and the success which has attended their efforts during a year when so much extra work and strain devolved upon them. Now that the agencies and head office affairs of the two companies have been fully consolidated, and the whole attention of the management can be given to the ordinary requirements of the business, we may reasonably look forward to even greater achievements in the near future.

The auditors' report will be found appended to the accompanying financial statement and balance sheet.

G. W. ROSS,
President.

J. F. JUNKIN,
Managing Director.

The Hon. G. W. Ross, President of the company, in moving the adoption of the report, said:

I am very glad, indeed, to meet the other shareholders of the Manufacturers Life Insurance Company in my capacity as President, and to express to you my gratification at the report that has just been presented to us.

The first feature that comes to our notice, and one that gives me personally much pleasure, is the fact that, after careful consideration the directors have decided to adopt the single name of the Manufacturers Life Insurance Company, instead of the dual name—the Manufacturers and Temperance and General Life Insurance Company—a name altogether too cumbersome for business purposes. The change, of course, naturally caused some confusion at first among policyholders, but I am glad to say that all seem to concur in the wisdom of the change when the circumstances are made plain to them. Indeed, the fact that the new company has made so many new friends, with such excellent results, as the financial statement shows, proves that the amalgamation and the subsequent changes have been wisely brought about.

It will be noticed that the amount of insurance applied for during 1901 was an increase over the combined amount applied for in the two companies last year by over one-half million dollars, and that all the other items show a similar advance. A feature even more gratifying, and arising directly from the amalgamation, is the reduction of management expenses of the new company. A reduction of over $20,000 in six months is in itself nearly equal to the dividends paid last year, and it is the more remarkable result when we consider that this happened in the first year of the company, when all the expenses of the amalgamation had to be reckoned with.

All the facts, indeed, brought about by the statement go to prove the wisdom displayed by both companies in amalgamating. A comparison of the statement, with the combined figures of the two companies, is most gratifying in every particular. The premium income shows an advance of over $82,000. The assets which have reached the magnificent sum of $3,-772,477.25, show an increase of over half a million dollars. The security to policyholders, amounting to almost $5,000,000, also shows an increase of about a half-million. The figures place the success of the amalgamation and the power and strength of the new company beyond a question.

There is yet another feature to which I would wish to draw your attention. I refer to the high standard which is being kept up by the medical examiners in all their examinations, as exemplified by the fact that over 600 applications have been refused during the year. The future success of the company depends to a great extent upon this high standard being maintained.

As I have stated before, this is a most satisfactory report, and the company can enter upon the ensuing year with a great deal of confidence. The position, both financially and as far as all employes are concerned, is most promising. I know there is but one feeling held by all those connected with the company, and that is to serve it to the best of their ability; and I firmly believe next year will even surpass the year we have just completed.

NORTH AMERICAN OIL & REFINING COMPANY'S

Stock and It Will Make You Rich

The company owns 2,080 acres of land located in the Newhall-Acton White Oil Fields of Los Angeles County, California. Our manager, Mr. J. H. Parker, writes us under date of Jan. 15th that they have opened up two oil wells near our property, one being a gusher of white oil just as clear as alcohol, and of 52 degrees gravity. This oil is worth and is selling at $4.00 per barrel at the wells, and producing better than 50 barrels per day. Our derrick is up and the machinery purchased; we expect to be drilling in a very short time. We now offer to the public 100,000 shares of this meritorious company's stock at the low price of 10 cents per share, and it is worth a great deal more money at the present time with the showing we have in the property. The demand for this oil is far greater than the supply, which is not so of the black oils of Lower California and Beaumont, Texas, that are a drug upon the market.

Regarding the officers of the company, they are all men of honor and means. There are no salaries paid to any of the officers, not even our General Manager, until our company is put on a paying basis.

INCORPORATION.

The company is capitalized for 1,500,000 shares, the incorporation having been effected under the laws of Wyoming, stock being all common stock, issued absolutely fully paid and forever non-assessable. The incorporation laws of Wyoming are peculiarly favorable to oil enterprises, and the par value of the stock has been fixed at One Cent per share in order to avoid the excessive revenue tax paid on stocks of a high par value.

LIABILITIES.

The company has no debts; all stock is fully paid and non-assessable, there are no stockholders' liabilities, and we have no royalties to pay for any purpose.

OUR LANDS.

The company's lands have been carefully selected by their engineer, Mr. J. H. Parker, who is also Vice President and General Manager, in conjunction with four of the best oil experts, who are well known throughout the state. These experts each unbeknown to the other went over our vast territory to locate a site to sink our first well; their reports are on file in the company's office, and we will be pleased to mail a copy of the same upon application, also maps of the oil fields with our property showing in the red. The directors call special attention to the maps, which have been drawn from actual surveys and personal inspection of the land and is accurate. The company's lands are distinctly shown as well as their relation to other oil lands and the location of oil wells, oil seepages and oil springs. A careful inspection of the map will aid prospective investors to judge of the oil under the company's lands.

The geological formation is perfect, the Anticlinal passing through the entire property, and being unbroken by granite formations.

GUARANTEE.

The officers and directors of the company have such great faith in the proposition that they will redeem all stock sold for cash, providing they do not strike oil as designated.

TREASURY STOCK.

The company holds in the treasury over 500,000 shares of treasury stock and some money. The proceeds of sale from the 100,000 shares now offered to the public will be used for the purpose of sinking wells.

REGISTRATION.

The stock is registered with the Colorado Title & Trust Company of Colorado Springs, Colorado, which guarantees any over-issue of stock.

The company would like to employ a few good Fiscal Agents to handle any part of this 100,000 shares of stock, giving them a very liberal commission. We take pleasure in recommending this stock to the good people of Peterborough and vicinity at the very low price of 10 cents per share; considering the condition of the property the stock is worth more money than what we are asking for it.

ANOTHER BIG CHINESE REBELLION IS NOW SAID TO BE BREWING

Prince Tuan and Tang Fu Hsiang Gathering Forces at Shingchipu

Large Force Said to Have Assembled and will Soon Attack Pekin

The Allies will be in Better Shape to Fight the Horde Than Ever Before

Pekin, Feb. 13 — Prince Tuan, says the North China Daily News, on the authority of native papers, is still reported to be residing in a fortified town called Shingchipu, a place which he made his refuge upon the flight of the court from Pekin. Prince Tuan and Gen. Tung Fu Hsiang have made their headquarters a rallying point for their followers and all who hate the foreigners, hate the Government or hate their fellow men.

Chingshipp is a historical town and is famous for the heroic stand of ten years it made while held by the Mohammedan rebels against the armies of the late Marquis Tao Tsung Tian from 1862 to 1872. The place had been turned into a collection of towns, each with thick mud walls around it and with one high wall with ramparts, bastions, etc., around the whole cluster of towns. Here from 300,000 to 400,000 people can easily find shelter, and from this place Tuan and Ting Fu Hsiang are sending their agents to obtain grain and recruits, perhaps with the intention of starting a rebellion.

ITEMS OF INTEREST

Ottawa, Feb. 12.—A letter has been received here giving further evidence in support of the charges of Boer cruelty to Canadian wounded after the engagement at Witkopport last December. The Canadian casualties numbered sixteen, including Trooper W. H. Walker, of the Northwest, and Trooper Sloan of Toronto, killed. The writer of the letter says: "An explosive bullet shattered his leg, and two bullets struck him in the face. The Boers stripped him, and he lay out in the scorching sun till evening. His body was all blistered. The Boers, in fact, stripped every one of the wounded they came across, and made them walk back to [illegible]. Midway and two others, Sloan and Ingles, were together. Sloan was wounded. The Boers stripped him, and he died from the wounds and exposure. Ingles gave up after his ammunition was exhausted. While the Boers were pulling his shirt over his head one of them shot him in the shoulder. Then they told him to get to camp. When he was about 200 yards away, the Boers fired a dozen shots at him, but fortunately none took effect. They treated our wounded shamefully. It was something disgraceful. We killed nineteen Boers and wounded many more."

PRISON BEFORE THE ARMY.

Berlin, Feb. 12.—In Bavaria a movement is afoot for declining to serve in the army. The leaders come from Austria, and are members of a widespread religious and socialist organization there called the Nazarenes. Several of the young members of the sect, having declined to join the army or carry arms, have been arrested, and will be tried by courtmartial. A short time ago one Nazarene died in a Hungarian prison after having maintained his principles for more than eight years.

Montreal, Feb 11.—A coachman, named Daniel Sutherland, who came here from England, attempted to murder his wife last night at her boarding house, 1835 Ontario-street. The couple had not been living together, on account of Sutherland's insane jealousy, and the wife has been boarding at Mrs. Henderson's near at hand. The wouldbe murderer entered his wife's room and fired two shots, the ball entering the woman's head, although she is still alive. The bullet has not yet been extracted. After the attempt, Sutherland at the police who arrested him, and shot himself in the wrist. The officers, however, escaped without injury, and the furious man was locked up.

HONORS FOR SCHWAB

London, Feb. 11.—Sir Thomas Lipton, Mrs. Huneiker, Archibald White Maconochie, M. P., for East Aberdeen; Joseph Lawrence, M. P., for the Monmouth District, chairman of the Machinery Trust, director of the Westinghouse Electric Company, etc., and Yacht Designer Watson bade farewell to Mr. Charles M. Schwab, President of the United States Steel Corporation, when he left London to-day to take the steamship St. Paul from Southampton for New York. The railway carriage in which Mr. Schwab traveled was decorated with flowers, which had been sent by Sir Thomas Lipton.

The interview which Mr. Schwab had with King Edward yesterday was at His Majesty's instance. It was not solicited by Mr. Schwab.

WILL CROWD WESTMINSTER

From 8,000 to 10,000 Persons to See King Edward Crowned.

London, Feb. 12—The problem of accommodating those who are entitled to be in Westminster Abbey at the coronation of King Edward and Queen Alexandra, together with the question of those whom it is considered desirable to invite, has been one of the most difficult of those that the Government and Abbey authorities and officers of the royal household have ever had to solve. It is generally supposed that from eight thousand to ten thousand persons will be present. The following paragraph appears in a generally well-informed weekly:

"Sixteen inches of room would strike most of us as inadequate for our persons. Yet this, we are credibly informed, is the space to be allowed in Westminster Abbey to each of the 8,000 persons who will be bidden to attend the coronation."

UNCLE SAM'S WAR IN THE PHILIPPINES

It is a Merciless Murder of Innocent Natives

THE WAR SHOULD BE STOPPED

For Two Years the Americans Have Been Engaged in Shooting Down These Poor People — The Difference Between the Philippine War and the South African War

Toronto, Feb. 12—The News says:

The American newspapers which are berating Great Britain for refusing Holland's offer to act as mediator in South Africa would be better employed in trying to bring their own Government to a sense of the injustice and brutality of its attempt to force itself on the Filipinos. If the interference of civilized nations was ever warranted in the attack of one people on another, it is in the American invasion of the Philippines. Those islands had cast off the rule of Spain before the outbreak of hostilities between that country and the United States, and if the Americans had been true to republican principles they would have recognized them as a free and independent nation, instead of a Spanish possession, to be seized among the spoils of war. The Americans excuse the course they have taken by declaring that the Filipinos are not capable of governing themselves, but no one believes that they took the islands off the hands of the Spaniards at a valuation of many millions of dollars for the sake of the inhabitants, and everyone does believe that they were actuated solely by the expectation that the islands would prove of enormous commercial value to them.

They have been engaged for two years now in the pastime of shooting down these poor people, whose only desire is to be left to themselves, simply because they think that the possession of the islands will increase their trade, and they have done this in the face of their pet rule of political faith, the Monroe doctrine, which should certainly deter them from extending their territory in the Eastern hemisphere, when it preaches that Eastern nations should be prevented from further occupation in the Western hemisphere, even at the price of war, if necessary. When the most extravagant Boer claims are allowed, Great Britain's cause in South Africa is far more just than this unprovoked assault of the Americans on a semi-barbarous people, whose country happened to arouse their avarice, and when the press of the United States has done its duty by its own country it will be time enough for it to turn its attention to the faults of other nations.

A BRUTAL ASSAULT

A Man Named Redmond From Cavan, Badly Beaten

A man named Redmond, who is said to live in Cavan, was beaten almost into insensibility a few nights ago. The assault occurred on Simcoe street, and from what can be learned, was unprovoked. Redmond, who is an elderly man, was attempting to gain admission to a certain place, and was set upon by a man, who came from the inside. He was knocked down and kicked on the head and face. After the unfortunate victim was let go, he managed to make his way to Dr. McClelland, where his wounds were dressed. He was so badly used up that he was unable to go home until the following day.

ANNUAL MEETING

The 57th Regt. Band Had a Successful Year—Officers Elected

The annual meeting of the 57th Regt. Band, was held in the band hall on Tuesday evening. The reports showed the band to have had a very successful year, financially and musically. The hearty support extended by the citizens has enabled the band to meet its heavy obligations for new instruments and general equipment, and to have a small balance left over. The present year will require the best efforts of the management, to pay off a debt of $600 for the new saxaphones and to meet the current expenses. The citizens of the town will be asked to assist the band by giving contributions.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

President and Manager—Mr. R. Mein.
Treasurer—Mr. Robt. Beach.
Secretary—Mr. John A. Harper.
Librarian—Mr. George Grange.
Advisory Board—Mr. Jos. Halpenny, chairman, Messrs. F. C. Miller, W. H. Lech, E. Crook, W. Hughes, Harry Clarke, R. Shelton, W. Cunningham and Thos. Birch.

Mr. Jas. Crowe was made an honorary member of the Board, as an acknowledgement of his efficient services in connection with the band, and Mr. Glidden, the retiring president, was accorded a hearty vote of thanks for his services during the past year.

Devised by an Eminent Physician and Generally Prescribed by the Profession

Paine's Celery Compound

THE MARVELLOUS BANISHER OF DISEASE HAS BECOME THE POPULAR FAMILY MEDICINE

Professor Edward E. Phelps, M.D., LL.D., according to the ethics of honest and reputable physicians, gave to the leading medical men of the world his wonderful prescription, Paine's Celery Compound, as soon as it was perfected. For this reason Paine's Celery Compound has never been included among patent medicines. Coming from so high a source, and being so thoroughly tested and so strongly recommended, physicians prescribe it with confidence.

Paine's Celery Compound rapidly gains in fame as a disease banisher; all who have tried it gratefully acknowledge its curing and life-giving power. It drives the poison germs of deep-seated diseases from the blood; it brings buoyancy of spirit in place of lassitude and despondency; in enables the overtaxed and broken-down system to start fairly on the road to health; it gives the sweet sleep so necessary to brain and nerves. It strengthens, invigorates and gives tone to the system, makes pure blood, is food and nourishment for nerves and tissue. It makes sick people well. Mr. R. McMullin, Camden, N.S., writes as follows about his cure:

"For over four years I have been in poor health, and received treatment from two doctors, besides using seven kinds of patent medicines. I also sent to New York and got a month's treatment of a special medicine, but no good results came from it. I was rundown, suffered terribly, could not rest at night, and every morning had a severe pain in my back, dizziness in my head, and vomited bitter green matter, and had no appetite. I heard of Paine's Celery Compound and decided to give it a trial, and am happy to report that it worked wonders. The pains are all gone, I rest well at night, my appetite is good, and my health is now splendid. Paine's Celery Compound has worked miracles for me. I recommend it to all sick people as the best medicine."

MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP

The Ottawa municipal coal yard scheme is said to have aroused more interest than any other bill before the legislature this session. Municipal ownership in every form is attracting more attention every day. That cities should supply the ratepayers with light is an accepted idea, and in this climate it is equally important that the people should have cheap heat. The next on the bill will be municipal insurance.

Deafness is Curable

Sufferers from impaired hearing will be glad to know that their affliction is probably not due to any organic defect in the ear, but results probably from a thickening of the lining of the middle ear caused by catarrhal inflammation. Hundreds of perfect recoveries as a result of the inhalation of Catarrhozone are reported, and on the highest authority we recommend this treatment to our readers. Catarrhozone quickly restores lost hearing, and its efficiency is placed beyond dispute by the case of Mr. Foxall of St. Thomas, who recovered perfect hearing by using Catarrhozone, after years of deafness. Price $1.00. At druggists or by mail from Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

THE LATE DR. FIFE

His Death Occurred at an Early Hour Yesterday Morning after a Lingering Illness

The death of Dr. J. A. Fife, which occurred at his family residence, No. 631 George street, at an early hour yesterday morning, though not altogether unexpected, brought sorrow to a large circle of friends and acquaintances. For some time past, Dr. Fife had not been in very good health, and of late has been unable to attend his professional duties. His death was due to paralysis, followed by a general breaking up of the constitution.

Dr. Fife was a born Canadian, of Scotch descent. He was born in the township of Otonabee, and after receiving his education here, he went to Victoria School of Medicine in 1860. Three years later he went to Washington, with a view of joining the American army or navy, and was granted a commission as assistant surgeon in the navy. He was in Admiral Dahlgren's fleet, and was present at the bombardment of Charleston, S.C., and was for some time on blockade duty. After the termination of the war he took a regular course in Bellevue Hospital, N.Y., subsequently returning to Toronto, where he finished his course at Victoria. After receiving his degree, he practiced for a short time in Brampton and Hastings, and subsequently removed to Peterborough, where he has been successfully engaged in the practice of his profession. The deceased was married to a daughter of Rev. Ashton Fletcher, of Woodstock, Ont. Mrs. Fife survives her husband, together with the following sons and daughters: Messrs. Wm. Fletcher, of Borland, Man.; Ashton T., of Rat Portage, and J. Harold, of Vancouver, B. C., and Miss Mary H. A., and Miss Alice L. O., who reside at home.

The late Dr. Fife was well known throughout this district. He was a man of many amiable qualities and for many years has been a zealous worker in the George Street Methodist Church. The funeral will take place on Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Service will be held in the George Street Methodist church, before the remains are removed to their last resting place in the Little Lake Cemetery.

NEW MANAGER FOR COMMERCE

Mr. D. Hughes-Charles, of Galt, to Come to Peterborough

In regard to the promotion of Mr. D. Hughes-Charles, Manager of the Bank of Commerce, Galt, to Peterborough, the Woodstock Times says:

The many friends of Mr. D. Hughes-Charles, Manager of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, Galt, will be very pleased to know that he has been promoted to the managership of the Peterborough branch. Yesterday's Galt Reporter, in regretting Mr. Charles' removal, says:

Mr. Hughes-Charles confined himself to no hobbies, but was in general a citizen that worked for the town, and the townspeople will long feel a vacancy that will be hard to fill. His geniality, his Irish wit, his courtesy and efficiency as a banker, his progressive citizenship, have all united to make him one of the best residents this town has known.

And the Galt Reformer of the same date pays the following tribute:

It's needless to enumerate the many ways in which Mr. Charles has been a good friend to Galt and a loyal citizen. Every public-spirited movement has had his sympathy and support. His jolly laugh, his wit, his humor, all will linger in our memories. His connection with the Galt hospital is well known and justly appreciated; he'll go down to history as one of the founders of the Galt horse show, and he has been an energetic and eloquent member of the Galt Board of Trade.

$100 Reward, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that it Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

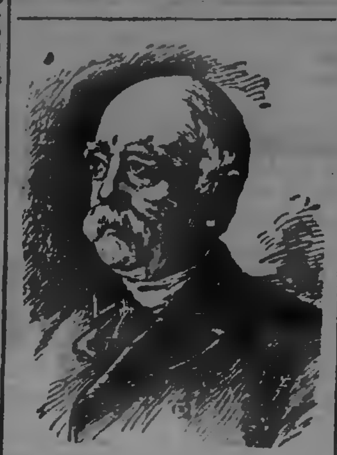
WHY THE GERMANS HATE THE ENGLISH



The Boer War Did Not Originate the Present Trouble

But It Has Greatly Aggravated the Dislike of Britain

The Feeling as it now Exists, is a Menace to the Peace of the World

London, Feb. 13—The feeling in Germany against England is not passing away as rapidly as the friends of peace would wish. The Post says there is no disguising the fact that it is a menace to the peace of the world. Should England find trouble with France, for instance, over the Newfoundland matter, it would be difficult to restrain the German people from participating in the conflict.

The Contemporary Review, in discussing the matter, says:

About the fact there is no doubt whatever. The admiration and the liking for England which were formerly exhibited in Germany have almost entirely passed away. Even Hamburg, in which formerly the "cult" of England was a popular feature, and about which there was an English atmosphere, is now as Anglophobe as Dresden. Where some regard for England is still evinced, as, for instance, in rich Jewish circles, in young ladies' academies, and among some of the women in good society, it is no longer described as "love," but denounced as a "mania." If a German likes the French or the Russians, he is termed a Francophil or a Russophil; if he likes the English he is branded as an Anglomaniac. The epigram "Englanderei" is a term of reproach; it conveys the contempt which we should express, if we spoke of a "Germanite." Among the Junker aristocracy, it is the men; among the middle class it is the women, who foster Anglophobia. In every middle-class family the women are for the Boers. The children play at "Boers," and in their play the English are always worsted. In a word, the virus of Anglophobia permeates the German nation. In the professor's chair, in the pulpit, in the mess-room, in the canteen, in the drawing-room, in the farmhouse, in the proletariat's garret, the dislike of England is incessantly encountered.

Anglophobia in Germany, indeed, is of older date than the Boer war. The fact rankles that the English sympathised with the Danes in 1864, and with the French in 1870. Bismarck's biographer, Busch, tells us that the Chancellor fostered Anglophobia as a lever against English influence at the Court at Berlin, and that, as long ago as 1884 he instigated Busch to write newspaper articles inciting Europe to help the Boers against England. Then, again, while Germans have become commercial rivals and colonial rivals of Englishmen, the tremendous advance that the latter have secured excites the envy that breeds hatred. Even the manners of Englishmen are odious to Germans, who carry forms and conventionalities to an extreme. The Englishman's self-reliance, self-complacency and aggressive personality are intolerable to the German, who is sensitive and punctilious.

The writer in the Contemporary admits that, while the German dislike of England is of older date than the Boer war, it has been greatly aggravated by that contest. He acknowledges that England's policy in South Africa has cost her a number of true German friends, men of the old fashioned type, who, while watching the rise of their own country, with mingled awe and pride, looked to England as the muniment of chartered liberty. Even these men have now become estranged. Their opinions on the war in South Africa are the opinions of the whole of Continental Europe, and of the "pro-Boers" in England itself. The fact that England has no longer any influential friends in Germany, and that Anglophobia there has become deep-rooted as well as wide-spread is recognised as a disquieting fact. If there is as yet no danger in the fact, it is because Germany is not ready, nor can be ready for some decades, to challenge England on the ocean. But that, at some future time and under certain contingencies, the hostility with which Englishmen are looked upon in Germany, may have unpleasant consequences will scarcely be denied by those who believe with Von Moltke that the causes of war are no longer the ambitions of princes, but the feelings of peoples.

GERMAN STATEMENTS ARE QUITE FALSE

Times Correspondent at Washington on Spanish War

BRITISH ARMY AGAIN ASSAILED

Veiled and Unjustifiable Attack by the Berlin Post Referred to by the Correspondent of the Times.

London, Feb. 13.—The Times' correspondent at Washington says the German statement that Lord Pauncefote's connection with the Ambassadorial meeting in Washington on April 14th, is known by the United States Government to be false. The correspondent says it is true that a meeting of the representatives of six powers was held in the British Embassy on that date. Lord Pauncefote, as senior of the diplomatic corps, was requested to call a meeting. He did not suggest the meeting. It was proposed, but not by Lord Pauncefote, that a note be drawn up to be addressed by the diplomats to their own Governments—not to that of the United States. M. Cambon, the French Ambassador, drafted the note, using the phrase, "Would not be justified," with reference to intervention in Cuba. Neither Lord Pauncefote, nor any member of the diplomatic corps proposed the sending of the note to the United States Government, declaring its intervention unjustifiable, and the German Emperor must know that the contention of the German press is unfounded, since Von Holleben was present at the meeting. The note of April 7th, presented by the diplomats, was concerted between Lord Pauncefote and the United States Secretary of State. The Times editorially says that the European Governments, with the exception of England, were silent upon the powers' attitude towards the Spanish war, fearing the embarrassing disclosures that further inquiries might lead to.

London, Feb. 12.—The Berlin correspondent of The Times quotes the following from the Berlin Post as a specimen of the unjust and malicious slanders applied by a portion of the German press against the British army: "The fact that there have been frequent assaults upon Boer women and girls," says the Post, "is established by the testimony of eye-witnesses. Outrages are committed by individual soldiers in every war, and it lies in the nature of the case that in an army of mercenaries, composed partly of very doubtful elements, such outrages should be of more frequent occurrence than in the national armies of the continent."

The Times' correspondent calls attention to the affected tone of moderation adopted to instill the poison of calumnious charges into the minds of the German people.

CANADA AND THE MONROE DOCTRINE IS GREAT BRITAINS AUTHORITY MENACED?

Omnious Outlook Regarding the Future Should An Attempt be Made to Enforce the "Doctrine" in British America

Ottawa, Feb. 13—Some consideration is being given to the position of Canada by our public men should the United States attempt to enforce the Monroe doctrine. This may be illustrated by the fact that the United States can buy Greenland or the Danish West Indies, but would not permit Canada to do it. A prominent newspaper says: "It is worth while to know whether it is true that this part of the empire has a moral right which cannot be asserted because of the might of another nation, as the Citizen says, and whether it is true that this country has a moral right which the empire cannot make good for us, but which we must do without until we are strong enough to procure it for ourselves, as the Herald says. It means that British sovereignty is impaired, and is not supreme so far as this portion of the empire is concerned. If it does not mean that what does it mean?"

To this the Citizen replies: "That is exactly what it does mean. The United States has practically declared itself the suzerain of the western hemisphere including Canada, and is prepared to enforce it. Canada is not particularly interested in Greenland or the Danish West Indies, but there is one point where the doctrine comes home to us. That is in connection with the French islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon. France might offer to sell these islands to-morrow but the United States would refuse to let any other power than itself purchase them. In that event it would own these islands right in the throat of the St. Lawrence, dominating our line of communication with Great Britain, and, incidentally, forming a valuable headquarters for the American fishing fleet on the banks of Newfoundland. We should not be surprised at any time to hear that the Americans were negotiating for these islands and under the Monroe doctrine as recognized by Great Britain Canada would be helpless to prevent it."

Examine Them.

The "Coffee-Never-Hurt-Me" People.

Some famous brain workers have made a welcome discovery along the line of recovery of health by the proper selection of food. Several were of the "Coffee-never-hurt-me" kind, but, as an experiment, tried leaving it off ten days, and the use of Postum Cereal Food Coffee in its place. A definite and decided improvement in health is practically certain to attend such a change.

Look carefully into the state of health of the individual who knows that "coffee don't hurt me" and you are almost sure to find some form of physical ail or functional disturbance—perhaps muddy complexion, or weak eyes, incipient heart failure, kidney trouble, liver or bowel disorders, or some form of weakness that shows plainly enough by the cry for relief sent up from some organ of the body.

Why does the dismissal of Coffee and the use of Postum bring help? Experiments in artificial digestion show clearly to the scientific investigator that coffee arrests digestion, and according to one authority allows only 61 per cent. of the food to be digested. That strikes at the very keystone to the arch of health. Failure in digestion means lack of good blood and therefore a lack of food for the nerve centers. As the nerves control the organs of the entire body, one can readily understand that a disorganized nervous system may show effect in any part of the body. Therefore, a removal of the cause will allow nature to right herself. A powerful assistant to nature is Postum Cereal Food Coffee, composed of the albumen, phosphates, gluten etc., from which nature builds in the delicate tissues of the nerves.

Postum aids digestion without drugging, and furnishes a concentrated liquid food as well as a most delicious morning Coffee.

If the reader has ever failed to make Postum satisfactorily, it will be found that to allow it to boil 15 minutes after boiling commences, will solve the problem, as it must be so boiled to extract taste, color and food value. Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., Battle Creek, Mich.

GRADED TOWNSHIP SCHOOLS

The proposal to consolidate the small sideline school houses into one well-equipped graded school for the whole township is being freely discussed throughout the province, and public opinion is generally favorable to the introduction of the system by way of experiment. Two Public School Inspectors write on the subject in the current number of the Farmers' Advocate. Mr. William Irwin, of Perth County, thinks Ontario could safely adopt a system that for 20 years has commended itself to the people of those districts in the United States where it has been in operation. The system, as we have previously explained, involves the transportation of the pupils to the school in vans, but the expense connected with the service is more than offset by the saving effected in other directions. The advantages claimed for the graded township school are many. Improved school buildings, with better equipment, heating, lighting, ventilation and sanitary arrangements, would be provided. It ensures the employment and retention of better teachers, and thus secures more permanency in the teaching profession. The pupils can be better classified and placed where they can work to the best advantage. It results in better attendance of pupils, and affords the broader companionship and culture that comes from association with large numbers. The children escape the bad effects of inclement weather and bad roads, and are under the supervision of responsible persons while on the roads, and thus the morals of the children are guarded.

It provides in the higher grades a High School course, and thus parents are saved the expense of sending their children to a High School, while at the same time they have their children at home under their own control, and the boys and girls remain in touch with the home life.

After the system has been instituted, the expense of management are no greater, as fewer teachers are necessary, only one building to look after, and not so many sets of equipment are needed. In the higher grades, special work, under competent teachers, can be taken up to meet the requirements of agricultural life, and thus create a greater interest in farm work among the boys.

Carefully Avoid Substitutes and Imitations

At the present time the Diamond Dyes are the only package dyes absolutely guaranteed by the manufacturers. The great popularity of the Diamond Dyes has brought forth many imitations and vile deceptions in the shape of home package dyes. These imitations, cheaply produced, are sold by some dealers for the sake of the extra profit they bring, and many are urged to buy them. If you would avoid trouble and disaster, refuse these adulterated dyes when they are offered to you, and insist upon getting the Diamond Dyes.

The manufacturers of Diamond Dyes will be pleased to send post free to any address their Diamond Dye Mat and Rug Designs. If you are a lover of pretty room ornaments, write to The Wells & Richardson Co., Limited, 200 Mountain street, Montreal, P.Q.

The United States is evidently laying itself to outshine Canada in its reception of royalty. The New York aldermen have put in a requisition for 200 tickets for the reception and will attend with their wives and families. The company which owns the dock where Prince Henry is to land is erecting a magnificent pavilion on it. The city is going to vote a handsome sum for the reception expenses, and even the citizens of Chinatown will give a banquet in honor of the illustrious [illegible]

ASSESSMENT LEGISLATION

A most important duty which devolves upon the Legislature at the present session, is the putting right, beyond all doubt or quibble, of that notorious section 28 of the Assessment Act, which has come to be known as the scrap iron law. The law-makers thought they had accomplished the end last year, but they discovered that Maxwell knew what he was talking about when in his standard work, "The Interpretation of the Statutes," he says, "language is rarely so free from ambiguity as to be incapable of being used in more than one sense." Perhaps the judges of the Court of Appeal will agree with the decision which has been given, but if they do, there must be new legislation, and that at the earliest moment.

Afterwards it will be necessary to deal with the numerous less important inequalities of the present Assessment Act, of which we will hear something one of these days, when the Commission hands out its final report. The scope of that commission was so wide and the injustices, real and imaginary, which were brought to its attention were so varied, that it will be strange if many of the issues raised by their recommendations do not give the Legislature a great deal of work. No law gets closer to the firesides of our Province than the Assessment Act, and a far-reaching revision of it—a revision introducing changes which should be applicable to conditions for many years—should be adopted only after consideration, the most careful, calm, and non-partisan which the members of the Legislature can bestow upon it.

It is a question if such consideration will be available during the present session. In the first place time will be limited, for a great many speeches must needs be delivered for subsequent service in pamphlet form, carefully franked to the back townships. And, besides, there is that prohibition problem from the Privy Council to be disposed of. While, in the public accounts every fifty cent item for a coal scuttle will have to be proved to make sure a scandal is not concealed. A pre-election fever is already in the air and will grow as the session progresses. A grave problem like the assessment question will be in danger of being slighted. By a year from now every taxpayer in the Province would have had an opportunity to acquaint himself with the provisions of the proposed legislation, and to discuss all the pros and cons of it as it would apply to himself and his neighbours. And it would be a fine subject for a brand new Legislature to tackle.

THE GREAT PROBLEM OF SOUTH AFRICA

Black Labor the Cause of Endless Worry to the Miner

THE DIFFICULTY IS NOW SOLVED

Lord Milner Said to Have Found a Way out of the Trouble—The Blacks are Necessary to the Miner

London, Feb. 12.—A blue book just issued in London gives details of the plans of Lord Milner, the British High Commissioner in South Africa, for dealing with the troublesome question of native labor. The blacks of South Africa outnumber the whites seven to one, and are practically the sole dependence for labor in the mines and for all kinds of rough outdoor work. One great trouble is that most of them do not care to work after they have earned money enough to buy a wife or two to till their garden patch and support them at home. Another difficulty is that their efficiency is half destroyed if they get hold of liquor. Lord Milner says that it will be a tremendous undertaking to solve the native labor problem, but by hook or crook the difficulties in the way must be overcome, for "the whole credit of the administration is at stake."

He proposes rigidly to control the liquor traffic among the blacks. The great trouble at Johannesburg before the war was that the Boer Government insisted on giving licenses to sell liquor to anyone who would pay the high price they demanded. The number of Kaffirs employed at the Johannesburg mines was about 100,000, and before the war the mine owners had no end of trouble in keeping their large gangs of workmen sober, the facilities for getting drunk in that region being unsurpassed.

Black labor is absolutely necessary at these mines, for white men cannot take the place of the Kaffirs. The blacks are willing to work for 50c. a day and board; white men would, of course, charge several times as much, and owing to the low grade of the ore, which is not worth over $10 a ton, the mines could not be worked at a profit were white labor employed.

Lord Milner does not say how he proposes to keep the liquor from the black miners; but perhaps the labor will be hedged around as it has been for years at the Kimberley diamond mines by a high fence, guarded as carefully as are the walls of Sing Sing Prison. After a negro has signed a contract to work in the diamond mines he is kept in the compound all the time that he is not at work in the mines. He is marched under guard from the compound to the mines and back again.

The British are very anxious to open the gold mines again and resume the industry that before the war was producing the larger part of the wealth of South Africa. It will probably take a long time to collect the 100,000 Kaffirs who will be needed to dig out the 7,000,000 tons of ore required a year if the output is to be worth as much as it was before the war.

A Veteran's Story.—George Lewis, of Shamokin, Pa., writes: "I am eighty years of age. I have been troubled with Catarrh for fifty years, and in my time have used a great many catarrh cures, but never had any relief until I used Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder. One box cured me completely." 50 cents.—25

It Makes Weak Women Strong.
"I suffered from female weakness for five months," writes Miss Belle Hedrick, of Nye, Putnam Co., W. Va. "I was treated by a good physician but he did me no good. I wrote to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., for advice, which I received, telling me to take his 'FAVORITE PRESCRIPTION.' When I had used the medicine a month my health was much improved. It has continued to improve until now I can work at almost all kinds of house-work. I had scarcely any appetite, but it is all right now. Have gained several pounds in weight. I would advise all who suffer from chronic diseases to write to Dr. Pierce."

When You Know How.

"I WILL be beautiful," she said, as she turned away from the mirror. "Surely in this modern, progressive age it is possible for any girl to acquire beauty."

So she invested in all kinds of cosmetics, had them applied by an artist, and went to a big ball. The next morning she scanned the society columns of the papers eagerly, but there was not a word about "the beautiful Miss Brown." She merely figured among those who were "also present."

"Still," she added, "it is possible to be beautiful when you know how, and I will experiment until I discover the secret."

Thereupon she employed a beauty doctor, and was rubbed and massaged every day for a month or more, but it was no use. The gossip departments of the papers spoke of this girl and that girl as "beautiful," but never of "the beautiful Miss Brown."

"Possibly," she thought, "something is the matter with my gowns. Much depends upon proper harmony or contrast, which often makes the beauty. I will have one designed especially for me by the most gifted of costumers."

The papers said she was "beautifully gowned," but that was all.

"I will become engaged," she cried, in despair. "If necessary, I will marry. Brides are almost invariably beautiful."

But when her engagement was announced the papers merely referred to her as "the charming and gifted Miss Brown."

"Alas!" she exclaimed, "can I not be beautiful? Is that great boon possessed by so many girls, no more favored by nature than I am, to be always denied to me? What is life to me, if I am thus handicapped? A mockery, truly! I will have none of it."

In this humor she went boating, and, giving it the appearance of an accident, deliberately fell into the water, from which she was quickly rescued by an athletic young man.

"Why," she cried, the next day, as she thought it all over, "was I not allowed to die?"

Then her glance fell upon a daily paper, and her eyes instantly brightened.

"Gallant rescue of a beautiful girl," she read. "Pretty Adele Brown, the beauty of the season, saved from a watery grave."

"Why, of course," she commented, thoughtfully. "It's very simple when you know how. Now I think of it, a rescue or a scandal will make a girl beautiful any day."—N.Y. "Town Topics."

Funny Answers.

An English teacher, commenting on the "wonderfully funny" answers given by his pupils to questions, cites the following specimens:

A boy, aged ten, thus answers a question as to the cause of the Transvaal disturbances: "Krugger and Kannerbulism is one. He is a man of blud. Mr. Chamberling has wrote to him sayin' come out and fite or else give up the blud of the English you have took. he is a boardutchman and a wickid heathin. lord Kitchener has sent for his geary blud and to bring back his scanderius bed ded or alive."

An essay on Gladstone, by a boy of eleven, states: "Mr. Gladstone loved everybody. he loved publicans and cinners and Irishmen. he wanted the irish to come to England and have home rool, but Mr. Chamberlin says, no, no. so alars he got his blud up and killd Mr. Parnel. Mr. Gladstone died with great rispect and is burried in Westminster with pieceful ashes."

A mother not spoken well of by her children is an enemy of the state; she should not live within the kingdom's pall.

—BUY—
NORTH AMERICAN OIL & REFINING COMPANY'S
Stock and It Will Make You Rich

The company owns 2,080 acres of land located in the Newhall-Acton White Oil Fields of Los Angeles County, California. Our manager, Mr. J. H. Parker, writes us under date of Jan. 15th that they have opened up two oil wells near our property, one being a gusher of white oil just as clear as alcohol, and of 52 degrees gravity. This oil is worth and is selling at $4.00 per barrel at the well, and producing better than 50 barrels per day. Our derrick is up and the machinery purchased; we expect to be drilling in a very short time. We now offer to the public 100,000 shares of this meritorious company's stock at the low price of 10 cents per share, and it is worth a great deal more money at the present time with the showing we have in the property. The demand for this oil is far greater than the supply, which is not so of the black oils of Lower California and Beaumont, Texas, that are a drug upon the market.
Regarding the officers of the company, they are all men of honor and means. There are no salaries paid to any of the officers, not even our General Manager, until our company is put on a paying basis.
INCORPORATION.
The company is capitalized for 1,500,000 shares, the incorporation having been effected under the laws of Wyoming, stock being all common stock, issued absolutely fully paid and forever non-assessable. The incorporation laws of Wyoming are peculiarly favorable to oil enterprises, and the par value of the stock has been fixed at One Cent per share in order to avoid the excessive revenue tax paid on stocks of a high par value.
LIABILITIES.
The company has no debts; all stock is fully paid and non-assessable, there are no stockholders' liabilities, and we have no royalties to pay for any purpose.
OUR LANDS.
The company's lands have been carefully selected by their engineer, Mr. J. H. Parker, who is also Vice President and General Manager, in conjunction with four of the best oil experts, who are well known throughout the state. These experts each unbeknown to the other went over our vast territory to locate a site to sink our first well; their reports are on file in the company's office, and we will be pleased to mail a copy of the same upon application, also maps of the oil fields with our property showing in the red. The directors call special attention to the maps, which have been drawn from actual surveys and personal inspection of the land and is accurate. The company's lands are distinctly shown as well as their relation to other oil lands and the location of oil wells, oil seepages and oil springs. A careful inspection of the map will aid prospective investors to judge of the oil under the company's lands.
The geological formation is perfect, the Anticlinal passing through the entire property, and being unbroken by granite formations.
GUARANTEE.
The officers and directors of the company have such great faith in the proposition that they will redeem all stock sold for cash, providing they do not strike oil as designated.
TREASURY STOCK.
The company holds in the treasury over 500,000 shares of treasury stock and some money. The proceeds of sale from the 100,000 shares now offered to the public will be used for the purpose of sinking wells.
REGISTRATION.
The stock is registered with the Colorado Title & Trust Company of Colorado Springs, Colorado, which guarantees any over-issue of stock.
The company would like to employ a few good Fiscal Agents to handle any part of this 100,000 shares of stock, giving them a very liberal commission. We take pleasure in recommending this stock to the good people of Peterborough and vicinity at the very low price of 10 cents per share; considering the condition of the property the stock is worth more money than what we are asking for it.

Not long ago a Western Kansas politician was asked by his wife to lay aside politics long enough one day to dig the potatoes in the garden. He consented, and, after digging for a few minutes, went into the house and said he had found a coin. He washed it off, and it proved to be a silver quarter. He put it in his jeans and went back to work. Presently he went to the house again and said he had found another coin. He washed the dirt off of it, and this time it was a silver half-dollar. He put it in his jeans. "I have worked pretty hard," said he to his wife; "I guess I'll take a short nap." When he awoke, he found that his wife had dug all the rest of the potatoes. But she found no coins. It then dawned upon her that she had been "worked."

At the Lotus Club dinner to Ambassador Choate, Senator Chauncey M. Depew told a story on Mr. Choate which caused the assemblage to roar with laughter. The occasion he referred to was a dinner given in New York some years ago to the Earl of Aberdeen, Governor-General of Canada, and head of the Clan Gordon. The earl attended in full regalia, "the wearing of which," said the senator, "consists in leaving off some articles of dress we deem quite essential." He continued: "At the dinner I sat on the earl's right. Choate was next me. Just after the earl seated himself, Choate whispered to me: 'Chauncey, are Aberdeen's legs really bare?' I raised the table-cloth cautiously, and gave that scratch that all Scotchmen appreciate, and said: 'Yes, Joe, they are.' When Choate got up to speak, he said: 'Gentlemen, my invitation did not convey to me the information that the Earl of Aberdeen was to be here to-night in full regalia. If I had known it I would have left my trousers at home.' Well, you never saw a madder crowd of Scotchmen. They thought it a reflection on the national costume of the earl, who had done the diners honor to appear in it. Well, four years have passed since then, and now the earl regards that as a joke, and tells it at least once a day, three hundred and sixty-five days in the year."

Smoking-Cars For Women.

SMOKING seems to be growing in favor among the fair sex, especially on the Continent. So apparent has this become of late that the railroad authorities of Belgium have been seriously considering the advisability of introducing cars in which only women shall be allowed to travel. What has particularly served to bring the matter before the officials' notice is an incident that happened a few weeks since, when a young woman entered one of the carriages on the Southern Railroad reserved for ladies, and in a few minutes after the train had started from Brussels lit a cigarette and began to smoke it. Whereupon the other women in the compartment became very indignant, threatening to complain to the guard as soon as the train stopped. "I am in a carriage reserved for ladies," observed the smoker, blandly, "and I am not aware of any law which prohibits ladies from smoking." When the train stopped, the guard was informed of the proceedings, but was loath to interfere, and the result was that when the woman smoker arrived at her destination, she consulted a lawyer, who has now by an action in court raised the interesting question: Should railroad companies be compelled to provide separate smoking cars for women who wish to smoke while they are traveling? Some of the companies, however, appear to have taken time by the forelock, for it is understood that arrangements have already been made on some of the Belgian railroads to provide smoking compartments exclusively for women addicted to the use of tobacco.

Curious Bit of News.

Dr. G. L. Johnson, whose studies of the eyes of mammals have recently been published, calls attention to the fact that men and monkeys alone possess parallel and convergent vision of the two eyes. On the other hand, the lower mammals possess divergent and consequently very widely extended vision. Squirrels, for instance, and probably hares and rabbits as well, are able to see an enemy approaching directly from behind without turning the head.

Scotland has 6,500 university students. England, with six times the population, has 6,000.

It is now 121 years since Diomed won the first Derby, but when we come to look at the newspaper reports of the time we find that the race was dismissed in two or three lines, and any further details had to be gathered as best they could.

The highest telegraph poles in the United States have just been erected in Beaumont, Tex. So far as known they are the highest in the world, their tops being 150 feet from the ground. They carry a Western Union cable across the Neches River—a span 144 feet in length.

The pheasant, everybody knows, is a non-aquatic bird; therefore Professor Lloyd Morgan's observation that newly hatched birds of the age of thirty hours swim easily, show apt leg movements and exhibit few signs of distress, is of singular interest. Is this swimming habit a throw back or reversion to an antecedent state in the history of this land-living species, or is it to be regarded as an example of a direct and sudden adaptation to a new environment? Doubtless Professor Lloyd Morgan will debate this question at length. It certainly has an important bearing on certain obvious biological problems.

A discovery of great interest to antiquaries was made recently by workmen engaged in excavating one of the two reservoirs now being constructed for the East London Waterworks Company along the course of the Lea. On a bed of sandy silts in the "Lockwood" Reservoir, a "dug-out" boat or canoe was brought to light. In the north-eastern corner of the reservoir also, were found, five feet below the surface and between twenty and thirty feet to the west of the original bed of the river, the remains of a supposed Viking ship, clinker-built of oak, about fifty feet in length. The planks are fastened with iron nails.

It has been found that certain prawns, common along the coasts of England, change their color at least twice every 24 hours in order to harmonise with the stronger or weaker light prevailing near the surface or in the deeper water. As evening approaches these fish lose their distinctive day colors, and all assume a transparent azure hue. The change begins with a reddish glow, followed by a green tinge which gradually melts into blue. The day and night change has become so habitual that specimens kept in perpetual light or perpetual darkness nevertheless undergo the periodic alteration of color.

The British and Foreign Tract Society have translated Bunyan's "Pilgrim Progress" into no less than ninety-five different languages and dialects. Some of these, as might have been anticipated, are of a jaw-breaking character. So much so, indeed, have the compositors of the Oxford University Press found the Esquimau language to be that they have demanded a higher rate of payment in regard to it. The following samples of this beautiful tongue show that their action is reasonable: "Kujalidiarpogut svanetsungnarlanrapta." "Rauvengitigarmaritsainarangnar.gigallearuptaloe.—t. Kujalijatiksaksakatsainaralloarpoguelle."

A traveller for a diamond house was talking shop the other evening, and, speaking of gems, said: "The most overworked expression used by the unsophisticated and deeply impressed diamond purchaser is, 'It actually looks as if it glows of itself.' Now, it is not generally known that such is actually the case, although not, of course, in the way the public intends. The beauty of the gem in light is, of course, in its remarkable refractive power, but under certain conditions the diamond has more, for it may gleam even in the night with a pale but extremely beautiful light. In short, it becomes phosphorescent. Heated to a certain temperature the internal fire shows itself, and under pressure the same is true. Some years ago I went to Amsterdam to purchase some special stones for a California millionaire who had ordered them through our New York house, and while there I was shown the inside workings of the famous diamond cutting establishments of that city. Of all that I saw, however, the 'self flame' of the stones under pressure most surprised me. The manager placed a large rose cut gem between the jaws of a vise and carefully applied a certain amount of pressure. He then extinguished all the light in the shop, and as soon as my eyes had become accustomed to the darkness I saw the diamond emitting a soft radiance of its own like a very pale glow-worm. As I remember it, he said that the yellower diamonds were slightly more phosphorescent than the first water stones. By the way, you would be really astonished to know the number of jewels which also possess 'self flame' to a more or less extent, and I have often wondered if the alchemists who performed such apparently well authenticated wonders in the Middle Ages did not know something of phosphorescence and its addition."

Anecdotal.

A certain wealthy benefactor of Harvard humorously complained of President Eliot's treatment. "He comes to me," he said, "for my money and my advice; and, like the women in the Scripture, the one is taken and the other left."

Nothing verbal could be much more delicious than Joseph H. Choate's definition of the dinners of the New England Society of New York as "Those gatherings of an unhappy company of pilgrims who meet annually at Delmonico's to drown the sorrows and sufferings of their ancestors in the flowing bowl, and to contemplate their own virtues in the mirror of history."

"That was an excellent discourse you delivered last Sunday," remarked a veteran minister of the gospel to a rising young preacher, "but I would hardly call it a sermon." "Why not, doctor?" demanded the other. "Because you had no text." "Don't you call such a discourse a sermon unless it has a text?" "Certainly not." "You have read the Sermon on the Mount, have you not?" "Many, many times." "Well, it has no text." "On the contrary, my dear young friend," said the veteran, "it is composed entirely of texts."

The speech in the House of Lords of the Bishop of Hereford on the subject of gambling recalls a story told of Bishop Potter, of New York. The bishop, traveling through Louisiana some years ago, addressed inquiries to his fellow-passengers with a view to obtaining information regarding the orchards and fruit interests of the State. "Do you raise pears in Louisiana?" inquired the bishop. "We do," replied the Louisianian, who was a better authority on poker than on horticulture, "if we have threes or better."

A woman, who is of high social distinction in America, was presented to the Kaiser at some dinner that was not attended with royal state. She was talking to him when she was offered a famous German salad. It was handed on her right and the Kaiser was on her left, which put her in a predicament. She did not dare turn her face from the emperor to help herself to the salad. The situation was too much for her. The emperor, seeing the condition at a glance, looked at her for an instant and laughed, as he said: "A Kaiser can wait, but a salad can not."

George Moore, the author and dramatist, once had a play accepted at the Odeon in Paris. At the same time an adaptation of "Othello" was being rehearsed there. One day Mr. Moore called to see the manager of the Odeon. The door-keeper did not know him, and asked for his name and business. "I am the English author whose play has been accepted here," said Mr. Moore; "I wish to see the manager." The door-keeper went into the manager's room and said: "There's an English gentleman at the door who says that you have just accepted his play, and wants to see you." "Quite right," said the manager; "show him in. M. Shakespeare, without doubt."

It is said that once, when the late Dr. Tanner, the Irish M.P., had asked in the House whether it was true that the Duke of Cambridge had resigned his position as commander-in-chief, a Major Jones of Penzance, was so outraged that he challenged Dr. Tanner to a duel, and the following telegraphic correspondence took place: "In reply to your despicable question about the Duke of Cambridge, I designate you a coward. Delighted to give you satisfaction across the water. Pistols." To which Dr. Tanner at once replied: "Wire received. Will meet you to-morrow in Constantinople, under the Tower of Galata, midnight. Being challenged, prefer torpedoes. Bring another ass.—Tanner."

A conjurer was performing before a rough-and-ready audience in one of the prohibition States of America (according to an English paper). "I am now about to undertake a feat," said he, "in which I shall need the use of a pint flask of whiskey." There was a dead silence. "Will some gentleman in the audience favor me with a pint of whiskey?" There was no response and the conjurer began to look blank. "Surely," he continued, "in a South-Eastern prohibition town I ought not to have to ask a second time for such a thing. I give my word I will return it intact. Is there no——" "Stranger," said a tall, gaunt man, as he rose slowly from a front seat, "wouldn't a quart flask do as well?" "Why, certainly! I merely——" But before he could finish, the generous, open-handed audience had risen like one man, and were on their way to the platform in a body.

The Refinement of Irony.

Magistrate: "What is your name, prisoner?"

Prisoner: "John De-Jones."

Magistrate: "John D. Jones? H'm! What does the D stand for?"

Prisoner: "I beg your worship's pardon. I would have you to know I am not of the common Joneses. I come of very refined antecedents, and our family name is De-Jones—spelled with a D-e and a hyphen."

Magistrate: "I see. Have you ever been here before?"

Prisoner: "Yes, once. I was fined forty shillings through a mistake on the part of the police."

Magistrate: "Just so. Well, taking into account your antecedents, and seeing that you come of a refined family, you may now consider yourself re-fined—spelling with an r-e and a hyphen."—"Pick-me-up."

A Clerical Wit.

After a church conference held a few days ago, two brother ministers had a friendly tilt, regarding the meaning of a certain passage in one of Shakespeare's plays. They could not come to an understanding, and one of them remarked jokingly: "Oh, well, brother, I will ask Shakespeare when I meet him in heaven!" "But supposing Shakespeare did not get to heaven?" retorted the other. "Then you can ask him about it," was the quick reply.

A recently published story of the late Lord Morris, Chief Justice of Ireland, illustrates his scorn of red tape and petty details. A question had arisen as to the cost of heating the Irish law courts, and a consequential treasury official was sent over from London to Dublin on purpose to investigate the matter. When he introduced himself and explained his errand, Lord Morris smiled with suspicious blandness and said: "Certainly, I will put you in communication with the person immediately in charge of that department." Then he sent out a messenger, and presently there entered an old charwoman. Lord Morris arose and left the room, saying as he did so: "Mary, here is the young man to [illegible]"

The Snakes' Paradise.

The Borongo Islands lie about halfway between Calcutta and Rangoon. When the snakes die they go to the Borongos. That is their paradise; there they hold high carnival. I spent three years among them, and know of these things. From the giant python down to the deadly karait they are all there, all the ophidians. Even the salt water snakes, that are all poisonous—they, too, are there. Two Europeans had preceded me on the Borongos, so there was considerable natural history on tap when I arrived, and we rapidly acquired more. One can't live among snakes without studying them; they insist upon it. . . .

Each evening I killed an hour or so of the monotony by walking up and down the path in front of the bungalow. A big cat was my usual companion. His method of introducing himself to my notice was generally abrupt. He would lie in wait, and, as I came along, spring out upon me, alighting against one of my legs. At other times he would lie on his back in the path and claw at my feet as I passed. One evening, just after turning into the path from the bungalow, I felt something soft and yielding against my foot. Thinking it was "Billy," I gave the mass a gentle push. As I shifted the something I saw a twisting gleam of white, not at all like the soft gray of Billy's fur. Of course I knew what that meant. Jumping back I brought my walking-stick down on the twisting thing, and yelled for a light. The servants came running from the cookhouse with a lantern, and I saw that I had laid out a most villainous daboia. One touch from the catlike fangs on my cotton-hosed instep, and within an hour I would have been dead.

One of our party had occasion to visit a Mr. Savage, a half-caste landowner on the other side of the island. He went in a boat, and while the coolies were bringing up his traps went up to the bungalow. He was sitting in a big chair on the veranda, talking to Savage, when he felt something drop from the leaf roof on to his shoulder. Leisurely he started to rise to see what had fallen, when the other man cried out: "For God's sake don't move—keep perfectly still!" Dunlop knew what that meant. Stealthily the old man took a Burmese dah (sword) from the wall, and, catlike, crept toward the white man with the thing on his shoulder. Within striking distance he paused, and raised the dah high in the air to cut the thing in two with one swift downward stroke. Then his nerve, rattled and tugged at for sixty years until it was weak, failed him, and the sword clattered from his numbed fingers to the floor. "My God! I can't do it," he whined in a broken voice, and reeled back against the wall, where he stood staring with weak eyes at the sahib and his burden.

Dunlop neither moved nor spoke; his only safety lay in keeping perfectly still—motionless. It might be minutes, or a thousand years; they would have to wait till the boatmen came. What would happen then he could not say. He could feel the clinging, pulling thing on his right shoulder. There was an undulating pressure that told him the head of the snake was swaying back and forth just above his neck. Then the song of the Madrassi boatmen as they came swinging along with his luggage broke upon his ear. Those gin-thickened voices, carolling the coarse refrain to the time of the measured trot, were angel voices. What would the muddle-brained coolies do, he wondered. If Emir Ally, his trusted servant, saw the thing, it might be well; he had nerve and judgment even close to that of a sahib. Emir Ally was in the lead. When he came to the steps Savage jerked out an expression that called his attention to the tableau. Gathering his loongy tight about his loins, he slipped along the veranda like a shadow, grasped the fallen dah, and, poising his black lithe body for a swift, strong stroke, brought the sword through the air with a swishing cut that laid a full-grown cobra in two neat pieces almost at the feet of the man who had waited.—W. A. Fraser

Stories of the Bar.

An able Southern lawyer, still living, has a good story about his examination by Reverdy Johnson, one of the greatest lawyers of the last century, says the Philadelphia "Times." Mr. Johnson knew the young man, but, apparently, he did not allow his familiarity to influence the case. He asked him one or two questions as easy as the alphabet or the multiplication table, and then very severely demanded:

"Young man, can you mix a good brandy julep?"

"I think I can, sir," was the reply.

"There," pointing to the sideboard, "are the ingredients, sir. Now, let me see what you can do."

The candidate approached and used his finest touch and sense of selection in compounding the tonic. Then, topping it off artistically with a fresh mint, he presented it to his examiner. Mr. Johnson gave the case his best care and patience, and finally, when the bottom of the generous glass had been reached, he looked at the young man admiringly and announced that he had passed.

Another story is told of a judicial district in Florida where, before the era of railroads and owing to the numerous creeks and rivers, there had to be frequent fording of streams in order to make good time between the country towns. The candidate presented himself before the judge, who, after looking at the young man a few moments and taking in his measure, asked:

"Can you ride?"

"Yes, sir."

"Do you own a horse?"

"Yes, sir."

"Can he swim?"

"Yes, sir."

Whereupon the judge bowed gravely and remarked:

"I am very glad, sir, to welcome you to the practice of law in my district."

Heraldry of the Indians.

PEOPLE in general have been content to look upon the Indian's adornment of his head with eagle feathers and his face with paint as marks of personal decoration inspired by vanity and a savage taste, different only in degree from what is sometimes witnessed among highly-civilized peoples. But the fact is that, in preference to the latter custom, for instance, every paint mark on an Indian's face has a sort of heraldic meaning, implying not only the honors won by the brave in person, but representing also the claims of his family and race to distinction. In other words, what is shown among more cultured communities by coats of arms, orders and decorations is depicted by the Indian on his face by means of pigments.

Scientists are now engaged, among other novel investigations concerning the North American Indian, in compiling a record of the armorial, or rather facial, bearings of certain celebrated chiefs, and it is said to be fascinating work. One renowned warrior, for instance, will have his lip painted a copper red. This is found to indicate that his tribe was once in possession of huge mines of copper. Another individual will have his forehead adorned with a painting of a certain fish, thus implying that he or his people are renowned for prowess in catching fish. The same distinguished person sometimes wears a disk of pearl in addition to his paint mask. This, by its shimmering radiance and its form, implies that he is descended from the moon, in the sense that the goddess of night is one of his ancestors.

The fact that the Indian has no conception of perspective seriously handicaps the success of his efforts at pictorial art. Indeed, the Indian limner merely aims to show the most characteristic portion of the object he attempts to depict, unless he be a man of great attainment, in which case he divides or dissects the subject of his picture and represents the whole by its parts, the latter being arranged entirely irrespective of the natural sequence.

The features of the Indian are sometimes incorporated into the representation of the animal which forms his heraldic bearing. Should the beaver, for example, be the object to be depicted, it is not attempted to design the whole form of the animal, but only its distinctive and typical parts, as for instance, its peculiar tail, which is painted in criss-cross lines extending from the chin to the nose, as though standing upright. The chin itself does service as the beaver's body.

The arbitrary methods of the Indian artist render it difficult, if not impossible, for any but an expert to interpret the meanings of the pictorial representations. Thus an animal's ears are invariably depicted above the eyes on the human subject, the ears of the beaver being just above the eyebrows. On the cheeks are painted the paws in a position as though they were raised to the mouth in the manner conventional in Indian carvings.

The dogfish painted in red on the face designates the members of an entire tribe. On the foreheads of the members of this tribe is painted the long, thin snout; the gills are represented by two curved lines below the eyes, while the tail is shown as cut in two and hanging from each nostril. Only one or two parts of an animal painted on an Indian's face indicates that he is of inferior position; the entire symbol, no matter in what form presented, is significant of lofty station and high honors.

The facial heraldry of the Indian may be said to be unique, not alone in the method of representation employed, but in the subjects selected. These latter include fish, flesh and fowl of all descriptions—dog salmon, devilfish, starfish, woodpeckers, ravens, eagles, bears, wolves, frogs, are comprised in the armorial gallery.

Every object represented has its own particular significance, and one of the most peculiar phases of face painting relates to the employment of forms other than animal—tools, implements of the chase or of war, denoting the occupation of the individual or his tribe.—Washington "Times."

A Lawyer's Wit.

The New York "Commercial Advertiser" says that not long before his death, Henry W. Paine, one of the most brilliant American lawyers of his generation, became interested, as a matter of charity, in a case in which a lad of some fifteen years was charged with arson. Paine defended the boy and offered conclusive evidence that he was, to all practical purposes, an idiot and totally irresponsible. Nevertheless, the jury, after listening to a charge from the court, which was virtually an order for acquittal, brought in a verdict of guilty.

The presiding judge then addressed Paine.

"You will move for a new trial, I presume, Mr. Paine?"

Paine rose with an air that was painful in its solemnity.

"I thank your honor for your suggestion," he said, "but I am oppressed with the gravest doubts as to whether I have the right to move for a new trial in this case. Your honor, I have already asked for and have received for my idiot client the most precious heritage of our English and American common law—a trial by a jury of his peers."

The judge then ordered the verdict to be set aside.

An Unfortunate Inquiry.

A New York man, who has written a book, was telling about it the other day to a friend who had once done him a service. "By the way," said the author, "I would be delighted to give you a copy of my work if you care for it." "I should be more than pleased to have it," was the reply; "especially if you will write your name in it." "All right. There is a bookstore around the corner. If you will accompany me we will go get it." In the bookstore the author, pushing his chest out very far, asked for the novel that he had written. "Yes, sir," the clerk said. "We have it around here somewhere, I believe, but you are the first one who has ever asked for a copy, and it may take me some time to find it. Wouldn't something else do just as well? We have a great many better books at the same price."

Repeated "foozles" left his ball badly "cupped" on the brink of a bunker. He turned to his caddie in despair. Said he: "I've tried my brassie, and my cleek, and my mashie, and none of them will lift out that ball. What should you say I should take now?" Permanent Cures of Cancer

We here give a few cases, where the efficacy of our constitutional treatment in curing Cancer is established beyond all question. We have plenty on fyle.

There is ample proof that where our remedy cures, it cures to stay and saves people from the torture of knife and plaster.

CANCER OF THE BREAST—A lady had Cancer of the Breast, which rendered her right shoulder and arm almost helpless. Our remedy cured her over five years ago, and there is not the slightest return of the trouble.

CANCER OF THE FACE—This case of a gentleman who was so bad that his right cheek was almost eaten off with the disease. Plasters aggravated his trouble. Our treatment cured him five years ago and he has been all right since.

CANCER OF THE STOMACH—Doctors pronounced the trouble cancer of the stomach. There was vomiting of material that looked like coffee grounds. Great weakness and prostration. Cured over four years ago and well to-day.

CANCER OF THE NOSE—A severe case which was cured by our remedy in 1891 and has never returned to this day.

Full accounts of the above cases, together with the names and addresses of the persons, are given in our new book, "Cancer, its cause and Cure," sent to anyone, in plain wrapper, on receipt of two stamps. Stott & Jury, Bowmanville, Ont.

How a Sprain Does Hurt

But it isn't the pain alone that is dreaded, just think of the loss of time and wages. Sprains without number are cured by rubbing Polson's Nerviline well into the pores of the skin surrounding the joint. No matter whether it is a sprained wrist, ankle, knee or back, just try Nerviline on it, and see how quickly it will cure. There is only one liniment that can be depended upon to cure sprains, strains and swellings, and that is Polson's Nerviline. Large bottle 25 cents.

A Fake Game

"I don't think I ever enjoyed a poker game as much in my life as I did a fake game of my own getting up a good many years ago," said a Lindsay man to a Times reporter the other day. "I was quite a youngster at the time, and was the treasurer of my class. I had a fund of about $150 for the purchase of class pins, and one afternoon, while I had this money in possession, three or four of my classmates dropped in. I had a country cousin visiting me at the time, a young fellow of about my own age, and I did everything in my power to dazzle him. Well, we started a poker game, having surreptitiously divided the $150 between us. My cousin didn't play but he sat and watched us. I don't think I shall ever forget his look of amazement as we played that game. The money was all in bills, and we bet the cash instead of chips, throwing $5 and $10 bills around as though they were so many cents. It was a freeze-out game, and eventually I had all the money back again. During the rest of his visit my country cousin regarded me with increased awe, and I don't believe he ever learned that our big poker game was all for effect."

A Pretty Home Marriage

The residence of Mrs. Moffatt, 263 Hunter street, was the scene of a very pretty home marriage on the afternoon of the 12th inst. The principals were Mr. Albert Atchison, of Cavan Township, and Miss Hattie Margaret Staples, sister of Mrs. Moffatt. The bride was supported by her youngest sister, Miss Effie Staples, of Apsley, and the bridegroom by his brother, Mr. W. J. Atchison. The bride and bridesmaid were uniformly dressed in brown serge, trimmed with blue silk and white lace, and each bore a rich boquet.

The marriage was witnessed by a small company of near relatives and acquaintances of the families, whose handsome presents bore ample testimony to their esteem and good wishes.

The Rev'd. R. MacKnight, B.A., of the Boys' School, was the officiating clergyman. Mr. and Mrs. Atchison took the afternoon C. P. R. train for their home in Cavan.

MANDARIN OF THE

Precious Ruby Clasp

An illustrious Chinese Mandarin was put on the famous American food, Grape-Nuts, and he and his wife cured of stomach and kidney trouble and heart disorder after he, in particular, had been pronounced by his physician incurable.

His letter is written by his interpreter and signed with his Chinese signature. It recites, "For three years I was under the care of the best physicians in Russia, Germany, France, America, as well as my own country. I had tried baths and water cures almost without number. I grew worse until finally my physician pronounced me and I was doomed to die in from three to six months.

A friend prevailed upon me to change my food and take up Grape-Nuts. This I did more to gratify my friend than from any benefit I expected, but within twenty-four hours the results were so gratifying as to astonish and delight myself and family.

My improvement continued without relapse until at the end of three months I was well and sound, weighed more and was stronger and had a better appetite and more perfect digestion than at any other time in my life.

My wife was also a victim of serious stomach trouble from which she had suffered for several years. She has been restored to good, robust health by the use of Grape-Nuts.

I have recommended it in about half a dozen families and it has never failed to benefit. I will be pleased to reply to all letters having stamped envelope enclosed." Pak Gaw Mun, Mandarin of the Ruby Button, Member of the Literati, Magistrate of the Order of the Manchurian Crane, Order of the Girdle of the Jade and Precious Ruby Clasp, Servant to His Imperial Majesty the Son of Heaven, etc., etc.

His interpreter and secretary, E. Percivale Baker, adds to the letter, "I am familiar with all the facts related by Prof. Pak and know them to have been moderately stated. I also, and my family, have received much benefit from the use of Grape-Nuts."

PETERBOROUGH WINS FROM KINGSTON R. M. C.

BY A SCORE OF 13-1—PLAY IN KINGSTON TO-MORROW NIGHT

Peterborough Boys Play Faster Hockey and Are Better Stick Handlers—A Large Attendance

The Peterborough Intermediates defeated the Military College Cadets at the Charlotte street rink last night by a score of 13 goals to 1.

The match started at 8.35, and after a few minutes fast play the Peterborough's scored their first goal. A short time after the Cadets scored their first, and what proved to be their last goal. During the first half of the game the Cadets were very aggressive, making a number of rushes into the Peterborough's territory, but they were ineffectual, as they failed to score. At half time the score stood 5-1 in favor of Peterborough.

The teams lined up as follows.

Peterborough		Kingston
Wasson	GOAL	Dyell
Glover	POINT	Harris
Armstrong	COVER	Ramsay
Graham	FORWARDS	Trotter
Armstrong		Witherloe
Morgan		Biggs
Whitcroft		Dunlop

Referee—Mr. Schooley.

The Cadets are a good looking lot of men and are much heavier than the Peterborough aggregation; they are also very good skaters, and stick handlers, but not as fast as the local team. The game was fairly clean, very little rough play being indulged in by either team. The rink was crowded, there being fully 2,000 people present to witness the match.

The referee was very fair in his decisions, and would not allow any rough play to pass unnoticed. On a few occasions the fence was ornamented with a player.

The return match will be played in Kingston to-morrow night, when we hope the Intermediates will again win from the Cadets.

Malt Breakfast Food

Carries Health, Strength and Vigor From Ocean to Ocean

The people of the Maritime Provinces, Quebec, Ontario, Manitoba, Northwest Territories and British Columbia are now enjoying the blessings that flow from the use of Malt Breakfast Food. Users of oatmeal and other grain foods have given up these starchy and indigestible products and have made Malt Breakfast Food their favorite breakfast dish. A well-known citizen of Victoria, B. C., writes as follows:

"Your Malt Breakfast Food before it was sold by grocers here was strongly recommended to me by a relative in Ontario, who was using it every morning with great satisfaction. My wife introduced Malt Breakfast Food some two months ago. It has been of special value to my eldest daughter, whose appetite was becoming uncertain and weak. Malt Breakfast Food has strengthened her digestion and improved her health wonderfully. We have all benefited from use of Malt Breakfast Food, and would not think of giving it up. It is the best and most delightful of all breakfast foods." All live grocers.

WEDDING BELLS

Nuptials of Miss Agnes Elizabeth Speir, of Allandale, and Mr. Walter Dredge, Town

One of those happy events, the crowning episode of a lifetime, which calls for the warmest congratulations of a host of friends, took place yesterday afternoon at four o'clock, at the residence of Mr. Robert Speir, Allandale, when his daughter, Miss Agnes Elizabeth, was united in marriage to Mr. Walter Dredge, of town. The interesting and pleasing ceremony was performed by Rev. J. P. Wilson, of the George Street Methodist church in the presence of a large number of invited guests. The bride was prettily costumed, and carried a large boquet of flowers. She was attended by Miss Dredge, sister of the groom, who also carried a beautiful boquet. Mr. Alex. Speir, brother of the bride, performed the duties of best man.

After the ceremony the party sat down to a sumptuous wedding dinner, at the conclusion of which they received the congratulations of their friends. A large number of beautiful and costly presents were received by the bride, which showed the high esteem in which she is held by a host of friends.

The newly married couple will make their future home in Peterborough, where they will be followed by the best wishes of their many friends. The Times most heartily extends its warmest congratulations and hearty good wishes for a long and happy married life.

Getting over a Spree

"All heavy drinkers," said a hotel man to the Times the other day, "have their own pet theories about how to overcome the after-effects of too much 'booze water.' Some of them are very absurd, and to hear these fellows argue in support of their antidotes you would think that nothing could be more important. I heard a new one to-day. The man who was talking about it was three sheets in the wind, and was very emphatic. 'If I feel that I've had too much, and am going to have a head on me the next morning,' he said, 'I always take a cabbage, cut the heart out of it and eat it before I go to bed. My father and my grandfather before me used to do this. It is a family tradition, and it is infallible.' The others only laughed at him, and that made him mad," continued the bartender. "Still, it's as sensible as most of the alleged cures. These fellows may talk as they please, but I have noticed that when they are feeling real rocky they all want the same cure, and that is a hair from the tail of the dog that bit them."

THE CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY'S NEW ISSUE OF PREFERRED STOCK

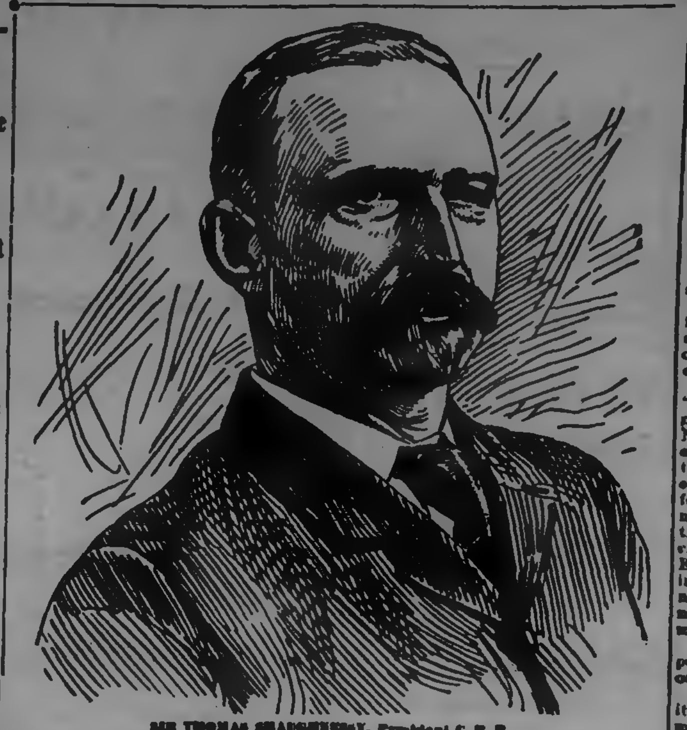
Wonderful Development of Canada's Great Railway

Twenty Millions of Dollars to be Spent in Erecting Repair Shops, etc.

Allotment to be Made to Present Shareholders in Ratio of 30 Per Cent of Their Respective Holdings

Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, the President, Addresses a Circular to the Shareholders

The Great Railway Likely to Build Into the Heart of New Ontario



SIR THOMAS SHAUGHNESSY, President C. P. R.

Montreal, Feb. 14—The wonderful development of the Canadian Pacific Railway, as shown by the demand for an enormous sum of money to increase the rolling stock and perfect the roadbed, cannot but be gratifying to the people of Canada. Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, the President, has issued the following circular letter, addressed to the shareholders, which tells its own story:

To the Shareholders,—The extraordinary expansion of the company's business during the last six or seven years, and the apparent certainty that the volume will continue to increase year by year, renders it essential that the company should, with the least possible delay, provide such admirable rolling stock and other facilities as may be required for the prompt and efficient handling of its traffic. The gradients and alignments on the busy sections of the system should be substantially improved, so that the large and increasing tonnage may be moved with the economy requisite for the best results.

In view of the present and prospective net earnings of the company, the directors feel justified in proposing that the money required for these purposes be secured by an issue of ordinary capital shares rather than by other means, and therefore, they recommend that the ordinary share capital be increased by the amount of nineteen millions five hundred thousand dollars. The directors consider that it is due to the shareholders of the common stock that they should be given the privilege of subscribing for the new stock at par, in the proportion of 30 per cent. of their respective holdings of the outstanding common shares, on the closing of the books in London, Tuesday, Feb. 18th, and in New York and Montreal, Monday, March 3rd, 1902, and a resolution to that effect will be submitted to the shareholders for their approval. It is intended that the money thus raised shall be expended for the following purposes: Locomotives, cars, and other requirements, ten million dollars; enlargement of construction and repair shops at Montreal and other points on the system, two million dollars; reduction of grades, improvement of alignment and second track where required, six million five hundred thousand dollars; grain elevators, terminals, business and passing sidings and other necessary improvements such as are being provided from month to month to meet the requirements of the company's business, four million dollars. These estimates overrun the amount of the contemplated issue of stock at par, and, therefore, to make up the balance, and in order that the company's property may be benefited to as full an extent as if the shares had been sold at a premium on the open market, it is proposed that an amount equivalent to about fifteen per cent of the surplus earnings, three million dollars be appropriated from the surplus earnings fund, to be expended for the purpose above-mentioned, in addition to the proceeds of the sale of capital stock. After appropriating this amount and providing for payment of the dividends, just declared on the preference and common shares, there will be eight millions six hundred thousand dollars in the surplus earnings fund.

The subscription price of the new stock will be payable at the Bank of Montreal, London, New York, and Montreal, as follows:

Twenty per cent., or $20 per share on subscription.

Twenty per cent., or $20 per share June 27th, 1902.

Twenty per cent., or $20 per share August 27th, 1902.

Twenty per cent., or $20 per share October 27th, 1902.

Twenty per cent., or $20 per share December 27th, 1902. No interest or dividend will be allowed on the payments made previous to July 1st, or on advance payments, but all shares fully paid as above stated, will rank for dividend with existing shares for the half year ending December 31st, 1902.

No fractional shares will be issued, but rights may be assigned, and for this purpose a blank form will be provided. Holders having rights for fractions of shares should make such adjustment of their holding, by purchase or sale with other shareholders, direct or through brokers, as will make whole shares.

THE GREAT RAILWAY'S ENTERPRISE

The Canadian Pacific Railway Company, through Mr. William Whyte, one of its officers, is laying before the Ontario Government a plan for the development of New Ontario. As the C. P. R. has a road stretching from end to end of the district, it is bound to gain from the production of wealth north of the lakes, and if it should decide to run a branch line out to James Bay, Premier Ross would doubtless give his consent. From present indications, New Ontario will not lack railway competition.

PROHIBITION AND THE REFERENDUM

All eyes are centered upon the Government's determination to submit the question of prohibition to the people in October next. It will be required that the vote shall be equal to one half of the total vote cast for the candidates at the next provincial election in June, and enough more to make it a bare majority of the whole. If it had been the sole idea of the Government to use the Prohibition question as a means of making the liquor men work tooth and claw at the next election in June to return it to power, they could not have done better. It is a little too transparent, however, as a mere device. We shall see every effort put forward by the anti-prohibitionists in June to make the vote so big that in October it will be exceedingly unlikely that the Prohibitionists will get their required quota exceeding one-half. The spectacle will be presented of prohibitionists hesitating to poll their votes in June for fear of putting a nail in their own coffin in October. If, for example, on ordinary occasions the total vote of the Province at a general election is 400,000, then 200,001 would be sufficient for the Prohibitionists to get in October to win, but is it at all likely that October will witness efforts to sustain the Prohibition platform equal to the efforts of June next to make it an impossible task? It is an adroit but rather unprincipled move. That it will please the Prohibitionists is improbable. We may look forward to trouble in June, when the real battle will be fought, for if we are not mistaken Prohibitionists will see to it that a government shall not be sustained which has used its opportunities to enable the liquor men to aid them in such a striking and effective manner.

RESIGNED HIS CHARGE

Rev. Mr. McAmmond of Perth, Could Not Stand the Gossip

Perth, Feb. 12.—The citizens of this town and surrounding country were greatly surprised when it became known that Rev. Foster McAmmond, pastor of the Asbury Methodist church, had resigned his position and will leave the ministry. The cause of his action was the gossip about an unfortunate affair which occurred in Syracuse some months ago. Mr. McAmmond was very popular with the members of his own congregation and with other denominations. On Sunday evening he will preach his last sermon.

A BRITISH FAKIR IS WM. T. STEAD

The Pro-Boer Agitator in England Properly Described

A MAN OF LITTLE PRINCIPLE

Has Worked the Pro-Boer Agitation in England for All it is Worth—A Campaign for Lies and Slander

Ottawa, Feb. 13—The clever editor of the Citizen thus describes W. T. Stead:

W. T. Stead is a shining example of misapplied ability. That he has ability his most scornful critics will admit, but he makes a practice of applying himself to the exploitation of fads with apparently no other object than to keep his personality in the public eye. He is the sort of man who must keep the calcium of notoriety trained on his unattractive self or he would be immediately relegated to oblivion.

Having worked the pro-Boer agitation in England for all it is worth, and finding that his most gullible dupes are commencing to get weary of the nauseating slanders with which he and a clique of his kind have fed their credulity and profited by the wave of sickly sentiment which the misrepresentations created, Mr. Stead has come to the conclusion that he must find a fresh fad for the exercise of his peculiar powers. Taking as his base the panicky feeling with which a class of jumpy people in Great Britain profess to be afflicted over the growth in wealth and power of the United States, Stead promptly takes his place in the front rank of these people and blatantly declares that only the annexation of Great Britain to the United States can save the greatest empire in the world. The only serious thing about it is that such rot should be taken seriously by any of the British. There must be a certain mass of diseased sentiment in Great Britain or Stead and his Review of Reviews would die of financial neglect as have died the spasmodic boosters of an alleged annexation sentiment in Canada, but he goes on thriving somehow.

France has often been accused of being an hysterical nation, but its hysterics are invariably in the nature of exaggerated demonstrations of devotion to la belle France. British hysterics take the opposite form of heaping libels, slanders and contumely upon the empire, and in exploiting propositions humiliating to the nation and flattering to its neighbors, as is the new fad of this man Stead. It is an old and a good saying about the bird that fouls its own nest. And England appears to have a coopful.

PEKIN MUCH IMPROVED

Present Care of the Streets Notable—Chinese Military Plans

Pekin, Feb. 14—The celebration of the Chinese New Year's Day here yesterday was unusually well observed. The city has the appearance of prosperity. There has been a great improvement in the care of the streets, when compared with the condition in which they were kept by the allies. This care was previously unknown.

Many high Chinese say that notwithstanding appearances and the apparent extent to which edicts have ordered reforms there is little chance of reforms being carried out. Some of the edicts have already been annulled. The Chinese military plans are finding the most support, and this fact is having a sinister effect on foreign opinion. This is the work of Viceroy Yuan Shih Kai, who advocates military readiness, and is seeking an appropriation of 5,000,000 taels for the establishment of a provincial army.

SEEKS TO STRIKE BRITAIN IN AMERICA

Boer Leader Asks Roosevelt's Permission to Fight British Band

BRITAIN NOW WELL MAY SHUDDER

The Latest Boer Warrior Declares England Maintains Army Post and Breaks Neutrality Near New Orleans.

New Orleans, La., Feb. 14—General Samuel Pearson, representing the Boer cause in the United States, who returned from Washington a few days ago, has directed a letter to President Roosevelt declaring the neutrality laws are being violated at the port; that the British are not only shipping mules and horses from here, but are maintaining a recruiting office at Chalmette. General Pearson asks permission to command a force of Boers here and fight the British on American soil.

In his letter General Pearson says: "I affirm that at the port of Chalmette, a few miles below the city of New Orleans, a British post has been established and men and soldiers are there assembled and are daily engaged in warlike operations and are there for the purpose of renewal and augmentation of military supplies and for the recruiting of men. The war is carried on by officers in the army of Edward VII. openly at Port Chalmette in all respects except that soldiers do not appear in uniform. Will I be permitted to strike them with a force I may assemble here?

"I pray your excellency either to put an end to this state of affairs or permit me to strike here one blow.

"With every respect for the authority of the United States Government, may I not consider your silence or inaction the equivalent of consent for me to stop the further violation of the neutrality laws at this port or to carry on war here for the burghers?"

ITEMS OF INTEREST

Chicago, Feb. 13.—Every employe of every railroad entering Chicago, from the President, to the messenger boy, will be vaccinated between now and Monday, or lose his position. Every car which arrives in the city from every direction will be subjected to fumigation of the health department of the city, before other passengers are allowed to enter it. These precautions were agreed upon at a meeting of the General Managers of all the railroads entering Chicago. The Chicago and Alton Railroad and the Illinois Central began to put them into effect yesterday. The other roads will begin to-day. All will continue the measures until the smallpox epidemic which is ravaging the northwest and the Mississippi Valley States shall be stamped out. At the meeting of the Managers the spread of the disease in Wisconsin, Michigan, Minnesota, Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri, and Illinois was declared alarming, and it was stated that the General Managers passed resolutions, calling on the medical advisers of the road to take steps to check the disease and giving them full authority to use whatever measures they deemed best. The surgeons of the road and their assistants met and decided upon the stringent action above outlined.

New York, Feb. 14—A pro-Boer plan of campaign has been drawn up for use in the United States. The indications are that a jaw bone war will be carried on in the Netherlands, in the United States, and in the toughest constituencies in England long after peace has been restored in South Africa. While all this irresponsible chatter is going on in Europe and America, Lord Kitchener is setting a tremendous pace in South Africa. If the Boers—the fighting Boers, not the talking Boers—remain in the field much longer, it must be because, like the english foxes, they like being hunted.

"The assassination of President McKinley has elicited a universal feeling of sympathy and sorrow throughout the civilized world, and though Canada has happily so far been free from crimes of this character, the close proximity to the United States may make it advisable to join our efforts to the efforts of the United States and other nations, and to provide by legislation for the adequate punishment of those who, either by speech or writing, incite fanatics to the perpetration of such horrible crimes.

THE CENSUS.

"The returns of the late census will be laid before you, and while the absolute increase in the number of population is not so great as might have been expected, the evidences of growth in wealth and in the general tokens of prosperous development are highly satisfactory. There is good reason also to believe that the increase of population during the latter half of the decade has been very greatly in excess of the average of former years, and that in the near future we may look for a much more rapid growth than occurred during the period covered by the last two censuses.

CHEAP WIRELESS MESSAGES

"The inventor, Mr. Marconi, having met unexpected obstacles to the carrying on of the experiments in wireless ocean telegraph in a sister colony, my Ministers deemed it expedient to invite him to continue his operations on the coast of Nova Scotia, and they availed themselves of his presence in Canada to enter into negotiations, resulting in an arrangement through which should the project prove as successful as is hoped for, the Government and people of Canada will enjoy the benefits of the invention on very favorable terms, including rates for transatlantic messages very much below those now existing.

"I may congratulate you on the satisfactory condition of the revenue and on the steady and continuous expansion of the general business of the country, as evidenced by the increased volume of exports and imports.

Ottawa, Feb. 13.—The attendance at the opening of Parliament to-day was one of the largest on record, and hundreds were not able to get into the Senate galleries owing to the crush. The weather was chilly and not too cold. The speech from the throne referred to the bountiful harvest in Manitoba and the North-West Territories, and the cordial reception tendered the Prince and Princess of Wales. Regretting the assassination of McKinley it said:

A SOVEREIGN BANK WILL SOON APPEAR

The New Institution May Open A Branch in Peterborough

A STRONG BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Authorized Capital 2,000,000 One Half of which will be Paid up—Peterborough Capital will be Subscribed

The Sovereign Bank of Canada, which is soon to begin business, will enter upon its career with an assured business. Some time ago the Toronto papers published a statement regarding the new bank, so that many of our readers are already acquainted with the prospectus.

The authorized capital of the new bank is placed at $2,000,000, $1,000,000 of which will be paid up. In fact, the entire $1,000,000 of capital stock has already been subscribed or underwritten, and only a limited amount will be offered to the public. The present issue of 20,000 shares at a par value of $100 per share is being placed at a premium of 25 per cent., which will enable the bank to commence business with a reserve fund of $250,000.

The headquarters of the bank will be in Toronto, with executive offices in Montreal. The Board of Directors is composed of many well-known Canadian capitalists, while several prominent financial men in the United States, including several who are closely identified with the Standard Trust Company, of New York, and J. P. Morgan & Co., are also interested in the institution.

There are a number of interesting features connected with the establishment of the Sovereign Bank. The charter was obtained at the last session of the Dominion Parliament, the first that has been granted by that august assembly for upwards of 15 years. It may not be generally known that established banks are obliged by law to offer all issues of new capital to their own shareholders first, thereby practically precluding outside investors from subscribing for such stock, so that the inauguration of a new monetary institution is a matter of more than passing import.

A STRONG BOARD

In selecting Mr. Duncan M. Stewart as general manager, it will be conceded that the directors have made a splendid choice. Mr. Stewart has had a wide experience in banking, both in Canada and in the United States. He was lately inspector of the Royal Bank of Canada in Montreal, and was for many years with the Canadian Bank of Commerce. Mr. H. S. Holt, president of the Montreal Light, Heat, and Power Company, has been chosen as the first president of the bank, while the Board of Directors comprises such well-known names as A. A. Allan, Toronto; Archibald Campbell, ex-M.P., Toronto Junction; Randolf Macdonald, contractor, Toronto; Senator Peter McLaren, of Perth; Senator D. McMillan, of Alexandria; John Pugsley, of Pugsley, Dingman & Co., Toronto; Sir Melbourne Tait, acting Chief Justice of the Superior Court, Montreal; Henry R. Wilson, of Wilson & Stephens, bankers, New York City.

NEW YORK REPRESENTATIVES

As the leading Canadian banks are obliged to invest a portion of their funds in New York, and for this reason have agencies in that city, the wisdom of the Sovereign Bank in having a prominent New York banker on its Board of Directors is at once apparent. In addition, the bank will have an advisory committee in New York, composed of Wm. C. Lane, president of the Standard Trust Company, and Paul D. Cravath, of Guthrie, Cravath and Henderson. It is expected that this will obviate the necessity of opening a branch in New York City, and at the same time secure to the bank the best possible advice on financial matters.

The foreign bankers and correspondents are J. P. Morgan & Co., New York; the Standard Trust Co., New York; J. S. Morgan & Co., London, Eng., and Morgan, Harjes & Co., Paris, France.

In a circular issued by General Manager Stewart, he states that a large amount of the bank's stock has been sold to leading men in New York, Boston, and Chicago. This connection, he says, has already assured to the Sovereign Bank some valuable American business in Canada.

CANADIAN BANKING PROFITABLE

Of the stability of Canadian banks and of their value as an investment there is no gainsaying. The official publications show that the business of the chartered banks reporting to the Dominion Government has developed by leaps and bounds during recent years. From 1891 to 1901 the assets of the chartered banks of Canada increased 100 per cent. In the same ten years the liability to the public increased 137 per cent. The note circulation from 1891 to 1901 increased 71 per cent., and the loans and discounts increased in the same period 105 per cent. The paid-up capital of the chartered banks in this period increased only 14 per cent., while their reserve funds have increased 51 per cent since 1891, and now aggregate nearly $37,000,000. This sum represents the surplus profits to the shareholders after the payment of all expenses, dividends, etc.

As evidencing the prosperity which has attended Canadian banks, it need only be stated that during the past year the net profits of the chartered banks of Canada amounted to no less than $10,285,000, which profits are equal to 15 per cent. on the paid-up capital, and this percentage would be still greater if calculated upon the actual capital employed during the period. Every existing chartered bank has paid dividends regularly for years. Last year, out of the net profits of over ten million dollars, the banks paid their shareholders $5,000,000, being an average return on their capital of over 7 per cent. per annum.

MAY OPEN IN PETERBOROUGH

The Times has been informed that a branch of the Sovereign Bank may be opened in Peterborough in the near future, and it is therefore desirable that some stock be taken here. Not only is the investment an absolutely safe one, but everything points to its being an exceedingly profitable one as well. Peterborough is fast becoming an important manufacturing centre, and while the staff of the four banks already in existence here are scrupulously courteous and obliging, it is felt that there is room for another institution of the kind. Competition in finance as well as in everything else, is productive of much good in the community.

When the Baby Cries at Night

there is a cause for it. Perhaps it is gas on the stomach. May be cramps or diarrhoea. Don't lose sleep, anticipate such contingencies by always keeping handy a bottle of Polson's Nerviline. Just a few drops in water given inwardly, then rub the little one's stomach with a small quantity of Nerviline, and perfect rest is assured for the night for both mother and baby. You may not need Nerviline often, but when you do need it you need it badly. Get a 25c. bottle to-day

A Good Move

Hastings Star: At a meeting of the Peterborough Council recently, Ald. Morrison stated that one matter which needed investigation was the constant presence of so many fakirs from outside points canvassing the town for business. During the week he had been solicited to buy pictures, picture frames, books, tea, etc., by men who paid not a cent of taxes, and who hurt the business of the local merchants. He would like to see a good stiff license imposed on peddlers, with a rebate to local men. This matter should be taken up in Hastings, as it is certain that a great deal of injustice is being perpetrated on our business men. Every week our town is visited by peddlers offering envelopes, pens, paper, ink, hardware, underwear, spectacles and other articles. Even our butchers, who go to no little expense to keep meat in the summer time, have to compete with outside peddlers in the winter months.

Britain's Duty to the Empire—How Britain Has Shown Her Strength

London, Feb. 13.—This metropolis bestowed its highest distinction on Joseph Chamberlain, the Colonial Secretary, to-day when, at the Guild Hall, it conferred on him the freedom of the city in a gold casket. Mrs. Chamberlain accompanied the Colonial Secretary, and they were greeted on their arrival with a fanfare of trumpets. The address in connection with the presentation congratulated Mr. Chamberlain on the services he had rendered to the Empire during the last 25 years, dwelling specially on the way in which he had welded the colonies together.

On replying, Mr. Chamberlain disclaimed any intention of making political capital out of the occasion, but he said he thought he might, in behalf of the Government, make an appeal for national support. The Government had two great national objects in view—to establish beyond question British authority in South Africa, and to maintain the unity of the Empire. Both objects were involved in the South African war. The war would always be memorable, because it had called out a greater military effort than ever before asked from Great Britain, and because it had shown to friend and foe the potential strength and almost inexhaustible resources of the Empire. He had not thought it necessary to stoop to meet the imputations of national greed, lust of territory, or personal ambition and criminal motives suggested by the insignificant minority since the war had the approval of sister nations across the seas.

In regard to the immediate causes of the war, continued Mr. Chamberlain, it was not only impossible for a great nation to allow its subjects to be humiliated or oppressed, its engagements broken, and black races oppressed, but the very existence of the Empire was involved, and the Government was pledged to continue it until the danger from which they had escaped was forever averted.

After a reference to shallow observers abroad who foretold Great Britain's downfall, Mr. Chamberlain concluded with paying a glowing tribute to the colonies, who throughout the war had demonstrated their intention to share the obligations as well as the privileges of the Empire. It was a long step towards the consolidation, which was now within measure of practical accomplishment. He did not envy the statesman who would be willing to compromise the issue for which the Empire fought. The nation was not vindictive to its enemies. If they surrendered to-day they would be welcomed as friends to-morrow. The expulsion of those who caused the war was only a measure of self-preservation. Similarly immunity for traitors was not humanity but was cruelty to the loyalists and to the Boers, who now in thousands, recognizing the futility of the struggle, were aiding Great Britain to end the war. In justice to those who had died and as security for the survivors, they must make the Boers recognize that they are defeated, and take from them the barest possibility of repeating the attempt. To do otherwise would be to invite the contempt of foreign countries, whose affection it seemed impossible for them to gain, but whose respect at any rate they were able to secure.

TO BE A CATHOLIC IN FRANCE WILL WRECK THE CAREER OF A CITIZEN.

London Times Quotes the Words of Cardinal Langenieux—France Will Give Appointments to Those Who Have Been Soldiers

London, Feb. 13.—The London Times quotes a manifesto issued by Cardinal Langenieux of Reims, which is regarded with much interest in France. The cardinal says that to be a Catholic in France to-day is enough to wreck a citizen's career while Freemasonry is the open sesame to all doors. He calls the law of associations a socialistic measure seeking the revision of fortunes.

London, Feb. 13.—A despatch to The Times from Paris says that a new military regulation is contemplated by the French Government, and prohibits any one who has not served three years with the colors from holding any position in the gift of the State. Soldiers of departments or communes serving long terms are to have the right to civil service appointments.

PRINCIPLE OF EXEMPTION

The majority of the members of the Toronto City Council, in defiance of the Mayor, decided to ask the Ontario Legislature for permission to pass exemption by-laws by a two-thirds vote of the Council instead of by a two-thirds vote of the ratepayers.

This is a selfish move on the part of the hog town legislators, and the request will be made for the purpose of accepting propositions from bonus-hunting manufacturers without the consent of the people who pay the taxes. The game will be checked. The Councillors of other municipalities will not be partners to the scheme, and the Legislature will be asked to refuse the request.

The Mayor and Council of Hamilton asked the co-operation of the city of Kingston in opposing the demand of Toronto's Council, and the matter was referred to the local member with the suggestion that he act in the city's best interests by co-operating with the Hamilton Council.

The Mayor of Hamilton has written a congratulatory letter to the Mayor of Toronto complimenting him upon the very decided stand he took in opposition to the majority of the Council against reintroducing any further exemption clauses in the Assessment or Municipal Acts. He says that he heartily concurs with Mayor Howland in every word of his protest as reported in the press. Mayor Hendrie points out that owing to the fact that he is largely interested in manufacturing, the proposed change would benefit him personally. In answer to this he says, "I do not consider that it would be in the interest of the community at large, and in my estimation it would be a retrograde movement in the progressive age of municipal economics."

To have the act amended as suggested would prove a serious matter to municipalities which have long since come to the conclusion that the principle of exemption is wrong. To take this question out of the control of the ratepayers would simply give manufacturers an opportunity to fleece city corporations. When left without any controlling influence governing bodies do not always act in the best interests of their constituents. Aldermen might be induced by strong arguments to grant terms to manufacturers and others that would not be at all satisfactory to the majority of the electors. The principle of exemption is not right from many standpoints, and the sooner it is legislated out of force the better for the municipalities in general. Industries that cannot stand without exemption from taxes or bonuses are not very healthy institutions.

GOOD ENGLISH

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Please say whether good English usage permits the expression "a contract between A, B, and C," instead of "A contract among A, B, and C."

Ans.—It does not; but legal usage does.

A BROKER'S FAILURE

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—When a broker suspends business, what becomes of the customer's deposit with that broker? Can it be transferred to another broker, or does it go with the broker who has failed, and gone no one knows where?

GREENY

Ans.—It has generally gone before the broker goes.

A MANLY MAN

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—On Saturday last I noticed a big strapping fellow, at least six feet high, walking along George street, with his fur coat buttoned up to the chin, his fur collar up to the top of his head, and his hands in his pockets.

By his side walked a slender little pale-faced woman, not five feet tall, and carrying at least half a dozen parcels that almost weighed her to the ground.

Her lordly husband paid no attention to her, but majestically stalked on, gaping at everything in sight—but his wife.

I felt like taking a club and knocking a little sympathy into his selfish, hidebound carcass, but I suppose if I had tried to do so his little wife would have come to the rescue of her loving (?) husband.

A SOCIETY QUESTION

This Great Family Journal Advises Miss Alice

This great family journal is rapidly coming to the fore as an authority on all manner of subjects. The questions propounded are usually published in our "Letter Box" column, but this one is of such importance that we treat it separately. It was enclosed in a large envelope, and written on paper which had been sweetly scented. The letter reads:

Dear Mr. Editor,—I am a girl 24 years old, with lovely blonde hair and deep black eyes. I have a gentleman friend who calls upon me every evening, and whom I love very dearly. He has not yet mentioned marriage to me, but he insists on my sitting in his lap during the entire evening whenever he calls. Besides objecting to the manner in which his knees are upholstered, I realize that this conduct is unbecoming, and it distresses my sensitive nature extremely. I realize at the same time the danger of making a faux pas at this critical period. Please advise me what to say to him.

ALICE

P.S.—What will cure corns.

Ans.—(1) Now, my sweet Alice, this is a delicate situation, and this g.f.j. hates to advise you. At your age it is certainly dangerous to take any chances. Possibly you can disclose your feelings without frightening him away; still we are not sure.

(2) What is the matter with your corns? What do you wish to cure them of? Be more explicit.—Ed.

Mixed Morals.

TWO NEW HOUSES.

Once upon a Time there were Two Men, each of whom decided to build for himself a Fine, New House.

One Man, being of an Arrogant and Conceited Nature, took counsel of Nobody, but declared that he would build his House to suit himself. "For," said he, "since it is My House and I am to Live in It, why should I ask the Advice of my Neighbors as to its Construction?"

While the House was Building, the Neighbors came often and Looked at it, and went away, Whispering and Wagging their Heads in Derision.

But the Man paid no Heed, and continued to build his House as he Would.

The Result was that, when completed, his House was lacking in Symmetry and Utility, and in a Hundred Ways it was Unsatisfactory, and for each Defect there was a Neighbor who said, "Had you asked Me, I would have Warned you against that Error."

The Other Man, who was of a Humble and Docile Mind, went to Each of his Neighbors in Turn, and asked Advice about the Building of his House.

His Friends willingly and at Great Length gave him the Benefit of their Experiences and Opinions, and the Grateful Man undertook to Follow Out all their Directions.

The Result was that his House, when finished, was a Hodge-Podge of Varying Styles and Contradictory Effects, and Exceedingly Uncomfortable and Inconvenient to Live In.

MORALS:

This Fable teaches that in a Multitude of Counsellors there is Safety, and that Too Many Cooks Spoil the Broth.

THE TWO SUITORS.

Once on a Time there was a Charming Young Maiden who had Two Suitors.

One of These, who was of a Persistent and Persevering Nature, managed to be Continually in the Young Lady's Company.

He would pay her a Visit in the Morning, Drop In to Tea in the Afternoon, and Call on her Again in the Evening.

He took her Driving, and he Escorted her to the Theater. He would take her to a Party, and then he would Dance, or Sit on the Stairs, or Flit into the Conservatory with her.

The Young Lady admired this man, but she Wearied of his never-ceasing Presence, and she Said to Herself: "If he were not Always at my Elbow I should Better Appreciate his Good Qualities."

The Other Suitor, who considered himself a Man of Deep and Penetrating Cleverness, said to himself, "I will Go Away for a Time, and then my Fair One will Realize my Worth and Call Me Back to Her."

With a Sad Visage he made his Adieus, and he Exacted her Pledge to Write to him Occasionally. But after he had Gone she Forgot her Promise, and Soon she Forgot his Very Existence.

Kitchener Liked by Soldiers.

A man who recently arrived from South Africa says that Kitchener is liked and trusted by his common soldiers, and tells, in the Boston "Herald," this story, illustrating his manner with them:

"We were on the march from Klandsfontein to Stromberg, and had been pushing forward with unusual speed, and Joe Hawkins, who had just come out of the hospital after a touch of the fever, had been assigned by our good old sergeant-major to drive a Cape cart, carrying supplies, in order to spare him as much as possible from the hot sun. The horses were green, and didn't go well in harness, and, as they came in front of a farmhouse, one of them started kicking and succeeded in breaking the whiffletree.

"Joe at once made a break for the barn back of the farmhouse, and, spying a new Cape cart, grabbed a wrench and proceeded to take off the whiffletree, when he was approached by a quiet, stern-looking man in khaki, whom he did not remember ever having seen before, and who said:

"'I'm sorry, my boy, but I've just commandeered that cart. You will have to find another.'

"'Not much,' replied Joe; 'findin's keepin's in this country. I needed a new whiffletree—I've found one and I'm goin' to keep it.'

"'But,'— commenced the man.

"'There's no "buts" about it,' said Joe; 'if you want this cart, you've got to whip me before you get it.'

"'Well,' replied the man, 'perhaps I could help you repair your cart without destroying this one.'

"Joe, who was naturally a good-natured chap, consented to this arrangement, and, after rummaging about for a few minutes, the man produced a stick which would answer the purpose fairly well. He held it in place while Joe tied it firmly, and, seeing that everything was all right, returned quietly to the house, after bidding Joe a pleasant good-day.

"'Do you know who you were talking with?' inquired a young officer, stepping up to the cart as Joe was preparing to drive off. 'That was Lord Kitchener of Khartoum!'

"'And I've been glad all day I didn't have to lick him,' concluded Joe, as he told the story in camp that night, 'because he's a pretty good fellow.'"

Valuable Man.

"I say," said the business man to the detective, "some fellow has been representing himself as a collector of ours. He has been taking in more money than any two of the men we have, and I want him collared as quickly as you can."

"All right; I'll have him in jail in less than a week."

"Great Scott, man! I don't want to put him in jail; I want to engage him."

Australia's Governor-General.

It is feared in some quarters that the Earl of Hopetoun will not be able to complete his term as Governor-General of Australia. His Lordship has never entirely shaken off the effects of the illness which prostrated him in India on his way out to Australia, and though he was really prominent as the host of the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall, he has since, owing to his unsatisfactory health, been unable to fulfil many of his public engagements.

Women Dread

The disfiguration caused by skin disease, even more than the tormenting irritation which is so commonly associated with it. The use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery generally results in a complete cure of eczema, pimples, eruptions and other forms of disease which have their cause in an impure condition of the blood. "Golden Medical Discovery" absolutely purges the blood of humors and poisons, and so cures the cutaneous diseases which bad blood breeds and feeds.

There is no alcohol in the "Golden Medical Discovery" and it is entirely free from opium, cocaine, and all other narcotics.

"I was troubled with eczema from the crown of my head to the soles of my feet," writes Mrs. Ella Quick, of Cass City, Tuscola Co., Mich. "Could not walk at times, nor wear my shoes. Thought there was no help for me—at least the doctor said there was none. I went to see friends at Christmas time and there heard of the good that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery had done for them, and was advised to try it at once. For fear that I might neglect it my friends sent to the village and got a bottle and made me promise that I would take it. I had been getting worse all the time. I took thirteen bottles of the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and ten vials of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, and used the 'All Healing Salve,' which made a complete cure. It was slow, but sure. I was taking the medicine about eight months.

"I would say to all who read this: Try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery before wasting time and money."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets assist the action of the "Discovery."

A Fake Game

"I don't think I ever enjoyed a poker game as much in my life as I did a fake game of my own getting up a good many years ago," said a Lindsay man to a Times reporter the other day. "I was quite a youngster at the time, and was the treasurer of my class. I had a fund of about $150 for the purchase of class pins, and one afternoon, while I had this money in possession, three or four of my classmates dropped in. I had a country cousin visiting me at the time, a young fellow of about my own age, and I did everything in my power to dazzle him. Well, we started a poker game, having surreptitiously divided the $150 between us. My cousin didn't play but he sat and watched us. I don't think I shall ever forget his look of amazement as we played that game. The money was all in bills, and we bet the cash instead of chips, throwing $5 and $10 bills around as though they were so many cents. It was a freeze-out game, and eventually I had all the money back again. During the rest of his visit my country cousin regarded me with increased awe, and I don't believe he ever learned that our big poker game was all for effect."

Astonishing Success of the World's Great Cereal Food, Malt Breakfast Food

The history of food products for the last twenty years cannot point to a success so marked and astonishing as that attained by Malt Breakfast Food. The best grocers in Canada and Newfoundland are most agreeably impressed with the heavy demand, and say positively that Malt Breakfast Food is their great leader.

Malt Breakfast Food is fast displacing other grain breakfast foods, because it possesses virtues and qualities unknown to other existing brands. No other food is so delicious to the taste; no other so appetizing and nourishing. It is therefore fair to claim that Malt Breakfast Food is the acme of perfection as far as a health food is concerned. It truly makes the weak strong and keeps the strong in the bloom of health. If you would add to the pleasure of your morning meal, try Malt Breakfast Food. See your grocer.

Getting over a Spree

"All heavy drinkers," said a hotel man to the Times the other day, "have their own pet theories about how to overcome the after-effects of too much 'booze water.' Some of them are very absurd, and to hear these fellows argue in support of their antidotes you would think that nothing could be more important. I heard a new one to-day. The man who was talking about it was three sheets in the wind, and was very emphatic. 'If I feel that I've had too much, and am going to have a head on me the next morning,' he said, 'I always take a cabbage, cut the heart out of it and eat it before I go to bed. My father and my grandfather before me used to do this. It is a family tradition, and it is infallible.' The others only laughed at him, and that made him mad," continued the bartender. "Still, it's as sensible as most of the alleged cures. These fellows may talk as they please, but I have noticed that when they are feeling real rocky they all want the same cure, and that is a hair from the tail of the dog that bit them."

NORTH AMERICAN OIL & REFINING COMPANY'S

Stock and It Will Make You Rich

The company owns 2,080 acres of land located in the Newhall-Acton White Oil Fields of Los Angeles County, California. Our manager, Mr. J. H. Parker, writes us under date of Jan. 15th that they have opened up two oil wells near our property, one being a gusher of white oil just as clear as alcohol, and of 52 degrees gravity. This oil is worth and is selling at $4.00 per barrel at the well, and producing better than 50 barrels per day. Our derrick is up and the machinery purchased; we expect to be drilling in a very short time. We now offer to the public 100,000 shares of this meritorious company's stock at the low price of 10 cents per share, and it is worth a great deal more money at the present time with the showing we have in the property. The demand for this oil is far greater than the supply, which is not so of the black oils of Lower California and Beaumont, Texas, that are a drug upon the market.

Regarding the officers of the company, they are all men of honor and means. There are no salaries paid to any of the officers, not even our General Manager, until our company is put on a paying basis.

INCORPORATION.

The company is capitalized for 1,500,000 shares, the incorporation having been effected under the laws of Wyoming, stock being all common stock, issued absolutely fully paid and forever non-assessable. The incorporation laws of Wyoming are peculiarly favorable to oil enterprises, and the par value of the stock has been fixed at One Cent per share in order to avoid the excessive revenue tax paid on stocks of a high par value.

LIABILITIES.

The company has no debts; all stock is fully paid and non-assessable, there are no stockholders' liabilities, and we have no royalties to pay for any purpose.

OUR LANDS.

The company's lands have been carefully selected by their engineer, Mr. J. H. Parker, who is also Vice President and General Manager, in conjunction with four of the best oil experts, who are well known throughout the state. These experts each unbeknown to the other went over our vast territory to locate a site to sink our first well; their reports are on file in the company's office, and we will be pleased to mail a copy of the same upon application, also maps of the oil fields with our property showing in the red. The directors call special attention to the maps, which have been drawn from actual surveys and personal inspection of the land and is accurate. The company's lands are distinctly shown as well as their relation to other oil lands and the location of oil wells, oil seepages and oil springs. A careful inspection of the map will aid prospective investors to judge of the oil under the company's lands.

The geological formation is perfect, the Anticlinal passing through the entire property, and being unbroken by granite formations.

GUARANTEE.

The officers and directors of the company have such great faith in the proposition that they will redeem all stock sold for cash, providing they do not strike oil as designated.

TREASURY STOCK.

The company holds in the treasury over 500,000 shares of treasury stock and some money. The proceeds of sale from the 100,000 shares now offered to the public will be used for the purpose of sinking wells.

REGISTRATION.

The stock is registered with the Colorado Title & Trust Company of Colorado Springs, Colorado, which guarantees any over-issue of stock.

The company would like to employ a few good Fiscal Agents to handle any part of this 100,000 shares of stock, giving them a very liberal commission. We take pleasure in recommending this stock to the good people of Peterborough and vicinity at the very low price of 10 cents per share; considering the condition of the property the stock is worth more money than what we are asking for it.

Of the 12,000,000,000 letters annually distributed by the postoffices of the world 8,000,000,000 are addressed in English, 1,200,000,000 in German and 1,000,000,000 in French. All the other languages have less than 2,000,000,000 between them.

By employing compressed air, a Dresden manufacturer has lately succeeded in producing glass vessels of extraordinary size. Heretofore, it is said, concave glass could be blown into vessels having a capacity not exceeding about 20 gallons, but by the new process glass bath-tubs and large glass bottles can be blown.

The highest tunnel in the world is now in course of construction by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company at Crow's Nest Pass. It is at an altitude of 4,500 feet above sea level. The Loop Tunnel, as the work is called, will be 840 feet long, of which over 300 feet are completed. A force of 200 men is working day and night, and it is anticipated it will be finished by December next. This tunnel will shorten the route by fourteen miles, and will greatly reduce grades and curvatures.

A sporting friend of the editor of "Sporting and Dramatic News" keeps some green tree frogs in a glass globe, and the children feed them on flies and other insects. "In their bowl stands a miniature flight of steps, and when the frogs climb up and perch on these steps my friend leaves his mackintosh at home, being assured of fine weather. When the frogs huddle together at the bottom of the globe, then he says it is a safe sign of coming rain."

For soldiers' use, and for employment under circumstances where fresh milk, coffee and chocolate are not easily obtainable, a dried preparation is now being manufactured which serves excellently as a substitute. Skimmed milk is evaporated by the help of an air blast to the condition of a paste, and, after being dried, is reduced to powder by grinding. Then it is mixed with powdered chocolate, half and half, and is either put up as dust or compressed into cakes. When wanted, water is added, the resulting fluid is boiled, and all that is needed is a little sugar.

A system of teaching the French language by phonograph is to be tried in England. Several prominent French professors are devoting their energies to preparing phonograph cylinders carrying French lessons upon them. The phonographic records are accompanied by a book, which contains thirty lessons, each of which corresponds to a phonographic cylinder, and each lesson is ingeniously illustrated. All that the student has to do is to set the phonograph in motion, and the book will explain what the instrument is saying.

The following advertisement is from the Tokio "Nippon" (newspaper): "I am a beautiful woman. My abundant undulating hair envelops me as a cloud. Supple as a willow is my waist. Soft and brilliant is my visage as the satin of the flowers. I am endowed with wealth sufficient to saunter through life hand in hand with my beloved. Were I to meet a gracious lord, kindly, intelligent, well educated, and of good taste, I would unite myself with him for life, and later share with him the pleasure of being laid to rest eternal in a tomb of pink marble."

One of the oddest of recent inventions is a refrigerating egg, as it might be called. It is an ovoid capsule of nickel-plated copper, about the size and shape of a hen's egg, hollow and nearly filled with ice. If you have a glass of milk that is not cold enough, you do not like to put ice into it, because dilution with water spoils the beverage. But, if you have one of these eggs handy, you may drop it into the glass, and in a few moments the liquid is reduced to the desired temperature. In the same way you may cool your cup of coffee, if it is too hot, and the idea is equally applicable to any other drink.

Curious Bits of News.

Dr. G. L. Johnson, whose studies of the eyes of mammals have recently been published, calls attention to the fact that men and monkeys alone possess parallel and convergent vision of the two eyes. On the other hand, the lower mammals possess divergent and consequently very widely extended vision. Squirrels, for instance, and probably hares and rabbits as well, are able to see an enemy approaching directly from behind without turning the head.

Why "Mike" Didn't Rise.

AMONG the employees of one of the important mercantile establishments of Chicago is a husky young man who is known as "Mike." There seems to be no clear understanding among "Mike's" immediate superiors as to the nature of his duties. He sits around among boxes at the rear end of the concern most of the time and smokes an old pipe that has the death-rattle in its throat.

Occasionally there is a rag-picker or a suspicious looking prowler to be driven out of the alley, but aside from looking after such persons "Mike" has no regular work to do. This gives him plenty of time to get fat and to ponder upon the great mysteries of existence.

The other day one of the firm's trusted men had occasion to look around among the boxes where "Mike" was on guard, and, finding the latter with his heels cocked up and his chin on his breast, while the old pipe gurgled and wheezed and threatened after every pull to give up the struggle forever, the man from the office proceeded to read his colaborer a little sermon.

"'Mike,'" said the one who amounted to something, "why do you sit around here wasting your spare moments? You are neglecting golden opportunities. Instead of idling your time away you might have a book and be studying. Many a man in your place would educate himself, and so become capable of taking a higher place in the world. I myself started in here at the bottom. But I was determined not to remain at the bottom. How do you suppose I got up? By sitting around and waiting for my employers to come and lift me out of my place? No, indeed, 'Mike,' I fitted myself for a better position. I put in my spare time finding out things about the way the establishment was run. I made myself too valuable to be kept at the bottom. I was determined from the start that I would be promoted, not merely for my own benefit, but for the benefit of the firm. I decided to make myself so valuable that they could not afford not to take advantage of my knowledge and my ability. I think a great many young men make mistakes in the attitude they assume at the start. They try to get up merely for their own profit. They should make themselves so competent that their employers could not help seeing that it would be unprofitable to keep them down. You have a hundred chances here for every one that I had when I started. Three-fourths of the time you have nothing to do. You could put in this time studying and finding out how our business is done. In that way you could make yourself worth more to the firm than you are at present. Why don't you do it?"

"Mike" slowly removed his heels from the box on which they had rested, and, after having gulped down a mouthful of nicotine, he replied:

"I've noticed one thing around this place. The less a feller knows the less he has to do."—Chicago "Record-Herald."

New Zealand Likes Newfoundland.

There will probably be no inclusion of New Zealand in the Commonwealth of Australia during the next fifty years, if, indeed, it ever takes place. The scheme has now been condemned by the commission appointed by the New Zealand Government to study the federation question, and the commission's judgment seems well based. New Zealand is twelve hundred miles from Australia by sea, a fact that neutralizes the military argument drawn from the benefits of a joint defence in case of war. Again, should New Zealand be brought under Australian control, such a step would imperil the many economic and socialistic experiments being made under the auspices of the New Zealand Government.

She—Let's sit out the next one. He—Why, I thought you were fond of dancing? She—I am.—Detroit "Free Press."

COLONEL C. C. FOGLE, attorney-at-law, of Lancaster, Mo., related the following legal incident: "One of the most original lawyers I ever met in my life was 'Sam' Dysart, who some twenty years ago was a resident of our county. He is some kin to Major 'Ben' Dysart, of your town. 'Sam' was a born humorist, and could have made his fortune in the lecture field. When he lived up our way he was engaged on one occasion to defend a lot of boys and girls charged with disturbing a religious assembly out in the country, by 'laughing and giggling' is the way the information read. The case was tried before Squire A. C. Bailey, a good old man, who has long since gone to his final reward. Like all cases of the sort, it attracted an immense crowd from the vicinity of the alleged outrage. T. C. Tadlock prosecuted, and he was instructed by the church people to spare no pains to convict the disturbers, who were very much frightened by being dragged into court. All the defendants were children of good families, and it was their first offence. They candidly admitted they laughed out in church, and the State insisted that by their own mouths they were condemned. Brother Tice Spears, a righteous man of Puritanic type, was the main prosecuting witness. He had conducted the services, and he testified that his peace was sadly disturbed by the unseemly behavior of the 'sisters.' After he told his story in chief he sat down with clasped hands waiting for the defendants' attorney to begin on him. He didn't have long to wait. The examination began like this:

"'Brother Spears, you led the meetin' last night?'

"'I did, sir.'

"'You prayed?'

"'I did, sir.'

"'And preached?'

"'I tried to.'

"'And sung?'

"'I sung.'

"'What did you sing?'

"'"There is a Fountain Filled with Blood,"' sir.

"Here Mr. Dysart pulled a hymnbook from his pocket and handed it to the witness, with the remark:

"'Please turn to that song, Brother Spears.'

"The witness did so.

"'That's what you sang that night?'

"'It is, sir.'

"'Well, stand up and sing it now, if you please.'

"'What!'

"'You heard what I said, Brother Spears.'

"'But I can't sing before this sort of crowd.'

"'Brother Spears,' with much apparent indignation, 'do I understand that you refuse to furnish legitimate evidence to this jury?'

"'N—no—but, you see——'

"'Your Honor,' said Mr. Dysart, 'I insist that the witness shall sing the song referred in just as he did on the night of alleged disturbance. It is a part of our evidence, and very important. The reason for it will be disclosed later on.'

"There was a long jangle between the lawyers, and the court finally ordered the witness to get up and sing.

"'And, mind you, Brother Spears,' said Dysart, seriously, 'you must sing it just as you did that night; if you change a note you will have to go back and do it all over again.'

"The witness got up and opened the book. There is a vast difference between singing to a congregation in sympathy with you and a crowd of court room habitues. Brother Spears was painfully conscious of the fact. You know how these oldtime hymns are sung in the backwoods settlements? You begin in the basement and work up to the roof, and then leap off from the dizzy height and finally finish the line in the basement. That's the way the witness sang. He had a good voice—that is, it was strong. It seemed to threaten the window lights. The crowd didn't smile—it just yelled with laughter. The jurymen bent double and almost rolled from their seats. The court bit his cob-pipe harder and looked solemn. It wasn't any use. There were only two straight faces in the house. One belonged to a deaf man and the other to 'Sam' Dysart. The singer finished and sat down. He looked tired. 'Sam' immediately excused him. When the time for speech-making came 'Sam' remarked to the jury: 'If you gentlemen think you could go to one of Brother Spears' meetings and behave better than you have here, why, you may be justified in convicting these boys and girls.' That was all he said, but it gave the jury lots to think about. They brought in a verdict of not guilty, with the request that Brother Spears sing another song. But that gentleman had gone home and court adjourned."—Macon "Republican."

Pearls of Great Price.

To-day some of the finest pearls of the world go to China. There is a big demand for them among the mandarins there. Many go to India for sale to the rajahs, and a large number to Paris, whence they are re-exported.

Fine pearls are still of great value, but not so much so as they were in the past. In Roman times they were worth more than now. Julius Caesar once presented to the mother of Marcus Brutus a pearl valued at $240,000. Cleopatra is said to have swallowed one worth $300,000, and she had another equally valuable. Philip II. of Spain received a present of a Panama pearl worth $80,000, and a Spanish woman of Madrid owned one worth 30,000 ducats. During a [illegible] Constantinople I was shown [illegible]'s pearl collection. He had [illegible] a peck of pearls of different [illegible] as big as a pigeon's egg, and some no larger than the head of a pin. He has quilts embroidered with pearls, saddle cloths decorated with them, and a great number of mirrors with pearl-studded handles, which are probably used by the ladies of his harem.—Buffalo "Express."

Busy Little Helps.

"Here's another letter from that new tenant," said the secretary.

"What's he want now?" enquired the proprietor of the Highuppe Apartment House.

"Says he's got to have more room in his flat. Says it'll help some if you'll let him scrape the paper off the walls."—"Catholic Standard and Times."

Anecdotal.

At North Berwick, near Edinburgh, the other day, a golfer whose order [illegible] in advance of his skill got [illegible] at the second hole. He [illegible] his ball badly "topped" on the brink of a bunker. He turned to his caddie in despair. Said he: "I've broke my brassie, and my cleek, and my mashie, and none of them will get out that ball. What should ye say I should take now?" "The," was the [illegible] respectful and sympathetic response, "I wad mysel' be taking [illegible] it just the [illegible] back to Edinburgh, and to [illegible]."

Three Photographs.

"PHOTOGRAPH all the prisoners? But why?" demanded Sir Felix Felix-Williams.

Old Canon Kempe shrugged his shoulders. Admiral Trewbody turned the pages of the Home Secretary's letter. They sat at the baize-covered table in the magistrates' room—the last of the visiting justices who met under the old regime, to receive the Governor's report and look after the welfare of the prisoners in Tregarrick county jail.

"But why, in the name of common sense?" Sir Felix persisted.

"I suppose," hazarded the Admiral, "it helps the police in identifying criminals."

"But the letter says 'all the prisoners?' You don't seriously tell me that anyone wants a photograph to identify Poacher Tresize, whom I've committed a score of times if I've committed him once? And perhaps you'll explain to me this further demand for a 'Composite Photograph' of all the prisoners, male and female. A 'composite photograph'—have you ever seen one?"

"No," the Admiral mused, "but I see what the Home Office is driving at. Someone has been persuading them to test these new theories in criminology the doctors are so busy with, especially in Italy—"

"In Italy!" pish'd Sir Felix Felix-Williams.

"My dear Sir Felix, science has no nationality." The Admiral was a fellow of the Royal Geographical Society, and kept a microscope to amuse his leisure.

"It has some proper limits, I should hope," Sir Felix retorted. It annoyed him—a chairman of Quarter Sessions for close upon twenty years—to be told that the science of criminology was yet in its infancy; and he glanced mischievously at the Canon, who might be supposed to have a professional quarrel with scientific men. But the Canon was a wary fighter, and no waster of powder or shot.

"Well, well," said he, "I don't see what harm it can do, or what good. If the Home Secretary wants his composite photograph, let him have it. The only question is, have we a photographer who knows how to make one? Or must we send the negatives up to Whitehall?"

So the visiting justices sent for the local photographer and consulted him. And he—being a clever fellow—declared it was easy enough, a mere question of care in superimposing the negatives. He had never actually made the experiment: his clients (as he called his customers) preferring to be photographed singly or in family groups. But he asked to be given a trial, and suggested (to be on the safe side) preparing two or three composite prints, between which the justices might choose at their next meeting.

This was resolved, and the resolution entered in the minutes; and next day the photographer set to work. Some of the prisoners resisted and 'made faces' in front of the camera, squinting and pulling the most horrible mouths. A female shoplifter sat under protest, because she was not allowed to send home for an evening gown. But the most consented obediently, and Jim Tresize even asked for a copy to take home to his wife.

The Admiral (who had married late in life) resided with his wife and young family in a neat villa just outside the town, where his hobby was to grow pelargoniums. The photographer passed the gate daily on his way to and from the prison, and was usually hailed and catechised on his progress.

His patience with the recalcitrant prisoners delighted the Admiral, who more than once assured his wife that Smithers was an intelligent fellow and quite an artist in his way. "I wonder how he manages it," said Mrs. Trewbody, "he told Baby last autumn that a little bird would fly out of the camera when he took off the cap, and everyone allows that the result is most lifelike. But I don't like the idea, and I think it may injure his trade."

The Admiral could not always follow his wife's reasoning. "What is it you dislike?" he asked.

"Well, it's not nice to think of one's self going into the same camera he has been using on those wretched prisoners. It's sentiment, I dare say; but I had the same feeling when he stuck up Harry's photograph in his showcase at the railway station, among all kinds of objectionable persons, and I requested him to remove it."

The Admiral laughed indulgently, being one of those men who find a charm, even of subtle flattery, in their wives' silliness.

"I agree with you" he said, "that it's not pleasant to be exposed to public gaze among a crowd of people one would never think of knowing. I don't suppose it would actually encourage familiarity, at the same time there's an air of promiscuity about it—I won't say disrespect—which, ahem, jars. But with the prisoners it's different—my attitude to them is scientific, if I may say so. I look upon them as a race apart, almost of another world, and as such I find them extremely interesting. The possibility of mixing with them on any terms of intimacy doesn't occur. I am aware, my dear," he wound up, graciously, "that you women seldom understand this mental detachment, being by nature unscientific and all the more charming for your prejudices."

At the next meeting of justices, Smithers the photographer presented himself and produced his prints with a curious air of diffidence.

"I have," he explained, "brought three for Your Worships' selection; and can honestly assure Your Worships that my pains have been endless. What puzzles me, however, is that although in all three the same portraits have been imposed, and in the same order, the results are surprisingly different. The cause of these differences I cannot detect, though I have gone over the process several times and step by step; but out of some two dozen experiments I may say that all the results answer pretty closely to one another of these three types." Mr. Smithers, who had spent much time in rehearsing this little speech, handed up photograph No. 1; and Sir Felix adjusted his spectacles.

"Villainous!" he exclaimed, recoiling.

The Canon and the Admiral bent over it together.

"Most repulsive!" said the Admiral.

"Here indeed"—the Canon was more impressive—"here, indeed, is an object lesson in the effects of crime. Is it possible that in this, man's [illegible] [illegible] the divinely [illegible] of the [illegible]? Were it not altogether too horrible I would have this picture framed and glazed and hung up in every cottage home in the land."

"My dear fellow," interrupted Sir Felix, "we cannot possibly let this monstrosity go up to Whitehall as representative of the inmates of Tregarrick jail! It would mean an enquiry on the spot. It would even reflect upon us. Ours is a decent county, as counties go, and I protest it shall not, with my consent, be injured by any such libel."

Mr. Smithers handed up photograph No. 2.

"This looks better," began Sir Felix, and with that he gave a slight start, and passed the photograph to the Canon. The Canon, too, started, and stole a quick glance at Sir Felix; their eyes met.

"It certainly is singular"—stammered Sir Felix. "I fancied—without irreverence—but you detected it too," he wound up incoherently.

"May I have a look?" The Admiral peered over the Canon's head; who, however, did not relinquish the photograph, but turned on Smithers with sudden severity.

"I presume, sir, this is not an audacious joke?"

"I assure Your Worship"—protested the photographer— "I had some thoughts of tearing it up, but thought it wouldn't be honest."

"You did rightly," the Canon answered; "but now that we have seen it, I have no such scruple." He tore the print across, and across again. "Even in this," he said, with a glance at the Admiral, who winced, "we may perhaps read a lesson, or at least a warning, that man's presumption in extending the bounds of his knowledge—or, as I should prefer to call it, his curiosity—may—er—bring him face to face with—"

But the Canon's speech tailed off as he regarded the torn pieces of cardboard in his hand. He felt that the others had been seriously perturbed and were not listening; he himself was conscious of a shock too serious for that glib emollient—usually so efficacious—the sound of his own voice. He perceived that it did not impose even on the photographer. An uncomfortable silence fell on the room.

Sir Felix was the first to recover. "Put it in the waste-paper basket; no, in the fire!" he commanded, and turned to Smithers. "Surely between these two extremes—"

"I was on the point of suggesting that Your Worships would find No. 3 more satisfactory," the photographer interrupted, forgetting his manner in his anxiety to restore these three gentlemen to their ease. His own discomfort was acute, and he over-acted as a man will who has unwillingly surprised a state secret, and wishes to assure everyone of his obtuseness.

Sir Felix studied No. 3. "This appears to me a very ordinary photograph. Without being positively displeasing, the face is one you might pass in the street any day, and forget."

"I hope it suggests no—no well-known features?" put in the Canon nervously.

"None at all, I think; but see for yourself. To me it seems—although hazy, of course—the kind of thing the Home Office might find helpful."

"It is less distinct than the others," said the Admiral, pulling his whiskers.

"And for that reason the more obviously composite—which is what we are required to furnish. No, indeed, I can find nothing amiss with it; and I think, gentlemen, if you are agreed, we will forward this print."

No. 3 was passed accordingly, the photographer withdrew, and the three justices turned to other business, which occupied them for a full two hours.

But, I pray you, mark the sequel.

Mr. Smithers, in his relief and delight at the magistrates' approbation, hurried home, fished out a copy of No. 2, exposed it proudly in his shop window, and went off to the Pack Horse Inn for a drink.

Less than an hour later Mrs. Trewbody, having packed her family into the jingle for their afternoon's ride with Miss Platt, the governess, strolled down into the town to do some light shopping; and, happening to pass the photographer's window, came to a standstill with a little gasp.

A moment later she entered the shop; and Mrs. Smithers, answering the shop bell, found that she had taken the photograph from the window and was examining it eagerly.

"This is quite a surprise, Mrs. Smithers. A capital photograph! May I ask how many copies my husband ordered?"

"I'm not aware, ma'am, that the Admiral has ordered any as yet, though I heard Smithers say only this morning as he hoped he'd be pleased with it."

"I think I can answer for that, although he is particular. But I happen to know he disapproves of these things being exposed in the window. I'll take this copy home with me, if I may. Has your husband printed any more?"

"Well, no, ma'am. There was one other copy; but Lady Felix-Williams happened to be passing just now, and spied it; and nothing would do but she must take it away with her."

"Lady Felix-Williams!" Mrs. Trewbody stiffened with sudden distrust. "Now what could Lady Felix-Williams want with this?"

"I'm sure I can't tell you, ma'am; but she was delighted. 'A capital likeness,' she said. 'I've never seen a photograph before that caught just that expression of his.'"

"I should very much like to know what she has to do with his expression," Mrs. Trewbody murmured to herself, between wonder and incipient alarm. But she concealed her feelings, good lady; and, having paid for her purchase, carried it home in her muff and stuck it upright against one of the Sevres candlesticks on her boudoir mantelshelf.

And there the Admiral discovered it three-quarters of an hour later. He came home wanting his tea; and, finding the boudoir empty, advanced to ring the bell. At that moment his eyes fell on Smithers' replica of the very photograph he had passed for forwarding to the Home Secretary. He picked it up, and gave vent to a long whistle.

"Now, how the dickens—"

His wife appeared in the doorway, with Harry, Dicky and Theophila clinging to her skirts, fresh from their ride and boisterous.

"My dear Emily, where in the world did you get hold of this?"

He held the photograph towards her at arm's length, and the children rushed forward to examine it.

"Papa! Papa!" they shouted together, capering round it. "Oh, mammy, isn't it him exactly?"

First Boy—It's six o'clock. Let's go home. Second Boy—Nit! If we go home now we'll get licked for stayin' up late. If we stay till eight we'll get hugged and kissed for not bein' drowned.—"Puck."

His Ideal.

First Cat—If you had your choice of all the world, where would you rather live? Second Cat—China! They say there is a wall there 1,500 miles long! Just think of moonlight nights—and a wall like that!

Permanent Cures of Cancer

We here give a few cases, where the efficacy of our constitutional treatment in curing Cancer is established beyond all question. We have plenty on fyle.

There is ample proof that where our remedy cures, it cures to stay and saves people from the torture of knife and plaster.

CANCER OF THE BREAST—A lady had Cancer of the Breast, which rendered her right shoulder and arm almost helpless. Our remedy cured her over five years ago, and there is not the slightest return of the trouble.

CANCER OF THE FACE—This case of a gentleman who was so bad that his right cheek was almost eaten off with the disease. Plasters aggravated his trouble. Our treatment cured him five years ago and he has been all right since.

CANCER OF THE STOMACH—Doctors pronounced the trouble cancer of the stomach. There was vomiting of material that looked like coffee grounds. Great weakness and prostration. Cured over four years ago and well to-day.

CANCER OF THE NOSE—A severe case which was cured by our remedy in 1891 and has never returned to this day.

Full accounts of the above cases, together with the names and addresses of the persons, are given in our new book, "Cancer, its cause and Cure," sent to anyone, in plain wrapper, on receipt of two stamps. Stott & Jury, Bowmanville, Ont.

When Jim Died

(A Poem asked for)

When Jim died, all th' neighbors cam from fur an' near.
'Pears like to me they held him just as dear
As mother did an' me; for they all came in to gaze
Once more on his calm, pale face, an' a sort o' haze
Seemed to settle on their cheeks—maybe
th' fust for years—
When Jim died.

When Jim died, th' birds stopped singin
in th trees,
For they missed him, you know; an' th'
goldenbelted bees
Flittin' o'er th' meadows whispered to th' clover
It would kiss his bare, brown feet no more; an' th' plover
An' the killdee in th' rushes an' th' fen Seemed over to be callin' that he'd never come again—
When Jim died.

Jim was a curious chap—not like other boys;
He had his own way o' takin' life, with its joys
An' sorrows; he loved birds an' blowers an' I'll bet
He never much as trod on a timid viole
That peeped shyly thro' th' grass. Like music of a flute—
Since Jim died.

Since Jim died, 'pears like to me mother
ain't so spry
As she used to be; there's sadness in her eye
An' voice that sort o' cuts me to th' heart; for Jim
Had allus been her pet since he was born;
she loved him
Better than the rest, he was her boy;
she don't complain,
Mother don't, but then she's never been th' same
Since Jim died.

COFFEE DOES IT

Facts not Generally Believed

It is curious to watch a coffee toper and observe how he or she will resist all suggestions as to coffee being the cause of their various ailments.

They will charge the coated tongue and bilious condition to something they have eaten, likewise the wretched condition of the bowels and the palpitation of the heart. The sallow complexion is generally attributed to a "naturally bilious" temperament.

But once in a while a person wakes up and throws off coffee entirely, then the truth begins to appear, and it is an easy job to make this change if Postum Food Coffee is taken in place of coffee.

A man in West Plains, Mo., writes, "As the coffee habit grew on me my health declined in the same ratio. I was subject to nervousness, constipation, dyspepsia, and a general weak feeling which made me unfit for business, and I finally became so nervous and thoroughly broken down that I could not attend to business and turned everything over to my assistant and went to the mountains in Colorado hoping to find health in a change of climate, but after six months sojourn I came back in worse condition than I left.

A friend insisted that I quit coffee and try Postum, and although I did not believe it was the cause of my ill health, I consented to try the new coffee. I bought a package and wife prepared it strictly according to directions and I was wonderfully pleased to find it so delicious and refreshing; the quitting of coffee was a pleasure rather than a task.

I have now been drinking Postum for over a year and my health has steadily improved; the nervousness and dyspepsia have entirely disappeared. I have gained 25 pounds in weight, and feel at least ten years younger than I did a year ago.

Many of my friends have quit coffee and are using Postum, and I do not know of a single one who has not been benefited. Some of these did not like Postum at first, but in every case I found the cause to have been not having boiled it long enough. The directions are easy enough to follow, and when followed a delicious beverage is the result, but some slovenly cooks put it on to boil for five or ten minutes, but that does not make good Postum. After the real bubbling or boiling has begun it should be allowed to boil at least 15 minutes." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

THE LATE WM. HAMILTON.

DEATH OF ONE OF PETERBORO'S OLDEST CITIZENS.

Occurred at His Residence, 420 Stre. t. Last Evening After a Lingering Illness of Several Years.

With feelings of deepest sorrow the news was received last evening, of the death of Mr. William Hamilton sr., at the age of 79 years which sad occurrence took place at 6.30 last evening. Some years years ago Mr. Hamilton suffered a severe paralytic stroke and for some years has been unable to leave his house. The late Mr. Hamilton was born in Swinton, Berwickshire, Scotland in the year 1823. In the year 1844 he came to Canada and worked in Cobourg and Hamilton at the machine business, in 1848 he went to Buffalo, Cincinnati and Madison, Indiana where he worked at his trade. In 1850 he started in business for himself and conducted a foundry and machine shop at Shelbyville, Indiana. In 1854 he came to Peterborough and established works for the manufacture of saw-mill and general machinery. This business has steadily grown under his careful and enterprising management and to-day the business stands at the head of that industry in Canada. The volume of business has been increased to such an extent, that the works have been enlarged a number of times.

During his residence in town Mr. Hamilton made many friends who were deeply attached to him. In business dealings he was always most courteous and reliable. His strict sense of honesty and fair dealing made his name known in every part of the country. In the affairs of the municipality, Mr. Hamilton took a very deep interest. He was a member of the School Board and Town Council for many years and always endeavored to advance the interests of the town and to open the way for further enterprises

In religion, Mr. Hamilton was a staunch Presbyterian and a member of St. Paul's church.

A large family are left to mourn the loss of a kind and affectionate father, to whom the sincere sympathy of the community will be extended in their hour of sorrow.

The funeral will take place from his late residence, Reid Street, to-morrow (Saturday) afternoon and proceed to the Little Lake Cemetery for interment.

KILLED BY A FALL

Former Peterboro Resident Meets a Sudden Death in Cornwall

On Saturday night last, Mr. R. Way C. E. an old gentleman aged 82, who has for some time been residing with his nephew in Cornwall, fell down stairs and broke his neck. The old gentleman and two children aged 15 and 7 years respectively were alone in the house at the time. Death was instantaneous, his neck being broken.

The deceased was formerly a resident of Peterborough for many years book-keeper in the Auburn Woollen Mills. In his younger days he was a prominent land surveyor on the Isle of Wight.

His many acquaintances in Peterborough will be grieved to hear of his sudden death.

THE HOCKEY MATCH

A VERY FINE SPECIMEN

A Beautiful Mottled Owl Secured by Mr. S. D. Carver Monaghan

Owls are very plentiful in this country this winter and many have been shot, but perhaps the finest bird yet taken is the one killed by Mr. S. D. Carver a few days ago. This bird had been giving considerable trouble among the hens and turkeys in the vicinity of the Gravel Road and a few days ago Mr. Carver decided to capture the owl. He secured a very strong trap and fastened it to a board, which in turn was fastened securely to a post. A mouse was used for a bait and the other night the owl came along and seeing the mouse, at once pounced upon it with the result that one of its legs was caught in the trap. A fierce fight for liberty ensued as the jaws of the trap were twisted almost out of shape. The next day Mr. Carver visited the trap and found the owl caught in it. A few blows from a stick finished the bird, which on being measured was found to be 4 feet 3 inches from tip to tip. The bird will be stuffed and mounted.

NEW RINK TO BE BUILT

This was Decided on at a Meeting Held Last Night

For some years past it has been a well known fact that the present rink on Charlotte street was too small for hockey and other sports. The matter of enlarging the building came up at a recent meeting of the company and it was decided not to enlarge the present building.

This being well known in town, several of our citizens who are anxious to see a good hockey rink and who are interested in winter sports, talked the matter over and decided to hold a meeting and invite all interested in the matter to be present. As a result a large number of influential men met in the office of Mr. G. W. Hatton, last night and gave the subject their careful consideration. The chair was taken by Mayor Deane, and Mr. Hatton acted as secretary. With a number of influential men interested it is not to be wondered at that it was unanimously decided to take steps at once to secure a suitable place for a rink and Messrs. Henderson, LeBrun, and Hatton were appointed a committee to look for a suitable site and obtain an option on the property, the report to be handed in at the next meeting.

It was decided to organize a company with a capital of $10,000 and to get a charter from the Ontario Government.

After some discussion as to the size of the rink and some preliminary business the chairman announced that stock books would be opened at the meeting and invited those present to subscribe stock in the company. In a few minutes nearly $1,000 was subscribed. The capital of the company will be divided into 1,000 shares of $10.00 each, which will give everybody interested an opportunity to help the project along.

The next meeting will be held on Monday night at 8 o'clock in the offices of Mr. G. W. Hatton when the report of the committee will be received and further business taken up.

An Upto-date Establishment.

One of the brightest and most up-to-date groceries we have had the pleasure of entering is that of Mr. H. F. Kidd, the George street grocer. There is an air of freshness pervading his whole store, and he is noted for the wholesome, standard quality of his goods. There is one feature of this neat and tidy store which appeals perhaps more than anything else, to the average buyer, and this is the unfailing courtesy of the clerks employed by Mr. Kidd. It seems to matter nothing whether the purchase be a pound of sugar or a chest of his invigorating tea, so far as care and perfect attention to the purchaser are concerned. The stand is the best in town, fitted according to modern ideas, and he is always prompt in delivery. With his business on a cash basis, he is able to sell at an extremely close margin, and he cheerfully refunds the purchase money should any article not fully satisfy the customer. We have noticed on his shelves a large and varied assortment of canned meats, vegetables and fruits, and his stock of fish and vegetables of all descriptions excells anything we have seen. We have heard many remarks on the fine grade of tea, coffee and spices of all kinds always obtainable there, and Mr. Kidd tells us that the selection of goods in this department receives his special attention. He has his butter, eggs and meat, from parties known to him personally, and on whom he can depend for strictly fresh and wholesome food.

REASONS WHY THE WAR CONTINUES

BRITISH SOLDIERS MUST HAVE COMFORT

Sixty Five Mobile Columns Persuing the Boer Commandoes

The Bulk of the British Transport Astonished the Boers

Lord Kitchener's Orders to Discard All Heavy Articles Disobeyed

The Collecting Habit of the British Soldier Could Not Be Overcome

London, Feb 15—There are still sixty-five mobile British columns roaming over the veldt in search of Boer commandoes, but when the list of weekly captures was found to work out at about one Boer and a dozen head of cattle a week for each column, it was felt that something should be done to give a fillip to their mobility. They were ordered to discard pianos, kitchen ranges and sofas from theirfighting equipment. It is very doubtful if any notice has been taken of the order, for the collecting habit is not easy to eradicate. A man who accompanied more than one of them can testify that the only reason why there were no four-poster beds among the baggage trains was that in South African farmhouses these are usually fixtures built into the wall.

Yet it was not that these accumulations reduced a swing pace to a crawling one, for from the first there never was any quick moving for more than a couple of days at a time. The organization of the transport made it impossible. The first of the flying columns flew at the rate of two and a half miles an hour. It might cover more than thirty miles in a day, and perhaps make rapid dashes in emergency, but its food was always dragging along behind at two and a half mile an hour.

Oxen were the chosen draught animals. They could be depended on not to stampede under fire or in the contagious night panics, like mules, and they did not require forage to be carried for them to anything like the extent that horses did. But they had to be unyoked and allowed to graze for three or four hours in the middle of every day, and in the long run they always regulated the pace of the column that they were feeding. For a time they tried to split up the stores among light two-wheeled carts for the smaller columns, but that threw the commissariat organization out of gear, and so long freight wagons dragged by sixteen oxen and laden with about five tons remained the rule.

It was the bulk of the British transport that astonished the Boers every time they saw it. The Predikant at Jacobsdahl, with the live interest in this world and the next which characterized the burghers' preacher, declared when he saw the solid, lumbering wagons of British stores, built it seemed to carry the heaviest irongirders, that they would never catch anybody if they had to drag such unwieldy carts after them.

With the Boers the difference is that each individual fighting man does pretty nearly everything that is necessary. His mealies and bread rusks and biltong are all of light bulk and when he cooks and shifts for himself he naturally makes them go further than the infantry soldiers do with their food. The regimental idea is that one set of men carries the rations, another issues them, still another cooks them, and the fourth lot distributes them to the company sections, whose business it is to eat them. It is not an elastic system, and has to leave an enormous margin for waste.

Even more amazing to the Boer eye has been the prodigal destruction of valuable stuff when the British thought the occasion allowed them to jettison their stores with impunity. In crossing the then Orange Free State with 50,000 marching and mounted men from the western railway line to Bloemfontein it was decided to stop sending on supplies from the base and to draw up the men on the lines of communication to join the main column. The pace was to be quickened—eighteen or twenty miles a day instead of ten or a dozen; and this army was to arrive in Bloemfontein with just enough stores to keep it alive until the railway from that point to the south was restored and more could be sent up.

In the middle of the bare velt where this decision was taken, the stores were counted out for redistribution. It was found that their bulk was so enormous that to carry them all would mean to slacken the pace of the proposed forced march. The matter was settled by heaping together a million dollars worth, putting some oil and explosive charges about it and lighting a fuse. This was in order that the abandoned stores should not fall into the hands of the Boers. The loaded wagons blazed and smoked for days, but it was weeks before the noncombatants and Kaffirs had finished salvaging hundreds of tons of compressed horse forage, beef biscuits, jam, coffee, and the charred wagons themselves.

In spite of such periodical destructions the continual complaint of the top men in authority was of the encumbrance of the things the army had to take along with it. The man who had the business of adjusting the minimum of bulk to the maximum of marching capacity was Lord Kitchener. De Aar Junction was the place where he tried to put his foot down. Beyond that point the railroad was less and less serviceable and mule and ox transport had the more to be depended on. His daily work as traffic manager at De Aar was to throw everything outside of what he thought bare necessities from the railroad freight wagons onto the open velt and leave it there, no matter whether it was addressed to a prince or a private.

Like smugglers trying to dodge past the customs inspector the clingers to comfort thought that Lord Kitchener's rules were all right in a general way but always found reasons why they should be exempt. Law suits have since been brought in England to settle who should suffer from his determination to keep down the quantity of stores the army carried if it were possible. Fashionable caterers on the order of friends of fashionable regiments sent out thousands of pounds worth of wines and delicacies to officers' messes. For a while he threw them all on the velt and with them consignments of camp beds, pajamas and much else that aroused his scorn.

One day at the railroad platform at De Aar he came upon a group of sergeants keeping the closest guard over a row of cases marked "Reserved Boots." It struck him as an unusual anxiety and he had the cases opened. They were filled with Scotch whiskey, which kind-hearted comrades down at the base in Cape Town had labelled, as they believed, with safety. When Kitchener was found to be holding back even "reserved boots," the sergeant in charge of this particular consignment told his secret to the others and they made it their business to try and see that the "boots" were not thoughtlessly lost altogether or sent to the wrong people.

The Army Medical Department had approved a special brand of West Indian rum as good to give the men at night twice or thrice a week. The sugar in it was sustaining and it was food as well as stimulant. Taken before sleeping when the African night temperature sometimes drops forty degrees in a few hours, it was said to strengthen the stomach against fever, but it was another of the things that Kitchener thought might go. It is true that he let it get up as far as the fighting columns, but when he spread out his divisions for actual campaigning he left his convoy of rum a few miles away from anybody and Delarey swooped down on it. He took the whole 200 wagons. Testimonials to the quality of this rum were forthcoming from the inhabitants of most of the Boer towns that the British afterward occupied. The last news of it came three months afterward on the entry into Kroonstad, when the weary marcher learned to his dismay that the last gallon jars of it had been dashed down into the rocky river bed the night before by the Boers.

But it has been no use trying to keep down encumbrances even by throwing them off railway trains. The collecting habit could always be gratified by gathering clocks and pictures and pianos. Against this snail's pace and the absence of military achievements there remains the fact that there is not a single recorded case of a man dying from hunger anywhere in the war. And for the last eighteen months the greater proportion of the Boers have kept in good health on British supplies, which are still forthcoming. The commissariat business crowded out the effective use of firearms; or rather, one side made a specialty of the wholesale provision business and the other of shooting straight.

WHO IS IT?

It is rumored that the Conservatives of West Peterborough are in a quandary over the problem of getting a candidate for the next election in June. One well-known gentleman who was supposed to be amenable to the requests of the party in this respect, has gone over to the Prohibitionists altogether. He was always "teetotal" however, and has gone to join the anti-liquor men without respect of party. This is a sign of the times, and we may look forward to a condition of perplexity on the part of both Grits and Tories when the day of choice shall come. That the Conservatives will find a man to run against Mr. Stratton is certain. There is to be, we understand, no compromise. There will be such an election in June as will make the heart of the election fiend glad. That the Prohibitionists will bring out a man in West Peterborough is doubtful. However, we shall see what we shall see.

Speaker's Sore Throat

Public speakers and singers know how useless and sickening are cough mixtures, sprays, lozenges, etc., for irritable or sore throat, and state that the most satisfactory remedy is Catarrhozone, the advantage of which is that it acts quickly and is convenient to use in public places. Catarrhozone relieves congestion, allays inflammation, and is a protection to the membrane. As a safeguard against colds and catarrh it has no equal. Rev. Mr. McKay, Goderich, says "Catarrhozone is an excellent remedy for throat irritation." Physicians, ministers and singers recommend Catarrhozone. Druggists sell it for $1.00. Small size 25c. Toronto Branch British Empire League Condemn's C. O. D. Contingent

Toronto, Feb. 14.—Last evening the Toronto Branch of the British Empire League condemned in no unsparing terms the Government's action in sending a C.O.D. contingent to South Africa. As a result of the meeting the delegation of the Toronto branch at the annual meeting of the league in Ottawa next week will urge the Government to defray the expenditure on the last contingent.

Dr. Parkin, chairman of the meeting, expressed the regret which he felt at the premature return of the Canadian contingents at a critical period in the war, and at the fact that while the other self-governing colonies had been sending troops to the front Canada had stood back. He spoke of the way in which the present contingent so far represents only the enthusiasm and spirit of adventure of a certain number of young men, and not the Canadian people.

Rev. Dr. Potts spoke in the same strain.

Mr. G. T. Blackstock approved of what Dr. Parkin and Dr. Potts had said, Canada was making a very shabby exhibition of herself in sending a contingent and not undertaking in such prosperous times to pay for it. At the same time, it was a practical question. They must settle with the Province of Quebec. The subject needed delicate handling. The present happy relations between Quebec and the rest of the Dominion were the result of the labors of a series of wise Premiers. A little indiscretion might place Quebec in the same relation to the rest of confederation as Ireland bore to Great Britain.

Mr. J. Castell Hopkins moved a resolution approving of Col. Denison's plan, and asking that the expenses of the contingent be paid by Canada. Mr. Geo. Kerr pointed out that this departed in some degree from the purpose for which the meeting had been called, and Mr. G. R. R. Cockburn suggested that the delegation to the Ottawa meeting be instructed to convey to Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the other members of the Cabinet the sense of the meeting. Mr. Hopkins withdrew his motion, and Mr. Cockburn's suggestion was adopted. In putting it Dr. Parkin adverted to Prof. Baker's suggestion that a public meeting be called. They could undoubtedly crowd Massey Hall any time, but such a meeting might create animosities.

Peterboro' Railway Company

Toronto Feb. 14. —The Peterborough Radial Railway Company presented an entirely new bill to the Railway Committee this morning, the original draft having asked privileges which were regarded as dangerous. As submitted this morning it requested to be given power to build lines to Chemong, a distance of 9 miles, to Lakefield, a distance of 11 miles, and to Rice Lake, a distance of 20 miles, it placed the capital stock at $500,000, and the bonding power at $20,000 per mile. The bill was altered by striking out a clause giving them power to build five mile branches, and instead of getting ten years to complete the line they must have it finished in five, and they must begin within three years.

Mr. Pattullo objected to the high bonding power, $20,000 a mile being in his opinion too much for a company with a capitalization of only $500,000. The representative of the Company said that they could not tell to what extent it was necessary to bond the road, but he thought, and the committee took his view, that $20,000 was not too high.

Prince Henry's Preparations

Kiel, Prussia, Feb. 12.— Mayor Low of New York, has cabled to Prince Henry of Prussia, saying that Herr Wiegand, Director General of the North German Lloyd Line, thinks that unless the Kron Prinz Wilhelm sails from Bremen earlier than three o'clock Saturday afternoon, she will not be able to arrive at New York, owing to the rough weather which prevails at this season of the year, until late in the afternoon of February 22, too late to allow sufficient time for the ceremony of the municipal welcome and the presentation to the Prince of the freedom of the City of New York. When asked if the steamer could not leave Bremen at an earlier hour, Prince Henry replied that he was unable to change the sailing hour of the Kron Prinz Wilhelm, but, he added, she would do her best to reach New York early on Saturday, February 22. The Kron Prinz Wilhelm is not chartered by Prince Henry. He and his party go simply as passengers, and it is too late now to notify the hundreds of other passengers that the steamer would sail twelve hours earlier than heretofore announced, as she would have to do, in order to catch the tide. Herr Wiegand's view of the case is not shared by the Commander of the Kron Prinz Wilhelm. The latter thinks the steamer can reach New York by midday, Feb. 22.

Vienna, Feb. 12.— The Anglo-Japanese treaty of alliance is the feature of to-day's news in the Austrian newspapers, and Russia's probable action is widely discussed. The consensus of opinion among those who are generally in touch with Russian views is that the militant Muscovites will endeavor to revenge themselves by stirring up disorders in Afghanistan, while the Russian Government will lie low, awaiting the movement which Japan, having organized the military forces of China, will join hands with the latter, and drive out all Europeans, with the exception of the Russians, who by that time will occupy an impregnable position in Manchuria. Some of the papers affect to see in the publication of the treaty at the time when Prince Henry of Prussia is starting for the United States, "Great Britain's reply to Germany's rapprochement with the United States."

DEAD CONSTABLES STRIPPED

Description of Death of Corp. Sloan and Trooper Medway

North Bay, Feb. 14.— Trooper Alexander Ingles, of the South African Constabulary, has written to his father, who resides here, detailing the circumstances surrounding the death of Corporal Sloan and Trooper Medway, of the S. A. C., at Witpoortje. The three men were suddenly surrounded by a force of three hundred Boers, while on outpost duty, very suddenly, and in a spot which afforded no chance for taking cover. The Boers fired at fifty yards range with Mauser pistols. Medway was shot in the face and leg, and Sloan in the breast and back. Having expended all his ammunition, Ingles laid flat on the ground alongside his mortally wounded comrades.

Ingles then tells a horrifying story of Boer cruelty, he says:—

"Well, after we stopped firing they kept at it for about five minutes. I felt lots of the bullets entering the ground under me; they would throw up the ground against my rifle. I began to think of my mother, and the next moment one of the Boers hit me on the head with his rifle. I got up and he grabbed my rifle, hat and shirt. When my shirt came off a young lad about 16 years of age, not more than ten feet away, fired at me, the bullet entering my shoulder. It did not strike the bone, but tore all the flesh off. Then they took off my boots; my socks were knitted ones, and in trying to pull them off they became fast on my heels, and they dragged me over the rocks until they came off. They also took my pants, in the pockets of which I had 12 shillings. I stood in the hot sun for 25 minutes, the Boers in the meantime hitting me with their whips and butt ends of their rifles. Growing weak from the loss of blood, I had to lie down, but they lift me over and over again until I was obliged to get up. By this time Corporal Sloan was dying, and to the last he kept crying "Ingles, Ingles, Ingles!"

Ingles was then told that he was to be shot, and preparations were immediately made for the carrying out of the threat. A bewhiskered Boer officer came along presently, however, and countermanded the order, ordering that Ingles be freed. After he had started back to the British camp he was shot at. He says that the bodies of Sloan and Medway were stripped and left naked.

RESULT OF A DISTURBANCE

Berlin, Feb. 14 — The frequent differences of opinion which have occurred in the Customs Committee of the Reichstag culminated this morning after several disturbing incidents in an open split and in the resignation of the chairman, Baron Von Kardorff, one of the Agrarian leaders.

Although Count Von Posadowski-Wehner, the Imperial Secretary of State for the Interior, declared the Government could not accept the suggestion, the Committee by a large majority adopted a motion to the effect that the tariff bill should become effective January 1, 1905, at the latest. This was followed by several Liberal motions, which Baron Von Kardorff refused to entertain. The Liberals and Socialists violently denounced the chairman's ruling and the Committee subsequently overruled the chair. The chairman's resignation followed.

RUSSIA AND THE TREATY

St. Petersburg, Feb. 15.— The censor pigeonholed for a time the text of the Anglo-Japanese treaty, and the newspaper yesterday evening were only permitted to publish it without comment. From the few editorials on the subject in the morning papers, it might be gathered that Russia was a party to both the preliminary negotiations and the treaty itself.

MANCHURIA IN NEW TREATY.

London, Feb. 14.—In the House of Commons yesterday Viscount Cranborne, Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, replying to a question by Mr. Henry Norman, member for South Southampton, said the United States had not yet expressed an opinion on the Anglo-Japanese treaty.

In reply to further questions as to whether the alliance applied to Manchuria and its occupation by Russia, and whether the agreement had received the adhesion of the German Government, Viscount Cranborne said Manchuria was no more excluded than any other province in China. The substance of the agreement had been communicated to Germany.

Lord Cranborne declared that the contracting parties were bound to undertake mutual defence only when danger was due to the aggression of others. The power called upon to help the other must be the judge whether the condition of the treaty had been fulfilled.

Continuing, he said the new treaty was merely along the lines already accepted by almost every power. Great Britain's commercial position in China was of the greatest importance, and who could say what its importance would become in the future, with China's infinite capacity for expansion? Great Britain's commercial position, though great, was not unchallenged. Spheres of influence did not suit her. She wanted the whole of China open to industrial enterprise. The Government was bound to take every care in safeguarding its commercial rights in the Orient. Japan's special interest was governed by her geographical position. Her army and Great Britain's navy were acting in concert, and were [illegible] able to [illegible] this [illegible] policy.

PRINCE HENRYS TOUR AROUSES GREAT JEALOUSY

The German Prince's Visit to the United States Excites Envy in Europe

Kaiser's Move Considered of More Importance Than Any Recent Event

Regarded as a Clever Piece of Diplomacy by the Berlin Count

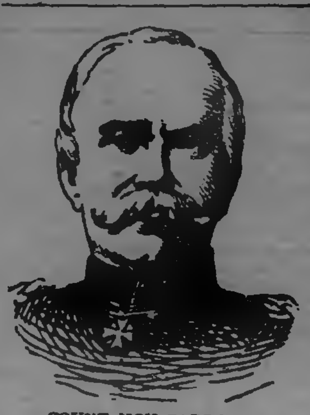
London, Feb. 15—Prince Henry's visit to the United States claims a larger share of public interest in Europe than any other approaching event. The reiterated protests that it does not bear any political significance serve simply to confirm the opposite conviction in the general European mind.

Everybody is quite willing to accept the repeated declarations that Prince Henry has not been instructed on any diplomatic mission save to the American people at large. That mission, the success of which is practically assured, has in the European belief greater political importance than any event since the consummation of the Franco-Russian alliance. It is not what Prince Henry does which European Chancelleries will watch with keener interest than any other development in international relationship now pending, but what the American people will do.

Not to put too fine a point on it, Europe is anxiously waiting to learn what effect German blandishments will have upon the hearts and minds of a nation where every man is his own Secretary of State. It was at first marvelled at, but is now generally understood in the Old World that Prince Henry's purpose might have been completely gained if he had not visited Washington and had not met a single member of the Executive Government. More than one foreign minister wishes that he had been the one to discover this fact before the Kaiser. They have been taking belated advantage of this knowledge in their efforts to convince the American people of the good will of their respective countries during the Spanish war. It is only the diplomatic rule which requires the consent of all concerned to the publication of international communications which protects certain of those who have been professing too much from exposure in a very embarrassing light. There is a wholesome disappointment among some Continental statesmen who realise now that it is worse than useless to attempt to hoodwink American public opinion in this matter.

There has been some apprehension in England lest Prince Henry's visit should prove detrimental to Anglo-American relations. This has largely disappeared, the only remaining effect being perhaps a slight augmentation of anti-German feeling in this country which is now deep, ineradicable, and certain to bear fruit in future history. It finds such expression to-day as a long article in the Spectator urging an Anglo-French understanding and arguing that it is impossible ever to remove the antagonism of interest, between Great Britain and Germany.

Russia is silent. Russia is always silent, but there is no less interest in St. Petersburg than in other capitals in Prince Henry's visit. There is reason to believe that some regrets are felt in certain quarters in the Russian capital over the drastic course pursued in retaliation against American action on the sugar bounty. It is by no means impossible that when this question arises again, as it must presently, that a more conciliatory attitude will be adopted by the Czar's representatives. Russia rarely makes a diplomatic mistake and her statesmen are quite clever enough to correct one.



COUNT VON CAPRIVE,
Chancellor of Germany.

PEACE WOULD BE GOOD NEWS TO BRITAIN

Interest Felt in the Peace Proposals for Africa

ORIGIN OF THE MOVEMENT

British Determined to Settle the Radical Question for all Time

Much Depends on General Botha—House of Commons Getting Out of Touch with the People

London, Feb 14—The deep longing for peace prevailing in this country is shown by the earnest desire of the public, and especially of the Stock Exchange and the financial community, to read in the recent proposals of the Dutch Prime Minister more than they really contain. The House of Commons quickly forms a public opinion of its own on all important subjects as they come up. This opinion sometimes remains floating in the the form of lobby opinion. The lobby opinion of the House of Commons is always shrewd and generally accurate. The view taken by the members of Parliament competent to judge of the feeling in the house is that Dr. Kuyper's proposal for a Commission to visit South Africa is a wholesome sign. In April, 1901, the Boers had the opportunity of making peace on the following terms:

First.—The grant of an amnesty in the Transvaal and Orange River Colony for all bona fide acts of war committed during the recent hostilities.

Second.—All prisoners of war to be brought back to their country as quickly as possible.

Third.—Civil administration to be established at the earliest practicable date.

Fourth. — Church property, public trusts and orphan funds to be respected.

Fifth.—The Dutch language to be used and taught in public schools where the parents of children desire it, and allowed in courts of law.

Sixth.—The British Treasury to grant £1,000,000 to repay our enemies for goods requisitioned from them by the Boer Governments.

Seventh.—The question of assisting by loan the occupants of farms who have sustained losses to be taken into immediate consideration.

Eighth.—Firearms to be retained by burghers under license and registration on taking the oath of allegiance.

These terms were contemptuously refused. Peace will be quite as eagerly welcomed in England as in South Africa, but as I have always told the readers of the Times, the Government is backed by a united nation in resolving that peace when it comes shall be a real peace, not an armistice; that the settlement shall be a real settlement, not patchwork. So long as the Boers believe that they can beat us so long must the war go on.

I am surprised to find that not a single English newspaper has been able to publish the name of the prime mover in the recent communications between the Dutch Ministry and the Colonial and Foreign offices in London. I have reason to believe that Lord Reay is the mainspring of the whole movement. Donald James Mackay, eleventh Lord Reay, is a man 63 years of age. He is an English peer and a Dutch nobleman, being Baron Mackay of Ophemert, Holland. He is the chief of the Clan Mackay in Scotland; he is the chairman of the London school board; has been Lord Rector of St. Andrew's University, Governor of Bombay, Under Secretary for India, and President of the Royal Asiatic Society. During the continuance of the present war, Lord Reay has had a difficult part to play. As a Dutchman, society has looked at him askance. He has been treated as a pro-Boer. In the best sense he is a pro-Boer just as he is a pro-Englishman. Lord Reay is a man of ripe judgment, great culture and tried experience. His communication with Dr. Kuyper, if my information is correct, is the immediate cause of the pourparler that has recently taken place. There is further reason to believe that when Lord Rosebery spoke at Chesterfield about the "wayside inn," Lord Reay's inquiries and suggestions at The Hague were [illegible] known to him. It was [illegible] remarked on the platform at Chesterfield, after Lord Rosebery had finished, that no such reference to the "wayside inn," would have been made by a statesman who had held the position of Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs unless he had tangible ground for doing so.

An early peace depends apparently upon the attitude of General Botha. It is significant that for the last three months little or nothing has been heard of the most statesmanlike of the Boer generals. Still, whether General Botha surrenders or fights to a finish, the end will be the same. It is considered undignified and inexpedient to take steps to bring the war to an end which will not, at the same time, carry conviction to the minds of the Dutch population of South Africa that the settlement is final and is not the result of a slim diplomacy on the part of the Dutch or Boer Anglophobes. The one consideration that is dominant in the mind of everyone who is not a pro-Boer is expressed in Mr. Chamberlain's formula of "Never again." Additional suffering, prolongation of the war, and greater sacrifices in the present are preferable to any measure that would leave the racial question in South Africa unsettled.

NOTE AND COMMENT

An appeal from the Boers for arbitration is about due at this phase of the struggle.

China is getting so progressive with its foot enlargement reform that there is grave danger of it reaching the other extreme and resulting in enlarged head.

The most significant incident recently in connection with the simmering out of the war is that Holland newspaper giving away the fact that it had been bribed by Leyds to slander the British forces. It indicates that the Boer bar'l has run dry.

ITEMS OF INTEREST

London, Feb. 13.—The Times says the general body of Unionists approves the treaty between Great Britain and Japan, as well as some Liberal Imperialists, but some old Parliamentary hands are disposed to be non-committal on the ground that the treaty is a departure from the policy of isolation which this country has hitherto pursued.

Henry Norman (Liberal) proposes to ask Mr. Cranborne in the Commons to-day whether the treaty was communicated to the United States Government before being published, and if that Government expressed any opinion regarding it.

The Berlin correspondent of the Times says the unanimity with which the German papers regard the agreement as directed against Russia is characteristic. It is well known in Berlin that Japan is the one power in dealing with which Russia manifests the greatest circumspection and consideration.

The Journal des Debats, quoted by the Paris correspondent of the Times, thinks Japan has made a bad bargain. In case of war the conditions seem to be settled more favorably for England than Japan. Russia is the only power against which Japan is likely to war, and no European nor American power is likely to join Russia against Japan. On the other hand, considering Great Britain's ambitions in China, a coalition of powers against her is possible, and in that case Japan would be obliged to intervene in her favor.

Great Britain, says Debats, has assumed merely theoretical obligations toward Japan, while those of Japan towards Great Britain may assume a more practical character. Other powers cannot be indifferent to the alliance, which places them in the Far East face to face with Great Britain, less accommodating than ever.

A Rural School Board.

SOME up-to-date teachers tell strange stories of their conversations with school trustees regarding some of the studies that have been added to "the three R's" in country schools. In "Max Adler's" new novel, "Captain Bluitt," appears the following passage, which will remind many teachers of something similar:

"I should like," said Director Robinson, "to ask what is this metric system that I find some of the children trying to learn?"

The principal explained the metric system.

"Nothing to do with hymns, with long metre and short metre and hallelujah metres?" asked Director Robinson, who sang in the Baptist choir.

The principal said it had not.

"Did I understand you to say," enquired Mr. Matlack, "that the system came from France?"

"Yes," responded the principal.

"There's another queer move," said Mr. Matlack, with strong emphasis. "You start in with an Italian poet, Dant, and then you fetch along a French system with names nobody can understand, and after a while I reckon you'll be flying the British flag in the front yard and singing 'God Save the Queen.' There's a good deal too much foreign influence. This country's good enough for me. I'm an American and this is an American school. I say fly the American flag and sing American songs, and have American systems and shove the foreigners out. We can run our own business. Why don't you get a bust of General Washington?"

Director Ferguson asked if he might be permitted to interrogate the principal, and having obtained permission, he asked:

"Don't you think we are going just a little too fast?"

"In what particular?" enquired the principal.

"Well, in putting in this metric system, just at this time, for example."

"I think myself," interposed the president, "that the movement is somewhat permature."

"And then," continued Director Ferguson, "I found my boy last night rassling with algebra and nearly crying over it. I told him to drop it, and I'd have it dropped in the school if I run the school. I never knowed no algebra, and I'll be satisfied if my boy makes out as well as I did."

The principal attempted briefly to indicate the nature and purposes of algebra.

"That's all very well, Mr. Brown," said Director Ferguson. "It's your business of course to care for such things, but we're a practical people, with no nonsense about us. Figgers is for figgerin', and letters is for letterin'. There's no use of tryin' to figger with letters while there's plenty of figgers to figger with. Now is there?"

"You see"—began the principal.

"I don't care to argue about it," said Mr. Ferguson, interrupting him, "but the fact is you can't any more subtract 'a' from 'b,' like my boy was tryin' to do last night, than you can subtract the dinner-bell from the poker. It ain't in the nature of things."

The principal did not reply.

"My boy also says," continued Mr. Ferguson, "that his teacher won't allow him to say knowed. Why not?"

"Knowed?" asked the principal. "K-n-o-w-e-d?"

"Yes, knowed. He says the teacher tried to make him say knew."

"Of course," said the principal. "Know, knew. That's right; there is no such word as knowed."

"I guess there is," answered Director Ferguson, with a scornful laugh.

"I guess so, too," echoed Mr. Matlack, "and it's a good deal better to say knowed than to be putting Dant (Dante) up on the shelf and bringing the children's minds under European influences."

"Knowed is not good English," said the principal.

"Maybe not," said Mr. Matlack, "but it's good American and that's the best there is."

"You say mowed," asked Mr. Ferguson, "and rowed, and show, showed, and stow, stowed, and glow, glowed, don't you?"

"Yes."

"Very well, then, you say know, knowed, and grow, growed, and hoe, hoed."

And Director Ferguson tipped back his chair and looked around him like a man who has just won a great victory.

New Use For Cigars.

A NEW YORK young man just back from a trip in Canada was telling his friends of the times he had had.

"We took a horse and a buckboard," said he, "from Xavier Station out into the woods for a day's shooting. When we got there of course we unhitched the horse and took off the harness. Then we went hunting.

"At night, when we came in to hitch up, hanged if we knew how to do it! In about an hour we got nearly all the harness on, but the old horse wouldn't let us put the bit in his mouth. We couldn't drive him without that.

"My companion said: 'Say, have you lots of cigars?'

"'Yes,' said I; 'but what has that to do with it?'

"'Well,' said he, 'we shall just sit down and smoke till that brute yawns!' And we did it."

Domestic Reform.

Once upon a time there was a Woman who married a Man to Reform him.

And she did.

She made him Quit his Evil Ways, and he did not Drink, nor Chew, nor Smoke, nor Swear, nor Stay out at Nights.

In fact, he became as Mild as Skim Milk.

Now, when this Result was Achieved, the Woman began to Worry. He had lost his Charm for her. She Discovered that she had been more Interested in his Faults than in his Virtues, because after she had Fanned him out he didn't Assay worth a Cent along the Line of Good Qualities. He was simply a Negative Equation.

But the Man had Some Sense, after all. He saw what was Bothering her, so he Swore just a Little, and Drank just a Little, and Smoked occasionally, and took a Chew on the Sly.

Then she had the Fun of Reforming him all over Again. And she was perfectly Happy, because she could Point with Pride to him at regular Intervals.

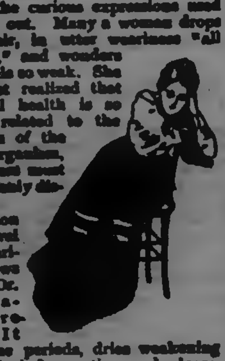
Australia's Governor-General.

It is feared in some quarters that the Earl of Hopetoun will not be able to complete his term as Governor-General of Australia. His Lordship has never entirely shaken off the effects of the illness which prostrated him in India on his way out to Australia, and though he was really prominent as the host of the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall, he has since, owing to his unsatisfactory health, been unable to fulfil many of his public engagements.

"Played Out"



one of the curious expressions used for worked out. Many a woman drops into a chair, in utter weariness "all played out," and wonders why she feels so weak. She has not yet realized that the general health is so intimately related to the local health of the womanly organism, that weakness must follow womanly diseases.

Restoration of the general health invariably follows the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It regulates the periods, dries weakening drains, heals inflammation and ulceration, and cures female weakness. It tranquilizes the nerves, encourages the appetite and induces refreshing sleep.

There is no substitute for "Favorite Prescription," for there is nothing "just as good" for womanly ills.

"I wish to advise the suffering women of this great land, of the good I have received from Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and 'Golden Medical Discovery,'" writes Mrs. Mary Sheppard, of Columbus Grove, Putnam Co., Ohio. "For four years I had been a sufferer from female troubles, and at times was unable to do even the housework for three in the family. I had such pains that I suffered almost death dozens of times, but after taking five bottles of your medicines I can truthfully say that my health was greatly improved. I have a good appetite and am gaining in flesh right along. This spring is the first time in five years that I have done my house cleaning all by myself and without the least fatigue whatever. I hope all suffering women may find relief as I have done.

"My gain in weight has been just ten pounds, and I am still gaining."

NORTH AMERICAN OIL & REFINING COMPANY'S

Stock and It Will Make You Rich

The company owns 2,080 acres of land located in the Newhall-Acton White Oil Fields of Los Angeles County, California. Our manager, Mr. J. H. Parker, writes us under date of Jan. 15th that they have opened up two oil wells near our property, one being a gusher of white oil just as clear as alcohol, and of 52 degrees gravity. This oil is worth and is selling at $4.00 per barrel at the well, and producing better than 50 barrels per day. Our derrick is up and the machinery purchased; we expect to be drilling in a very short time. We now offer to the public 100,000 shares of this meritorious company's stock at the low price of 10 cents per share, and it is worth a great deal more money at the present time with the showing we have in the property. The demand for this oil is far greater than the supply, which is not so of the black oils of Lower California and Beaumont, Texas, that are a drug upon the market.

Regarding the officers of the company, they are all men of honor and means. There are no salaries paid to any of the officers, not even our General Manager, until our company is put on a paying basis.

INCORPORATION.

The company is capitalized for 1,500,000 shares, the incorporation having been effected under the laws of Wyoming, stock being all common stock, issued absolutely fully paid and forever non-assessable. The incorporation laws of Wyoming are peculiarly favorable to oil enterprises, and the par value of the stock has been fixed at One Cent per share in order to avoid the excessive revenue tax paid on stocks of a high par value.

LIABILITIES.

The company has no debts; all stock is fully paid and non-assessable, there are no stockholders' liabilities, and we have no royalties to pay for any purpose.

OUR LANDS.

The company's lands have been carefully selected by their engineer, Mr. J. H. Parker, who is also Vice President and General Manager, in conjunction with four of the best oil experts, who are well known throughout the state. These experts each unbeknown to the other went over our vast territory to locate a site to sink our first well; their reports are on file in the Company's office, and we will be pleased to mail a copy of the same upon application, also maps of the oil fields with our property showing in the red. The directors call special attention to the maps, which have been drawn from actual surveys and personal inspection of the land and is accurate. The company's lands are distinctly shown as well as their relation to other oil lands and the location of oil wells, oil sepages and oil springs. A careful inspection of the map will aid prospective investors to judge of the oil under the company's lands.

The geological formation is perfect, the Anticlinal passing through the entire property, and being unbroken by granite formations.

GUARANTEE.

The officers and directors of the company have such great faith in the proposition that they will redeem all stock sold for cash, providing they do not strike oil as designated.

TREASURY STOCK.

The company holds in the treasury over 500,000 shares of treasury stock and some money. The proceeds of sale from the 100,000 shares now offered to the public will be used for the purpose of sinking wells.

REGISTRATION.

The stock is registered with the Colorado Title & Trust Company of Colorado Springs, Colorado, which guarantees any over-issue of stock.

The company would like to employ a few good Fiscal Agents to handle any part of this 100,000 shares of stock, giving them a very liberal commission. We take pleasure in recommending this stock to the good people of Peterborough and vicinity at the very low price of 10 cents per share; considering the conditions of the property the stock is worth more money than what we are asking for it.

Anecdotal.

It is related that once, when a captain in the army was cornered by the enemy, he addressed his men as follows: "My men, fight like demons until your powder gives out, then run. I'm a little lame, I'll start now."

An English rector on coming into a new parish, asked the clerk if there were any Puseyites (followers of Dr. Pusey, a high churchman) in the community. "No, sir," replied the clerk; "there used to be some, but for the last two years the boys have took all their eggs."

Mark Twain was recently chaffing Sir Wemyss Reid on the vagaries of English pronunciation. "You spell a name B-e-a-u-c-h-a-m-p, and pronounce it Marchbanks," he said. "And you do precisely the same thing," replied Sir Wemyss. "What do you mean?" asked Mark Twain. "Well, you spell your name C-l-e-m-e-n-s, and you pronounce it Twain."

An error of a new clerk in the mailing department of an English publishing house was responsible the other day for the mailing of a prospectus to a world-famous statesman, who had been dead for some years. The letter was returned a few days later, with the following endorsement: "In Heaven, ——, 1901. Gentlemen: As your publications are not permitted to circulate here, I believe it would be useless for me to subscribe for them. Yours respectfully," and here followed the name of the famous statesman.

When asked what he thought of a certain captain who frequented the Essex links, a Scotch caddie said: "Weel, sir, he's a verra nice gentleman an' a good gaufer, but he's awfu' nerra—awfu' nerra." "Narrow! What do you mean, Donald?" "Weel, sir, it wis this way. Efter the game was ower, and I had carried his clubs up tae the house, he says: 'Donald, will ye hae a draw?' and I said: 'I do be verra pleased,' so he gets the bottle, an' he pourin' oot intae a glass, an' I wantin' tae be genteel, says: 'Stop! stop'—an' he stopped."

What to do with Jefferson Davis should he be captured, was a problem that puzzled Lincoln's Cabinet not a little. In speaking of it to General Grant one day, the President remarked: "There was once an Irishman who had signed the Father Mathew temperance pledge. Going into a saloon to get a glass of lemonade to quench his thirst, he leaned over and whispered to the barkeeper: 'And couldn't you put a little brandy in it unbeknownst to meself?' So," continued Mr. Lincoln, "let Davis escape all unbeknown to yourself if you can."

L. R. Stockwell, the popular actor, says that some years ago in San Francisco, when Peter Jackson, the colored pugilist, was a feature in a revival of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," "Bill" Nye was to have lectured at the Baldwin Theater, but was greeted by so small an audience that he excused himself and went over to hear Jackson talking of the pearly gates to Little Eva. After the performance Stockwell met Nye in the lobby of the theater, and he exclaimed: "Hello, Nye! What did you think of Peter?" "Well," responded the humorist, dryly, "anatomically he was great, but Uncle Tomically he is the worst I ever saw."

Dr. Varnadoe, a noted professor of Greek, is very fond of flowers, and some days ago, on returning from his college duties, he found in his front yard a pestiferous calf belonging to a neighbor. The doctor gave chase, and the animal plunged toward the flowerpit, and in another instant crashed through the glass cover and mixed at random with the pots and plants below. When another professor passed a few minutes later, he said, gravely: "I do not understand, Dr. Varnadoe, why you should object so seriously to having a modest cowslip added to your fine collection of plants." The doctor's frowning face relaxed. "Ah, Sanborn," he retorted, "you see, this was only a [illegible] [illegible]."

The newest floral wonder is the "Shasta daisy," originated by a flower-grower of California. It measures a foot in circumference, and, when one was exhibited recently in a florist's window in San Francisco, people literally flocked to see it. It is really a new kind of flower, and has been produced by several years of crossing and selection, three different kinds of daisies being used—the common American species, the larger and coarser European sort, and the Japanese daisy. There are three rows of petals of the purest white, and each blossom is upheld by a single strong and wiry stem which is nearly two feet long.

The White Lies of Society.

In the white lies of society, women who are otherwise scrupulously truthful, are amazingly proficient, writes Geraldine Bonner in the "Argonaut;" they lie to be agreeable, to please. I have often heard women, who could no more have borne false witness against their neighbor than they could have robbed a church, say they would always send down the message "Not at home" rather than the honest but inhospitable "Engaged." "Not at home" was untrue, but hurts nobody's feelings. "Engaged," which accurately stated the case, was impolite and ungracious, and no one, if they could help it by a little judicious suppressing of facts, would ever be sent hurt from their door. I never shall forget some early lessons I received in the house of a lady who was a social leader and a famous charmer, although well on in years. On her day at home she used to sit where she saw the visitors as they came toward the entrance. One day a young woman appeared, and she exclaimed in a high key of annoyance:

"Good gracious, here's Miss So-and-So, just when I wanted to talk to you"—this to my companion, with a bewilderingly sweet smile. "What a bore she is, and always coming here."

The next moment Miss So-and-So entered, and was greeted with the most flattering air of delighted surprise.

"Why, my dear Miss So-and-So! How good of you to come! What a charming surprise! It's a hundred years since I've seen you," etc.

And Miss So-and-So beamed with the deprecating pleasure of one who feels herself appreciated.

When we had left and were descending the steps, I said somewhat ruefully to my companion:

"I suppose she said just the same about us before we came in, to the people who were there before us."

"Of course she did. Why shouldn't she? She's so charming; and one of the most charming things about her is that she's such a transparent liar. Everybody knows that she doesn't mean a word she says, but likes it just as much as if she did."

Ladies of this type will tell you that good manners are founded on a groundwork of amiable insincerity. If one were perfectly sincere, how horribly rude one would sometimes be! Imagine greeting the familiar remark, "Oh, I'm so sorry; I'm afraid I've disturbed you," with the truthful answer: "You have, and I'm not at all glad you came," or, instead of employing the old reliable "So sorry I couldn't get to see you last Friday," substituting the aggressive uprightness of "I had plenty of time to come round on Friday, but I didn't want to go." White lies do certainly grease the wheels of life, and personally I have the greatest possible respect for them. Anything that makes people more agreeable in the society sense ought to be encouraged. In one's social and domestic relations one should cultivate whatever promotes harmony and lessens friction. There is enough of that in the world outside; and, after all, the Recording Angel is not really on the lookout for white lies. The commandments only stipulate that we refrain from bearing false witness; they do not concern themselves in the least about polite falsehoods.

The Romance of a Necklace.

Great animation reigns just now on the blue shores of Corfu, where all the fishermen of the coast are busy trying their chances for a big catch. But up to now they have not succeeded in smoothing the capricious temper of Dame Fortune, and night after night they go back home very much downhearted. Why? Well, perhaps the story as told by a European correspondent is worth repeating.

At the moment when the news of her son Archduke Rudolph's tragic death was brought to her, the Empress of Austria was wearing a necklace of big pearls which was almost priceless. At night her chamberwoman saw with dismay that the lustrous pearls had become dull and opaque; she ventured to hint as much to her august mistress, who, however, only shrugged her shoulders with a weary gesture, and would not listen. A few weeks later the Empress asked for her pearls, but on opening the case she uttered a cry of surprise. There were her beautiful dewdrops resting on the white satin lining, which now looked brilliant and lovely compared with the dull and greyish pearls. "This is not my necklace!" she said angrily. But she soon knew that, like true old friends, her beloved pearls had gone into mourning with their mistress. She called to her aid all the jewelers of the world to try and bring back the splendid "Orient," which had made her pearls marvelous to look at. But in vain. At last a professor of chemistry at the Vienna University told the Empress that the only remedy for the pearls was to dip them into the sea and leave them there as long as possible. So one day, accompanied only by an old monk, she rowed into a certain little bay round the island, and, with his aid, hid the necklace in a little cranny in the rocks below the waves, and swore him to secrecy over the matter.

The secret, alas, was too well kept, for on hearing the news of his august mistress's tragic death, Father Ambrosio fell dead in the cloister as he was going to early mass; and now both the Empress and her confidant are buried, the one in a damp vault, and the other under the rose bushes at Corfu, while the precious necklace is resting somewhere among the seaweeds, its location unknown to any living being.

"Hello" Before Prayers.

A nervous looking girl consulted a doctor, who asked her what she was suffering from. Her answer was as follows: "I'm a telephone girl, doctor, and the work is a terrible strain on my nerves. The monotony of having a receiver constantly at my ears, and saying 'Hello!' tells upon my nerves. When off duty I am always having 'Hello!' ringing in my ears, and I am constantly saying it. When I go to bed, I wake up from sleep saying 'Hello!' And even when I kneel down to say my prayers I instinctively say 'Hello' before I commence them."

A VERY FINE SPECIMEN

A Beautiful Horned Owl Secured by Mr. S. D. Carver, Monaghan

Owls are very plentiful in this country this winter and many have been shot, but perhaps the finest bird yet taken is the one killed by Mr. S. D. Carver a few days ago. This bird had been giving considerable trouble among the hens and turkeys in the vicinity of the Gravel Road and a few days ago Mr. Carver decided to capture the owl. He secured a very strong trap and fastened it to a board, which in turn was fastened securely to a post. A mouse was used for a bait and the other night the owl came along and seeing the mouse, at once pounced upon it with the result that one of its legs was caught in the trap. A fierce fight for liberty ensued as the jaws of the trap were twisted almost out of shape. The next day Mr. Carver visited the trap and found the owl caught in it. A few blows from a stick finished the bird, which on being measured was found to be 4 feet 6 inches from tip to tip. The bird will be [illegible] and mounted.

SEVEN MAIN QUESTIONS
THAT ARE USUALLY ASKED BY MEN WHO ARE TEMPTED TO LOOK INTO A MINING PROPOSITION

1st. What is the characteristic ore showing of the property being presented?
2nd. Where is it located and is it in the vicinity of other mines that are being worked?
3rd. Is there a good title to the mines or are they merely held on bond and lease, or on an option?
4th. What sort of a corporation has been formed to take title to the property and under what state laws; also the charter life of the company?
5th. Is it safe to trust the men who are at the helm
6th. Will money put in be used to open up the mines or will it be pocketed by the managers?
7th. Will one stand a good chance to get a fair slice of profits against what is put in?

In answer to the above questions, a prospectus, or statement will be sent upon postal card request addressed to

SAMPSON & WEMOTT, Fiscal Agents.

A BRUTAL ASSAULT

A Man Named Redmond From Cavan, Badly Beaten

A man named Redmond, who is said to live in Cavan, was beaten almost into insensibility a few nights ago. The assault occurred on Simcoe street, and from what can be learned, was unprovoked. Redmond, who is an elderly man, was attempting to gain admission to a certain place, and was set upon by a man, who came from the inside. He was knocked down and kicked on the head and face. After the unfortunate victim was let go, he managed to make his way to Dr. McClelland, where his wounds were dressed. He was so badly used up that he was unable to go home until the following day.

A Good Move

Hastings Star: At a meeting of the Peterborough Council recently, Ald. Morrison stated that one matter which needed investigation was the constant presence of so many fakirs from outside points canvassing the town for business. During the week he had been solicited to buy pictures, picture frames, books, tea, etc. by men who paid not a cent of taxes, and who hurt the business of the local merchants. He was in favor of a good stiff license imposed on peddlers, giving a whack to local men. This matter should be taken up in Hastings, as it is certain that a great deal of injustice is being perpetrated on our business men. Every week our town is visited by peddlers offering envelopes, pens, paper, ink, hardware, underwear, spectacles and other articles. Even our butchers, who go to no little expense to keep meat in the summer time, have to compete with outside peddlers in the winter months.

A PROCLAMATION

We possess all the modern and up-to-date facilities for conducting a reliable and first-class drug business. When you favor us with your doctor's prescription, our best efforts are put forth to make that prescription what it should be—professionally correct in the minutest details.

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND

This medicine is giving marvellous results to sick people all over Canada. The wonderful cures effected by Paine's Celery Compound during the past year speaks volumes in favor of the popular medicine. Thousands who have suffered from rheumatism, neuralgia, nervous troubles and dyspepsia now sing the praises of the medicine that has given them such happy results. PEKIN MUCH IMPROVED

Present Care of the Streets Notable—Chinese Military Plans

Pekin, Feb. 14—The celebration of the Chinese New Year's Day here yesterday was unusually well observed. The city has the appearance of prosperity. There has been a great improvement in the care of the streets, when compared with the condition in which they were kept by the allies. This care was previously unknown.

Many high Chinese say that notwithstanding appearances and the apparent extent to which edicts have ordered reforms there is little chance of reforms being carried out. Some of the edicts have already been annulled. The Chinese military plans are finding the most support, and this fact is having a [illegible] effect on foreign opinion. This is the work of Viceroy Yuan Shih-Kai, who advocates military reforms, and is seeking an appropriation of 5,000,000 taels for the establishment of a provincial army.

KEENE

On Monday night last a very exciting game of hockey was played in the Keene skating rink by the Norwood and Keene clubs. The result of the game was a tie. The Keene club goes to Norwood on Friday night to play a return match.

The roads in this vicinity are so blockaded with snow that it is almost impossible to travel on them.

Our village blacksmiths report business rather dull on account of the deep snow.

The ball in connection with the hockey club was fairly patronized on Friday night last. Quite a number of young people declined to go on account of the death of Rev. F. Andrews, B. D.

The funeral of Rev. F. Andrews on Friday last was the largest ever witnessed in this village.

Permanent Cures of Cancer

We here give a few cases, where the efficacy of our constitutional treatment in curing Cancer is established beyond all question. We have plenty on fyle.

There is ample proof that where our remedy cures, it cures to stay and saves people from the torture of knife and plaster.

CANCER OF THE BREAST—A lady had Cancer of the Breast, which rendered her right shoulder and arm almost helpless. Our remedy cured her over five years ago, and there is not the slightest return of the trouble.

CANCER OF THE FACE—This case of a gentleman who was so bad that his right cheek was almost eaten off with the disease. Plasters aggravated his trouble. Our treatment cured him five years ago and he has been all right since.

CANCER OF THE STOMACH—Doctors pronounced the trouble cancer of the stomach. There was vomiting of material that looked like coffee grounds. Great weakness and prostration. Cured over four years ago and well to-day.

CANCER OF THE NOSE—A severe case which was cured by our remedy in 1891 and has never returned to this day.

Full accounts of the above cases, together with the names and addresses of the persons, are given in our new book, "Cancer, its cause and Cure," sent to anyone, in plain wrapper, on receipt of two stamps. Stott & Jury, Bowmanville, Ont.

Malt Breakfast Food

The Only Cereal Product That Can Keep People Well and Strong

The ordinary food grains such as wheat, hominy, corn and oatmeal put up in fancy packages to attract the attention of the public, are not true health foods. They are used by many who are not aware of their depressing influence on the digestive organs. The great objection to such foods is the presence of so much insoluble starch, which hampers digestion and causes many serious derangements of the stomach.

Malt Breakfast Food is the only grain food free from starchy ingredients. In its manufacture, the starch of the wheat is converted into maltose and dextrine by the use of pure health-giving Malt. The weakest stomach retains and relishes Malt Breakfast Food. It tones and strengthens the digestive organs and quickly builds up flesh and muscle. Malt Breakfast Food is now recommended by hundreds of physicians as a perfect health food that keeps people well and strong. Your grocer sells and recommends it.

The floral tributes were many and beautiful showing the esteem in which deceased was held by his large number of friends.

TEETH AND FOOD

A Help in Time of Need

Sometimes bad teeth cause illness, particularly when they are not fit to masticate food. A man in Ada, O., had all of his teeth drawn. He was sick with indigestion and lack of vitality and his teeth were in a bad condition. He expected, with a new set of teeth, to regain his health by thoroughly chewing his food, but he had an experience that is well worth knowing of.

"Instead of improving I continued to lose strength," he says, "until I was a mere moving skeleton. I tried a number of prepared foods, but none of them helped me until I got Grape-Nuts. The flavor pleased my palate at once. I soaked the food in cream and got along with it nicely. Within a few days I noticed that I was not so tired and jaded. Gradually I grew stronger, so I left off all other foods and took only Grape-Nuts.

My old-time vigor came back and in two months I gained 17 pounds. This was remarkable, for I am of spare build. Now I sleep and feel wonderfully well.

Inasmuch as I am doing so nicely without teeth I have concluded to wait until my gums have finished shrinking before having a set made. I don't believe I could have gone through the drain on my system had it not been for Grape-Nuts. There is no doubt about the life-giving and nerve-building force of that food. I talk Grape-Nuts to all of my friends." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

THE CARNIVAL LAST NIGHT

Was Well Attended – A Number of Very Fancy Costumes

The first and only fancy dress carnival of the season was held last night in the Charlotte street rink. The attendance was very good, but not as large as expected, owing, no doubt to the number of hockey matches in the rink recently and the number of other attractions in town at the present time. The number of costumed skaters was very good, and it made a pretty sight to see the various colored costumes flitting here and there on the ice.

The judges stand was on the western gallery about the centre of the rink, in which were seated Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Kerr and Miss Reid, who performed the duties of judges in a most satisfactory manner. Mr. Angus McIntosh also occupied a seat in the judges' stand.

The following are the prize winners for fancy and comic costumes:

Ladies Fancy—Miss Lulu Fox.
Girls Fancy—Miss Mildred Brightman.
Gents Fancy—Mr. W. Nelles.
Gents Comic—(no name) shoemaker.
Boys Fancy—Edward Wood.
Boys Comic—Ernest Taylor.

There were no entries in the Ladies or Girls Comic classes.

A large number of clowns were in attendance, and provoked considerable laughter by their antics. The 57th band was in attendance, and furnished an abundance of music of a very high standard.

At nine o'clock the ice was open for all skaters and for an hour or more it was with difficulty that a person could get around the rink at all.

Mr. McIntosh is to be complimented on his undertaking and it will be pleasing to know that after paying all expenses a considerable sum of money remains to reward him for his enterprise and trouble.

The Old Plan With Its Difficulty and Expense A Thing of the Past

DIAMOND DYE MAT AND RUG PATTERNS ARE POPULAR IN ALL HOMES

The expense of buying suitable material and of stamping outlines of a pattern for a mat or rug is a thing of the past, now that the Diamond Dye Mat and rug patterns can be procured at such low prices. Another advantage in using the Diamond Dye Mat and Rug Patterns is that the pattern of the design is brought out in lovely and harmonized colors, ready for working. One or more of these elegant patterns should be in every home. When worked up, they look as rich as expensive imported goods, and they wear much longer. Upon receipt of a postal card with your address, The Wells & Richardson Co., Limited, 200 Mountain street, Montreal, P.Q., will send you free of cost all the newest designs.

AN ASSOCIATION FORMED

By the Medical Men at a Meeting on Thursday Evening—Officers Elected

The medical men of the district held a meeting at the Crown Hotel on Thursday night, and formed an Association in affiliation with the Ontario Medical Association. The meeting was not very largely attended by outside practitioners, but letters received from them showed they were in favor of the movement.

Dr. Hillier, of Bowmanville occupied the chair. The election of officers resulted as follows:

President—Dr. Greer, Peterborough.
1st. Vice-Pres.—Dr. Berry, Hastings.
2nd Vice-Pres.—Dr. Gillespie, Lindsay.
Secretary—Dr. Eastwood, Peterboro.
Treasurer—Dr. Mober, Peterboro.

A committee to arrange a program for the next meeting of the Association, was appointed. The meeting will be held sometime in the next six weeks. A committee was also appointed to draw up a constitution, and to report at the next meeting.

At the Opera Next Week

The manager of the Opera House has received assurances that the company which will appear here next week are of a high class order. The London Advertiser says,—Prof Pull demonstrated his right to the title "King of Hypnotists and mind readers." The London News says,—The mind reading tests are bewildering and marvellous. There are only two or three of hundreds of tests rendered. The play is a good one and should draw full houses.

ENTERTAINED BY MR. R. J. TODD

Sunday School Scholars and Members of the Church of Christ Scientist Spend a Pleasant Evening

The officers and children of First Church of Christ Scientist Sunday School, 378 Aylmer street, met at the residence of R. J. Todd, 218 Wolfe st., last evening at 6 o'clock, where a table was spread, with many good things, to which the children did ample justice, showing that Christian Science medicine is a very good appetizer.

After this the older members of the congregation assembled and spent a very enjoyable evening. An impromptu program consisting of instrumental and vocal music, recitations, readings, speeches, etc., was presented.

Old and young returned to their homes satisfied that Christian Scientists, not only knew how to pray, but how to enjoy themselves.

Ten Years of Blessed Work and Glourious Victories

Paine's Celery Compound

HAS BROUGHT HEALTH AND NEW LIFE TO THE SICK AND DISEASED IN EVERY PART OF THE CIVILIZED WORLD

For the last ten years the work of Paine's Celery Compound has been a blessed and cheering one to men and women of every rank in society. In no one case has the great medicine failed to benefit, and where it has been used promptly, it has in every case brought a cure.

The blessed results that spring from the use of Paine's Celery Compound are not confined to this Canada of ours. The great life-giving medicine has been sent to every quarter of the civilized world, and has cured the sick, restored the weak and depressed to health and strength, and caused tens of thousands to live who failed to find health in worthless prescriptions, sarsaparillas, nervines and pills. Paine's Celery Compound has cured when all other remedies failed.

It is to this best of all medicines, Paine's Celery Compound, that we would direct the attention of every man and woman suffering from weakness, general debility, rheumatism, neuralgia, heart trouble, dyspepsia, anemia, blood diseases, liver complaint and kidney trouble. Thousands of grateful letters have poured in testifying to wonderful and permanent cures.

It is foolish and criminal to delay the use of such a disease banisher when others have so clearly demonstrated its value; when many of your friends and neighbors have been made well by its use. The health-giving virtues are so eminently great that the ablest physicians are prescribing Paine's Celery Compound daily for the sick.

If you are weak physically, in the grasp of disease, or simply feeling out-of-sorts, irritable, sleepless or despondent, try one bottle of Paine's Celery Compound, and note well the magical effects.

WHAT THE ALLIANCE MEANS IN ANGLO-SAXON

Proper Interpretation of Agreement Between Great Britain and Japan

JAPAN STEADILY OPPOSED RUSSIA IN CHINA

Russia now Holds Manchuria and Russian Civil Officers Have Control of the Entire Government

New York, Feb. 16—From a man of high standing and large experience in the far east, the World obtained, late last night, a hasty interpretation of the alliance between England and Japan. Asked for the exact meaning of the alliance, the World's informant said:

"It is my judgment that there is a threat against the peace of the world in Great Britain's alliance with Japan. By it Britain escapes from the position of 'splendid isolation' in which the Continental powers have so long held her. The import and purpose of all European diplomacy and national effort will be changed, and the old question of the 'balance of power' is bound to be revived.

"Russia first of all is threatened. The guarantee of the integrity of the Chinese Empire appears to cut off all her efforts to annex the great northwestern province of Manchuria, through which the Czar's Government is building a railroad, to supply an outlet to the Pacific for their Trans-Siberian line that will be free of ice at all seasons of the year, and whose territory is said to be the richest in all mineral products of any in China.

"Ever since the Boxer outbreak in China Russia has been striving to secure this province by means of an independent treaty with the Chinese. Encouraged by the British, the Japanese and the United States, China has so far succeeded in avoiding the signing of such a treaty.

"The protests of the other foreign powers against Russia were based upon assurances of an 'open door' for all Chinese trade, given at the instance of the United States when the powers entered into a concert to interfere in China and put down the rebellion of the anti-foreign fanatics. Russia is charged, as against her own denials, of wishing to secure all Manchuria, despite the understanding among the powers that no one of them should attempt to increase its holdings of territory in China as the outgrowth of the troubles in that Empire or the payment of indemnities to foreigners.

"Russia now holds Manchuria. There is an army of occupation, several strategic points have been strongly fortified, and Russian civil officers have control of the entire government. It is reported that the line of railway across the country from Niuchwang, the principal seaport, to the true Russian border, is being pushed toward completion, and that trains with troops can be run straight across from Moscow to that point over the Trans-Siberian line by autumn.

"Japan, too, has steadily opposed Russia in both China and Corea. Japan proposed at the close of her war with China to secure as the fruits of her victory a foothold in China, and wished at least to secure a position in the kingdom of Corea that would exclude all other nations. Russia stepped in and thwarted both these designs. Since then the relations of the two nations have been strained.

"They have been very close to war on two or three occasions, owing to serious diplomatic quarrels about the dominant influence in the Corean capital. Japan went so far in April of last year as to mobilize a part of her army for the purpose, it was reported, of occupying the Hermit Kingdom and annexing it.

"If the two new allies should be drawn into a war with Russia in the East, France, it seems certain, must be drawn into it, for she has an offensive and defensive alliance with Russia.

"With these four nations involved in war, Germany, Austria and Italy, still bound by the Triple Alliance, would be in a position to assert their power and could carry out any policy of their own aggrandizement they might choose. All three of them have interests in China and all of them are embarked in vast schemes of colonization, in which Great Britain alone is their rival.

"The interests of the United States are those of trade alone. Manchuria has for years been a heavy purchaser of American goods in cotton, iron, steel and other lines. There has been some trade, too, with Corea, and at one time citizens of the United States were practically in control of its government, being employed as expert advisers and teachers at the court of the King. Lately their places have been taken by Russians and Japanese.

"There is no doubt whatever that this alliance marks one of the most important diplomatic steps taken in recent times."

GREAT BRITAIN'S SUPREMACY ON THE SEA.

British Shipyards Turned Out the Largest Tonnage and the Greatest Number of Hulls Ever Recorded

London, Feb. 15. — British shipyards turned out last year the largest tonnage and the greatest number of hulls that have ever been recorded in the annual returns of Lloyds Register. Including forty-one warships built at government and private establishments, the totals set down are 699 vessels, aggregating more than 1,750,000 tons. This unprecedented and enormous output is composed almost entirely of steel steamers, of which 77 per cent. are to fly the home flag.

As might be expected from the changing conditions of oversea trade, the tendency to construct types of a very large tonnage is maintained. One steamer of above 20,000 tons and seven others exceeding 11,000 represent the year's contribution to an economic theory that is based mainly on the competition in the transatlantic trade. The increasing neglect of sailing craft is equally marked, though, logically enough, the launching of three ships of 3000 tons shows the potency of the heavy tonnage idea even in this class.

Among the other shipbuilding nations the United States is easily first, with double the output of Germany and nearly three times that of France, if eighty-two war craft and a few large ocean going steamers be excluded, it will be found that this production is almost equally divided between moderate sized steamers and unimportant sailing vessels, and that the 301 vessels, of 1,341,000 tons, belong to ratings inferior in average size and in probable utility to the constructions launched on the Clyde, Tyne, Wear and Tees and at Belfast and Barrow.

Why Catarrh is Fatal

Because it pours a flood of poisons into the circulation that saps digestion so materially as to render the body incapable of resisting disease, and consumption is the result. Catarrh is quickly cured by Catarrhozone, a fragrant germ destroying vapor that goes to the root of the disease. It soothes and heals the inflamed mucous surfaces, cures the head and throat, and positively never fails to perfectly cure bronchitis, asthma, or catarrh. Nothing is so good for disease of the respiratory organs as Catarrhozone. Large outfits, $1.00. Small size 25c. Druggists or by mail from Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

Manhattan Has Arrived at Cape Town

The many friends of the members of the Peterborough quota to the third contingent will be pleased to know that the boys arrived safely at Cape Town on Friday last, on the transport Manhattan. The voyage took thirty days, which is about the average time for vessels sailing from Canada to South Africa. The vessel went direct to the Cape and did not report at Cape St. Vincent, as was the case with some of the other troopships. The Victorian which sailed a few days later will arrive at Cape Town, in the course of a few days.

FIREMEN SAVED DEAD PEOPLE

Made a Big Blunder—Carries Corpses Out of Dissecting Room by Mistake

Chicago, Feb. 17.—Firemen who groped their way through fire and smoke and dragged six dead bodies into the street from Bennett Hospital at Ada and Fulton street, late last night, carried on their heroic labor in the belief that they were rescuing persons who had been asphyxiated, and not until the flames had been subdued did they learn that they had been in the dissecting-room of Bennett Medical College and that the rescued bodies were from the dissecting table of the school. Several of the cadavers were clothed, having been brought to the school in that condition. One cadaver was incinerated. The dissecting-room and laboratory of the college were destroyed, entailing a loss of $5,000. A score of patients in the hospital were badly frightened, but none were injured. The firemen had supposed that the building was used exclusively for hospital purposes.

QUEEN MARY'S VICTIMS

Interesting Ceremony That has Just Taken Place in the Tower of London

New York, Feb. 17—An interesting ceremony has taken place in the vault of St. Peter's church, in the tower of London. The ceremony was the erection of a tablet recording that within the walls of the vault were deposited two chests containing the remains of many distinguished persons who had been beheaded on Tower Hill and which for a time were interred beneath the floor of the chancel and nave. The removal of these remains, which included the bones of Lady Jane Grey, her husband, Lord Guilford Dudley, the Duke of Northumberland and the Duke of Suffolk, all executed during the reign of Queen Mary, was carried out about forty years ago.

LAUGH AT PEARSON

Threatener of British Mule Camp at New Orleans Known as Crank

New Orleans, La., Feb. 17—The police authorities of this city are much amused over the reported letter sent to Roosevelt by General Samuel Pearson of this city, formerly of the Transvaal republic, to the effect that he will lead an armed force to attack the camp where mules purchased by British agents for transhipment to South Africa are stored. Pearson is well known to the police, having frequently made himself conspicuous by anti-British demonstrations. He is regarded as a crank and despite his warlike threatenings is believed to be harmless.

BURRIED HIMSELF IN THE SNOW

Arcade Farmer, Lost in the Storm, Saved His Life By Burrowing Into a Drift

Arcade, Feb. 17—This section is just recovering from the effects of the great storm of last week, which seems to have been more severe in this immediate vicinity than anywhere else. The country roads are just becoming passable and as the people come in from the outlying districts they bring reports of the terrible intensity of the storm and in some cases hardships that ensued.

One man was out all one night and came near losing his life. This man was Mr. Thomas L. Lewis, who lives about three miles south-east of this place. In the afternoon he drove to Eagle with his daughter, Miss Edna Lewis, who teaches school there. On his return when nearing his home, his sleigh broke down and he was obliged to leave his team at a farm house and try to complete the journey on foot.

He wandered from the road and as the storm increased and it grew dark, even the familiar landmarks upon his own farm upon which he was wandering became obliterated. Still he struggled on, nearly overcome by the cold and fatigue, and then digging a hole in the bottom of an immense drift he covered himself up with the snow, realizing that this was the only possibility to escape from death.

Here he lay for hours and then crawled out once more to find that it was daylight and that the storm was still raging. Once more he started out and at last saw a house. It was the home of James Cramer, his nearest neighbor. Towards this he struggled with his little remaining strength. At last he reached the door and when it was opened by those inside Mr. Lewis staggered into the room and fell upon the floor unconscious from exhaustion. The warmth and kind care of friends, however, brought him back to life. But if it had not been for his presence of mind in burying himself in the snow he certainly would have died.

BOTH MAY DIE

As the Result of a Fight Between a Man and a woman in Allen County

Scottsville, Ky., Feb. 17—A desperate fight took place here to-day, and as a result Mary Little and John Pendergrass are fatally wounded. The trouble, it is said, arose over Mrs. Little's daughter, and in the fight following Pendergrass struck Mrs. Little with a stone after she had emptied a shotgun at him. The lead taking effect, he hid himself after the fight, and it cannot be learned how badly he is hurt, but it is thought he will die. Mrs. Little's injuries, it is given out, will prove fatal.

DIVINING ROD AT WORK.

London, Feb. 17.— The 'Bogs' Field at Harrogate has long been recognised as wealthy in mineral waters, and the Harrogate Corporation have this week engaged a professional "water diviner," Mr. J. Mullins, of Colerne, Box, Wilts, to test by the divining process the existence of springs in the locality. In the presence of the Mayor and the Corporation, and with the simple aid of a hazel twig grasped in each hand, the water diviner discovered by the bend of the twigs the existence of fresh springs. In fields recently acquired by the Corporation springs were found, and these, it is judged, will be of considerable addition to the mineral water possessions of Harrogate.

THE EMPIRE'S COAL SUPPLY.

London, Feb. 17. —Before the Royal Statistical Society recently, Sir John Glover read a valuable paper on "Tonnage Statistics of the Decade, 1891-1900."

As to coal supplies, said Sir John, it was more than satisfactory that we were not now solely dependent on our own coal measures. The mineral was being worked in constantly increasing quantities in other parts of the Empire, notably in Canada, Australia, India, Natal and Borneo. It was also being worked in France, Belgium, Germany Spain and Russia, and it was believed that the United States was raising nearly as much coal as we did. Eastwards of the Red Sea it might be said that the bulk of the coal consumed was either Indian or Japanese, and there was every reason for believing that in a short time supplies of excellent Canada coal would be available. It was consequently reasonable to conclude that the supplies of this essential commodity would not fail such nations as had the means for its cheap carriage by sea. It was, perhaps, even more reasonable to expect that before the new century was much older, more economic methods of using coal would reward the eager scientific research now being pursued by the engineers of all countries. Moreover, the use of petroleum for sea-propulsion seemed to be on the eve of large development, and lastly, when electric power had got fairly into use on land it was quite possible that means would be devised for its use at sea.

COMMERCIAL AGENCIES.

"With the view of still further facilitating and developing our trade with other countries, it will probably be found expedient to increase the number of our commercial agencies, and Parliament will be asked to consider the desirability of making additional provision for that purpose.

"I have also pleasure in informing you that the Government of Australia and New Zealand have accepted an invitation from my Government to attend a conference in London next June for the consideration of trade, transportation, cable, and other matters of intercolonial concern, and it is hoped that the meeting may lead to an extension of Canadian trade with these important portions of His Majesty's dominions.

STEAMERS TO SOUTH AFRICA.

"I have further to advise you that my Government, having caused inquiry to be made, has reached the conclusion that the establishment of direct steamship service with South Africa would enable Canada to secure in that country a profitable market for her varied products, and to that end will endeavor to arrange for such a service."

Reference is also made to the invitation to the Premier to attend the coronation.

S. S. ANNIVERSARY SERVICES

In Charlotte Street Church Yesterday—Conducted by Rev. Dr. Saunders

In Charlotte St. Methodist Church yesterday the Sabbath School anniversary services were conducted by Rev. Dr. Saunders, of Cobourg, formerly of Dominion Methodist Church, Ottawa, and of Montreal.

In the morning, the rev. gentleman preached an able and forceful sermon, taking for his subject, "The Victoria Cross." It was most appropriate for the younger portion of the congregation, who were present in large numbers.

In the evening he preached from II Cor. 4—6. "For God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ."

What can excel, said he, the majesty of these wondrous words? How they sweep by like the stately steppings of an arc-angel! As we listen to the words there comes up that marvellous moment in creation, when the world was wrapped in darkness, void and without form. A darkness was on the face of the deep which we cannot conceive—a darkness never riven by one gleam of light. But God stood in the midst of the darkness, and said, "Let there be light," Then, as if waiting for His word, the light leapt forth and flooded the world with a radiance of splendor. So in the regeneration of our hearts. If any man be in Christ he is a new creation. This light comes to us through the face of Jesus.

Light is the most wonderful thing in the world and though for ages scientists have been trying to solve its true nature and origin, yet it remains a mystery. It is a beautiful thing—in fact there can be no beauty without it, it reveals all beauty, and may even be said to create all beauty.

It is the great source of all life. Catch a pencil of it on a prism and it is divided into seven dazzling bands of beauty. These, we may magnify a thousand fold. By means of the X-ray, things which our fathers thought opaque are made semi-transparent.

But from Christ we receive light in a larger, fuller sense. He reveals to us the source of all spiritual life. "I am the Light of the world, he that cometh to Me shall not walk in darkness but shall have the light of life."

In Marconi's great system of wireless telegraphy it is necessary that the transmitter and receiver be tuned alike in order to deliver the message. So, if we would have a full knowledge of the glory of God, we must sit in the light of His Son, who is the light of heaven. His glory emancipates us and gladdens us.

Who can tell what is the glory of God? How true the words of the Psalmist in the nineteenth Psalm, "The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament showeth His handiwork. Every flower bears a mark of His pencil, a reflection of the light of the face of Jesus. We are told that Venus, the queen of light, and last of the constellations to fade before the sun, appeared in its last transit just as a blot of ink. The glory of the greater light outshone her. St. John in his description of the glory of the Lord was limited by the possibilities of human language. Few people have looked upon the face of our Lord. As Peter, John the Baptist, the Samaritan woman, the leper, Nicodemus and the Roman centurion gazed on His countenance they were led to exclaim, according to what they saw there. The speaker had an album containing a collection of faces of Christ, painted by the great masters, according to their different conceptions of His character. There is the laboring face, the tragic face, the sorrowful face, and the friendly face painted by Frau Angelica, on which one gazed only to exclaim, "He is the friend of sinners." The best representation of the face of Christ which the world has ever looked upon, is said to be that on the roof of an European cathedral, carved in oak during its erection, by an old and unknown man. A poor book-keeper gazing on a beautiful landscape said it was all his. Explaining, he said the proprietor owned the mud and stones, but had never seen the landscape. It takes an artist to see all the beauty. And one must get Christ-like in order to see and know Christ. The glory of God as it is in the face of Christ is heaven to the possessor, whether here or beyond.

In answer to the King of Sweden, a famous violinist said he caught the strains of music as a barefoot boy on the hills of Norway. Oh, for a sympathy so full with Jesus, in whose face is the glory of God unfolded. Sometimes he thought he would never see the glory of God only as he beheld it in the face of Christ—that face deep lined with sorrow for the lost world—that scarred face looking out on the world to-day, waiting to lift up those who will hear him.

A young man in Montreal who had got the fever to go west with some friends, and who would not be persuaded, yielded as his mother placed her hand on his shoulder, saying simply, "Thomas, don't go." He told his friends it was his mother's hand which kept him. In his infancy she had saved him from death by fire, at the sacrifice of her hand, which was scarred and crippled. It was the memory of her unselfish love which prompted him to yield to her request. Christ's scarred hand calls us to Him because he gave Himself a ransom for us.

Many artists have in their studies painted [illegible] of many hues, to keep their eyes up to color tone. So if our hearts are tuned by Christ, life will take on a new meaning.

In a monastery organ loft, as a youth, Mozart one night produced such music that the monks thought an angel had come down—he transformed the organ. So if the hand of the great Harmonist be upon the keys of our soul, we will be brought into sympathy with the universe, and run with patience the race set before us. Stephen is our example of what a man will dare, what he will suffer, what he will undertake for Christ. Let us get nearer to the feet of the Lord's Anointed, and there will come into our hearts untold joy and satisfaction; then we shall gaze throughout eternity on the glory of God.

The music at both services was most appropriate. In the evening, the choir sang a pretty anthem, "Angels of Jesus," and Mr. Mitchell and Miss Bellaghem rendered a duet, "I Need Thee, Precious Jesus."

TIMES' CORRESPONDENT CONTRADICTS STATEMENT

The Document Quoted by German Ambassador Merely a Rough Statement

Was Not Submitted for Communication to the Various Governments

London, Feb. 17.—A despatch from Washington to The Times flatly contradicts Von Holleben's latest statement. It says the document quoted by the German Ambassador was not submitted by Lord Pauncefote to his colleagues for communication to their Governments, but was a rough statement outlining his views to the meeting. This draft was handed to Cambon and altered and enlarged by him. It says that Lord Pauncefote believed that the note of April tenth contained concessions which might induce the United States to reconsider its resolve for war; that he thought President McKinley was wrong in believing that the war had the support and approval of the civilized world. Lord Pauncefote desired peace, as McKinley did, and felt justified in doing what he could in concert with his colleagues to preserve peace. This Lord Pauncefote admits and affirms that he had no object other than to act a friendly part.

German Slanders

London, Feb. 15.—A despatch to The Times from Johannesburg declares that the Town Council passed a resolution condemning the slanders of the British army. It was moved by an Englishman and seconded by Jennings, an American, who testified from personal observation as to the humane conduct of the British. While adopting the resolution the Council deemed it inadvisable to promote a public demonstration, expressing disapproval of the slanders.

SET FIRE TO HIS LITTLE BABY SISTER

Then Stood by and Watched Her Burn to Death

BURNED BEYOND RECOGNITION

Reprimanded by His Mother, This Three Year-Old Boy Sought Revenge by Burning His Sister

Hammond, Ind., Feb. 17. — William Newalk, the three-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Newalk of this city, is said to have deliberately set fire to the clothing of his baby sister and watched her burn to death.

At the inquest over the body of the child it developed that after the father of the children, who is a fireman, had gone to his work the mother reprimanded the boy for some trifling fault and locked both children in the kitchen while she went to a grocery store. In one corner of the kitchen was a cupboard, on the shelf of which was stored matches. The mother was absent about 15 minutes. When she returned and opened the kitchen door the sickening odor of burning flesh almost overpowered her. On the floor lay the 18-month-old girl, writhing in pain, and burned almost beyond recognition. Standing near by was her little brother, watching the flames, which had begun to eat into the pine floor of the room.

The boy, who is precocious and talkative, said at the inquest that he had lighted the baby's clothes. He exhibited no grief upon being shown the charred body.

RESOLUTION OF CONDOLENCE

The Employees of the Wm. Hamilton Mfg. Co. Pay Tribute to the Dead and Condole with the Bereaved

On Friday afternoon, the employees of the Wm. Hamilton Mfg. Co. assembled at the works and proceeded to the residence of their late employer, Mr. Wm. Hamilton, to take a farewell look at the face of one with whom their relations had always been of a most cordial nature. The late Wm. Hamilton was deeply respected by all his employees, and it was with feelings of deepest regret that the employees heard of his death.

After viewing the remains the employees held a meeting at the works where they placed themselves on record in a resolution which was passed and forwarded to the widow and members of the bereaved family. The resolution reads as follows:—

Moved by A. Macfarlane, seconded by T. J. Main:

Whereas it has pleased the Divine Creator in His infinite wisdom and mercy to remove from this earthly sphere of labor, our respected employer, Mr. Wm. Hamilton, sr., who departed this life after many years of severe suffering—therefore be it

Resolved: That we the assembled employees of the Wm. Hamilton Mfg. Co., desire to express to the bereaved widow and family of our late employer, our feelings of most profound sympathy in this sad affliction, by which they have been bereft of one who was near and dear to their hearts. And we pray that in this dark hour of trial and tribulation they may be comforted and sustained by the consolations of Divine Grace; be it further

Resolved: That we realize to the fullest extent possible the great loss which the town has sustained by the death of such an estimable citizen.

As an honored employer of labour for over half a century his relations with his employees were of the closest kind. He entered fully into their home life, and many of them have had their troubles and sorrow lightened by his sincere sympathy and goodness of heart. Honest in principle and generous in action, his character was of such a nature as to command our respect and esteem.

Now the labourer's task is o'er;
Now the battle day is past;
Now upon the farther shore
Lands the voyager at last,
Father, in Thy gracious keeping
Leave we now Thy servant sleeping.

Resolved: That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family.

PROHIBITION CONVENTION

To be Held in Peterborough on Thursday February 20th

The Times has been requested to publish the following letter:—

To the Friends of Temperance in the County of Peterborough:—

The decision of the Privy Council sustaining the Prohibition Act of Manitoba has made "Prohibition for Ontario," the rallying cry for forward action in this Province. The liquor men are marshalling their well organized forces. The friends of temperance must be up and doing. In order to consider the situation, the Executive of the Dominion Alliance has decided to call a Mass Convention of the Temperance Workers of each Electoral Division, that they may consult together and take such action as will best promote the interests of the cause.

You are therefore most earnestly invited to attend a convention to be held in the Y.M.C.A. Hall, Peterborough, on Thursday, February 20th, 1902, at two o'clock. All churches, Young People's Societies and Temperance organizations are requested to send delegates.

Public Meeting in the evening to be addressed by Prof. John A. Nicholls, and others.

Do not fail to come yourself, and urge the attendance of all others who desire to overthrow the liquor curse.

Yours very truly,
JOHN A. NICHOLLS
Provincial Organizer Dominion Alliance.

GOOD-BYE TO THE MILKMAN

A Discovery that Will Put the Milk Venders Out

It is Claimed That a Better and Far Cheaper Substitute Has Been Found—How it will Effect Milk.

London, Feb. 17—A Swedish scientist claims he has invented an apparatus by which milk can be brought into the form of powder, like flour in appearance, and having all the qualities of milk in concentrated form with the exception of moisture. The milk flour is soluble in water. It does not ferment nor sour and is not sensitive to changes of weather. It is said to be comparatively inexpensive, the cost of production being about 27c. per 100 quarts.

If what the inventor claims is true the day of the milkman will soon be over, so far as the cities are concerned. The old jokes regarding the milkman and the town pump will be out of date. Each family will dilute its milk flour according to taste and produce more or less milk according to means and need. Perhaps the best aspect of it is that the quiet of the early morning hours will no longer be broken by the sound of the milk cans rattling over the stony streets; that a Sabbathlike stillness will prevail from 3 to 6 instead of the noisy clatter of the milkman bent on finishing his disagreeable round as early in the day as possible.

The more poetic aspects of the situation need not pass away. The dairy maid may still pursue her vocation and the rustic swain still make love to her in the dewy freshness of the morning. It is the city milkman, the purveyor of the liquid mixture, who will have to go. In his place the grocer comes, bringing barrels or bags of milk flour which will keep the year round without loss of flavor or substance.

Whether the change on the whole will be a gain remains to be seen—if indeed the invention is all it promises. Since savage man first appropriated the milk of animals to his own use it has held its own in spite of so-called improvements. Milk flour may become a convenience in an emergency, but prove an unworthy substitute for the original article in its natural form.

Made a Desperate Struggle

Further particulars regarding the death of David Valentine have been received. It is quite evident that the old gentleman made a desperate struggle for his life, as a well beaten track was found in the snow, showing where he had tramped for some time before he fell to the ground in an exhausted condition.

WORRYING ABOUT CANADA

A correspondent of the London Daily News joins in the crusade which has been started to have Canada made the experimental ground for the municipal ownership of land. He writes: "Seeing that the Canadian Government is so desirous of attracting immigrants that it has despatched two commissioners to describe the advantages it is willing to offer, one is surprised that the most effective, and at the same time most just, plan for promoting settlement is not contemplated. The most advanced economists are agreed that the only perfectly fair system of land tenure is one where the enhancement of value due to population shall go to that population collectively.

"If, then, the Canadian Government would set apart a tract of land for settlement on the condition that the rental of each plot, revaluable, say, quinquennially, shall be devoted to the general benefit of all the inhabitants of that tract, not only would it soon itself economically in advance of every other country, even New Zealand, but afford an interesting experiment in the practical solution of a world-wide social problem."

The Montreal Star adds: "Would it not be a good idea for some of the believers in municipal ownership to come out here, take up the land, which they can have free if they settle on it, form themselves into a municipality and make the land common property? That is about what the Doukhobors are doing. We are not aware of any law in this country to prevent anyone giving his property to the public and then voluntarily paying rent for it.

MUNICIPAL FINANCES

The report of the Provincial Secretary is indicative, not only of the progress being made within the borders of the Province, but also of the zeal displayed in its interests by the gentleman who holds the portfolio. One of the items of provincial administration which he brings into especial prominence is the great change for the better witnessed in the case of the municipal funds, and the increased vigilance displayed in the audits. The municipal auditor commences his report with the gratifying assurance that the improvement in municipal accounts throughout the province, to which he called attention in his report for last year, still continues, and he farther stated that he has no losses of importance in the form of deficits of municipal treasurers to report for 1901. This seems as though a system, which will prevent the deficits and sometimes defaults of the past, has been successfully inaugurated. Regularity is now the order of the day, though the reports indicate that here and there during the past year a treasurer was occasionally found who did not make use of the account forms recommended by the government, but such cases were rare, and are getting more so year by year, but generally the municipal treasurers in Ontario used and appreciated the new forms of account because they tended to accuracy. One matter in connection with the municipal finances seems to need some greater care and attention. Sufficient attention, we are told, is not given by local auditors to the guarantees of municipal treasurers. The Provincial Auditor says, "There is reason to believe that these securities are in many cases worthless, being improperly drawn out, outphased or expired by effluxion of time." Many recommendations are made as to details which municipal officers will do well to attend to carefully.

Australia's Governor-General.

It is feared in some quarters that the Earl of Hopetoun will not be able to complete his term as Governor-General of Australia. His Lordship has never entirely shaken off the effects of the illness which prostrated him in India on his way out to Australia, and though he was really prominent as the host of the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall, he has since, owing to his unsatisfactory health, been unable to fulfil many of his public engagements

John McNairn, Prospector.

By SID HOWARD.

GOOD old John McNairn is down from Whitefish to see about his mine. Whitefish, a map-forgotten station up on the north shore, be it known, is John's postoffice address, and where, tiring of the woods and hungry for the gentle ways of civilisation and the sight of petticoats and clean, smooth faces, John comes to camp in the sectionmen's house and watch the trains go by. Two passenger trains a day, one from the east and the other going back there—the east where the money is, where the soft-mannered, gentle-voiced women are, from whom John, having lived all his life in the woods, is now forever cut off.

For that is the saddest part of John's life. He is absolutely alone. His friends are dead or lost, and the relatives of his boyhood away down on the St. Lawrence. All the days of his manhood John has dwelt in the wilderness, in the lumber woods of the Gatineau and far up at the head waters of the Ottawa, where the mighty river rises on the lower Canada side. At the time of the construction, the great birth epoch of the West, the building of the C.P.R., John found himself with the trestle gang at Whitefish. And when the last rail was laid and the North Shore section was finally, after laborious years, complete, John took his money, made up his pack and struck north into the woods. It was a new country, and he intended to make a "stake" some day; then, in the hazy future, go back east, marry maybe, and settle down. He had a girl back there once, but she died. So John didn't care much where he went for a while. As he said, "There was no strings on him." There were no strings on him then, and there are none on him now. But sometimes, after playing the mouthorgan to him in his little log shack at night, he used to tell me that he "sort of wished he had somebody belongin' to him."

"But I've waited too long, I guess," he'd say. "Nobody'd take to me now, a wild man o' the woods like me."

He'd smile and sigh at the same time, with that lovable gentleness that belonged to him in spite of his grizzled, weather-beaten face.

"Do you think," he'd say, lighting his pipe and holding his hands so as to half hide his face, "do you think there be's any old spinsters, or widow-women, down there in Toronto who'd be willin' to stake out a claim up here with a feller like me? I guess not, eh?"

His face would brighten when we assured him there were plenty of unmarried ladies who would be only too glad to have him. He smiled always, but he didn't believe it, and neither did we. He had waited too long.

"There was one time here," he said once, "I had an ambition to board up the floor, but I never done it."

Two-inch cracks between the squared spruce logs which now separate John from the bare earth make his shack a decidedly precarious place when it comes to dropping little things for which one has any immediate requirement.

"A man grows careless," explained John. "You're easily satisfied when you're by yourself. It's let her go, Casey, any ways at all; good enough, good enough!"

He showed me a photograph one time of himself before he became a prospector—before the construction, as they date things up on the North Shore. It pictured a straight, vigorous man, with a strong, clean-shaved chin and a full moustache. Evidently roughing it in the bush had begun to tell during the last years. John was a much older man than the photo showed—older than the years since it was taken should have carried him. He handed me another picture too, a faded tintype affair, of a woman. He didn't tell me anything about that one.

Good old John! Owner of two or three mining locations that he half believes will one day make him a millionaire. If he lives long enough they may, but he's lived the heavier end of his life already. The North Shore is not a poor man's country. Money makes money the world over, and it takes capital to crush the gold out of the low-grade ore of the North Shore. But John hunts and traps and works in the other mines of the district, and waits. In the summer he goes out into the woods and the splintered granite hills alone with his gun and his pack-sack for weeks at a time, living on pork and biscuit and fried "pa'tridge," rapping at rock exposures with his geologist's hammer or crushing quartz in an iron bowl and washing it out to look for "colors" in the dregs. He hopes that the people down east will take a hold some time soon and put their money into the country and make it hum. "How are you pannin'?" is his "how do you do," and when you return the question he is always cheerful in his reply, "Pretty good." "She's bound to boom," he says when you ask about prospects in the North Shore country. "She can't help it. Man, dear, the mineral's here, ain't it?"

And recently he came to town. Good old John, with his camp-stained pack-sack instead of a trunk, and the rough, square-cut suit of tweed he ordered from the department store catalogue five years ago. But he disdained a collar, just as he disdained the water they offered him after his whiskey. He put up in a good down-town hotel, gave the manager his money to put in the safe, and hung uneasily about the smoking-room, going in to his meals with welcome relief. They set half a dozen knives and forks to each place at that hotel, but John gives his order to His Dress-suited Haughtiness—who would most surely die if it came to carrying a hundred-pound pack over a portage—with the quiet natural dignity of simplicity. He doesn't go right through the course, John. His idea is merely to coal up, to eat what will keep him working. Meat and bread and potatoes—and, "Hey, young feller, a dish o' tea"—that's all he calls for, and he eats with his knife as an unaffected matter of course. And then a pipe. Tea and tobacco are about the only artificial luxuries to be had in the bush. Sunshine and fine weather are the greatest comforts, but they are doled out spasmodically, by nature. A brush bed and a "white-man's fire" may be had for the swinging of an axe, but tea and tobacco come under a different head. John depends as utterly upon tea as a nervous old woman of sixty. But he couldn't find his tobacco the other day.

"Have you got a cigar?" he asked finally.

I had two pure mild Havanas, which a quarter had provided especially for this occasion—cool, mellow fifteen-centers. I passed him one. John had his old black pipe in his teeth. He took the cigar, and before I could stop him he had cut half of it up and packed it into his pipe.

"Good heavens, John!" I said. "Here's half a plug of T. & B."

"This is just as good," said John, holding his "six-day" match in the hollow of his brown leathery hands. "I'm just come out to settle up my affairs," he explained. "I've put it all in the hands of my l'yer. Soon's he says I kin go—shake hands—good-bye—away I go."

"Well, you'll stay and see the Duke?" I said.

"Oh, I've seen hundreds o' men," said John. "I seen his father close as you are, up in Ottawa. He was just a man. Men's men wherever you go. The Dook o' Cornwall's train stopped at Whitefish for coal and water when I was comin' down. I was gittin' shaved in the section house and I didn't come out. I wasn't goin' to let him see me just out o' the woods, not shaved up or nothin'. Besides, I've seen lots o' men, thousands of 'em."

It's a dyke this time, a mile and a half straight across country, with gold, silver and copper.

"This man knows about whiskey, don't he, and feedin' people to make 'em fat? I've gained seven pounds since I been here. It's his business." (John and the hotelkeeper are already fast friends, and John's going to send him down some "pa'tridge.") "Well, I know about rocks, and quartz, and minin', don't I? It's my business. Well, get down where the rock is wet and she's good, she's first-rate. It's the truth. I know, don't I? Look!"

John is loaded down with quartz specimens. He must be carrying pounds around with him. He pulled out a jagged fragment as big as his fist and flashing with yellow blotches.

"Mile and a half she goes, up and down, across cricks and everything. An' nobody knows nothin' about it, Government nor nobody. But my l'yer says the money's all in real estate. There ain't no money fer minin'."

"Come and have something comfortable, John," I said, "to meind us of old days on the survey."

"All right," exclaimed he, with his peculiarly cheerful emphasis on the "all."

It may be a mine ostensibly, but I fancy it's loneliness that's at the bottom of John's "comin' out" this fall. For he confided to me presently that he'd like to meet a "nice, sociable gal afore he went back north."

And if any nice, sociable spinster doesn't mind a one-roomed, log-walled, tar-paper-roofed cabin, with two-inch cracks in the floor, she might do worse. For she'd get one of the far-fabled "nature's gentlemen" in Old John McNairn—philosopher, dry humorist, prospecter and backwoodsman.

Grasshopper Bricks For Hens.

GRASSHOPPERS are being put to a new use out in Nebraska. The farmers have killed incredible numbers of them by the help of a machine which is, perhaps, the most effective ever devised for the purpose. It is called a "hopperdozer," and is nothing more nor less than a large flat pan, with a small amount of kerosene contained in a depression in the rear part of it. The contrivance, being attached to a horse, is pushed along in front of the animal as the latter is driven across the fields. Pretty nearly every grasshopper is encountered, jumps upon the pan, and is promptly suffocated by the kerosene.

This ingenious instrument has been in use for a number of years in parts of the West, but hitherto it has not occurred to the farmers to make any use of the dead grasshoppers. Most commonly they were burned, though some more enterprising agriculturists turned a portion of them to account as poultry-feed. They found that the hens liked them exceedingly; for it is a fact that a grasshopper is to a hen what a canvasback duck is to a human epicure—the very choicest and most esteemed of delicacies.

Hence the idea which is now being developed on a commercial scale. The grasshoppers, after being killed by the hopperdozer, are left in winrows in the fields, where they are soon dried. When they have been exposed to the sun for a sufficient time to reduce them to a properly desiccated condition they are gathered up with rakes, shovelled into carts, and conveyed to a shed, where they are put into a press somewhat resembling an ordinary cheese-press, and converted into solid bricks.

The bricks are shipped in quantities to poultry-raisers, who find this new kind of hen-provender most satisfactory, and they are anxious to get more of it. Apparently, it is a great encourager of egg-production.

It is not necessary to grind the bricks before feeding the stuff to the chickens, but merely to break them into pieces and soften with water.

His Marriage Fee.

A poor couple living in the Emerald Isle went to the priest for marriage, and were met with a demand for the marriage fee. It was not forthcoming. Both the consenting parties were rich in love and in their prospects, but destitute of financial resources. The father was obdurate.

"No money, no marriage."

"Give me lave, your riverence," said the blushing bride, "to go and get the money."

It was given, and she sped forth on the delicate mission of raising a marriage fee out of pure nothing. After a short interval she returned with the sum of money, and the ceremony was completed to the satisfaction of all. When the parting was taking place the newly-made wife seemed a little uneasy.

"Anything on your mind, Catherine?" said the father.

"Well, your riverence, I would like to know if this marriage could not be spoiled now?"

"Certainly not, Catherine. No man can put you asunder."

"Could you not do it yerself, father? Could you not spoil the marriage?"

"No, no, Catherine. You are past me now. I have nothing more to do with your marriage."

"That alees me mind," said Catherine, "and God bless your riverence. There's the ticket for your hat. I picked it up in the lobby and pawned it."

How Strong Are You?

The dial of the punching machine won't answer that question. Strength depends on nutrition. When the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition are diseased, the body fails to receive its full supply of nourishment and hence grows weak. That is why no man is stronger than his stomach.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and the allied organs of digestion and nutrition. The food eaten is then perfectly digested and assimilated and the body is made strong in the only possible way—by nutrition.

"I was troubled with indigestion for about two years," writes Wm. Bowker, Esq., of Juliaetta, Latah Co., Idaho. "I tried different doctors and remedies but to no avail, until I wrote to you and you told me what to do. I suffered with a pain in my stomach and left side and thought that it would kill me. Now I am glad to write this and let you know that I am all well. I can do my work now without pain and I don't have that tired feeling that I used to have. Five bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and two vials of his 'Pleasant Pellets' cured me."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets stimulate the liver.

DR. GOLDBERG, 208 Woodward Ave., DETROIT, MICH.

Not long ago a tourist in New Orleans went to see the statue of Andrew Jackson in that city, on the pedestal of which is inscribed, "United We Stand; Divided We Fall." Seeing an old colored man standing by, he asked, "Uncle, did that inscription stay there all during the Civil War?" "No, sah," responded the old uncle, "hit didn't stay dar endurin' de wah. In de fust place, dem letters was standin' out laik dey was plastered on. Den de wah bust loose, and de Confed'rate gin'ral down yere, he tuk a chisel and cut dem letters off smooth. Den ol' Gin'ral Butler, he come erlong wid his Union sojers, an' he tuk a chisel an' cut dem in deep, laik dey is now. An', Lordy, how de folks down yere did ow'ar when ol' Gin'ral Butler brush de dus' off'n his clothes an' git up frum his wu'k an' say, 'I'se a-gwine to hang de fus' Johnny Reb what cuts dem letters off ag'in.'"

When the late President of the United States and party went west not many months before he was shot, Mrs. McKinley, it will be remembered, went too. While talking one day with Mr. Scott, the man who built the battleship "Oregon," relates a writer in the Boston "Journal," Mrs. McKinley said: "Oh, do you play cribbage, Mr. Scott?" "Yes," was the great shipbuilder's answer. "Well, so do I," said Mrs. McKinley. "I wish you would play a game with me." "I should be delighted to do so," was the reply. Later, as President McKinley and Mr. Scott were looking over the latter's big plant, Mrs. McKinley not being present, the President said: "Oh, by the way, Mr. Scott, didn't I hear you and Mrs. McKinley arranging to play cribbage some time?" "Yes," said Mr. Scott, "we are going to play." "Well, what kind of a player are you?" asked the President. "Oh, pretty fair, I guess; I play a pretty good game." "Well, so do I," said Mr. McKinley. "But, do you know, it may seem strange, but it is a fact, that I have never been able to play well enough to beat Mrs. McKinley." As he said this he looked at Mr. Scott with a significant smile. Their eyes met. It was enough. Mr. Scott understood, and it was safe to say that he did not beat Mrs. McKinley.

The Origin of Whist.

THE following statement, culled from the current number of a magazine, is an egregious blunder:

"The originator of the game of whist is (sic) Edmond Hoyle (1672-1769)." Cotton writing in 1674 tells us that Whist was as well known at that time that "every Child almost of Eight Years old, hath a Competent Knowledge of the recreation." Hoyle was then not two years of age. But we must go a great deal farther back for the origin of the game, which is indeed lost in the obscurity of the centuries. Previous to 1526 the game of Triumph (whence trump), which embraced the essential features of Whist, had considerable vogue in England. It furnished Bishop Latimer with an illustration for a sermon preached at Christmas, 1529. Shakespeare's familiarity with the game is evident from Antony's address to Eros ("Antony and Cleopatra," Act IV., Scene XIV.)

The game acquired the name of Whist, or Whisk, in the forepart of the seventeenth century. Butler uses the present appellation in Hudibras (1663).

About 1728 a little circle of players, presided over by the then Lord Folkestone, was wont to meet in the Crown Coffee House. This was the inception of scientific Whist. Hoyle was probably a member of the coterie in question.

The publication of his treatise (1742-3) and his efforts as a professional teacher did much to establish the game in the favor of the upper classes of English society.

"What do you think of the movement for shorter honeymoons?" I asked my fellow-traveler, an experienced gentleman from Chicago. "That's right," he declared, without a pause. "Short honeymoons and more of them. That's my platform."—Ex.

Curious Bits of News.

Mr. and Mrs. John Williams of Danville, Kentucky, lately celebrated their golden wedding, and one of the gifts they received was a handsome tombstone with their names engraved upon it. This was from J. R. Wright, a local monument dealer, and, strange to say, the old couple were delighted with the unique gift.

The authorities of the city of Rouen, the home of the famous cathedral, are considering a plan to utilize the street trolley wires for the extinguishment of fires. The scheme is to place electrically driven pumps at suitable points along the electric tramway system which covers the city, and then, in case of fire, to switch on the current from the trolley wires to drive the pumps.

A quantity of jewels and trinkets which had played important parts in murders and other crimes were sold at auction by the police authorities of Paris the other day. Most of the articles brought prices far above their intrinsic value, their worth being enhanced in the eyes of the morbid because of the grewsome associations connected with them. Those which were bloodstained were in great demand.

The Hong Kong "Daily Press" says that the Tartar General of Canton having been troubled by an evil influence in his yamen, which in one month caused the death of his wife and daughter, as well as of a former Tartar general, a fung shui professor was finally called in. He looked over the city, and decided the evil influence was the roof of the library of the Government school for foreign languages. The roof, which was a peaked one, was at once removed, and is now being replaced by a flat one.

Mr. Charles Frohman, at the commencement of Kubelik the violinist's American tour, insured the latter's right hand against injury for $10,000. It might be supposed that the chance of a musician getting his hand hurt was remote. Yet when Raffael Joseffy first came to Chickering Hall and made a sensation a felon on his thumb interrupted his engagement. Josef Hofmann fell from his bicycle and hurt his hand under similar circumstances. Ole Bull, Wieniawski and Paderewski were also subjected to accidents that interfered with their tours.

A lively debate has taken place in the Senate of the Australian confederation, as a result of a statement of Senator Sargood's that he had seen women ploughing in South Australia. A gentleman from that State doubted the assertion and hotly resented it, but it was backed up by another senator, Pearce. A writer in the Sydney "Bulletin" adds that he has often seen women ploughing in South Australia. "The last occasion was near Mount Gambier. The plough-lady was wearing Wellington boots, and her husband, a fat German gentleman, sat on a fence near by, complacently smoking."

The people of Galveston, Texas, are perfecting plans to protect themselves from another invasion of the sea, such as the one which devastated their city over a year ago. These plans provide for a sea-wall, to be built on the beach, and to extend the whole length of the city limits; and for raising the grade of the entire city. It is a mammoth undertaking, which will cost the already impoverished city millions, and involve considerable additional outlay by each property-owner. The city is to fill in, with sand pumped from the Gulf, an area of ground on the Gulf side of the city, four miles long and one mile wide, to an elevation of ten feet. The city will also raise all the streets and alleys.

Her Love For Her Lions.

AN instance of the affection felt for wild beasts by their tamers cited by "St. Nicholas" is the case of Madame Bianca, the French tamer, who in the winter of 1899 was with the Bostock Wild Animal Show giving daily exhibitions in Baltimore, where her skill and daring with lions and tigers earned wide admiration. It will be remembered how fire suddenly descended on this menagerie one night and destroyed the animals, amid fearful scenes. And in the morning Bianca stood among the ruins and looked upon the charred bodies of her pets. Had she lost her dearest friends she could scarcely have shown deeper grief. She was in despair, and declared that she would never tame another group; she would leave the show business. And when the menagerie was stocked afresh with lions and tigers Bianca would not go near their cages. These were lions indeed, but not her lions, and she shook her head and mourned for "Bowser," the handsomest lioness in captivity, and "Spitfire," and "Juliette," and the black-maned "Brutus." Nor could money tempt her. And the outcome was that this most successful woman lion-tamer in the world retired into private life—gave up her career simply because of her grief for these dead animals.

Past His First Youth.

THE swan is said to be excellent eating when young; but as it is one of the longest-lived of all creatures, it is well to learn if possible how old your bird is before you cook it.

A gentleman in Lincolnshire, England, sent a dead swan to the Athenaeum Club, addressed to the secretary. A special dinner was to occur that week, and the committee without question turned the bird over to the cook.

At the dinner the swan, resting on a great silver dish, was a delight to the eye; but when it came to carving and eating the bird, no knife seemed sharp enough to cut it, and of course eating it was out of the question.

A few days later the donor met the secretary and said, "I hope you got my swan all right."

"That was a nice joke you played on us," returned the secretary.

"Joke? What do you mean?"

"Why, we had the thing boiled for thirteen hours, and even then we might as well have tried to cut through the Rock of Gibraltar."

"You don't mean to say you had the swan cooked!"

"Why, of course."

"Man alive! I sent it to be stuffed and preserved as a curiosity in the club. That swan has been in my family for two hundred and eighty years. It was one of the identical birds fed by the children of Charles I.—you've seen the picture of it. My ancestor held the post of 'master of the swans and keeper of the king's cygnets.' Well, I have no doubt it was a bit tough."

A Great Whispering Gallery.

With the increase of cable, telegraph and telephone communication, and especially with the introduction of the marvels of wireless telegraphy, the world has been converted into a huge whispering gallery.—"Herald," Sydney.

Artist—I guess I'll make it a half-tone. Model—Which shall I put on—my ball dress or my bathing suit?—"Town Topics."

A Bank on Wheels.

ONE of the most brilliant ideas of modern times has just occurred to the local authorities which administer the public moneys of the town of Mezieres, in the Ardennes. The new scheme consists in an "automobile savings bank." The term requires some explanation.

The inventors apply it to a new sort of motor car which they are having built. The vehicle is propelled by electricity and contains four seats, one in front and apart from the others, for the driver. The three places behind are arranged round a revolving table in the middle of the car, one at each side and one at the rear of the vehicle. Writing desks are fitted over each of the three seats and devised in such a way that they can be either folded flat against the sides of the carriage inwardly or opened outwardly. The central table also contains desks, besides bookshelves and a small metallic strong-box. Such is the new automobile. The use to which the authorities of Mezieres intend to put their invention is as follows:

The car will travel round the country, making stoppages of an hour or so on prearranged days in the different localities of the department. The passengers will be two clerks of the local treasury administration and a cashier. They will carry with them a complete collection of savings bank books, registers and forms, and the third of the above-mentioned officials will be empowered to receive moneys. Your readers will have now divined the purpose of the financial authorities of Mezieres. It seems that these gentlemen, assembled in council lately, came to the conclusion that something should be done to encourage thrift among the peasantry of the Ardennes. On the other hand, it was recognized that the saving propensity was already very marked among the country folk. What was needed was that the administration should meet their wants halfway. The peasants put by their earnings thriftily enough, but frequently fail to invest them in savings banks because, especially in the busy summer months, they have little time for journeying to the few principal towns where the offices are situated. So the authorities determined upon sending the savings bank to the country folk instead of waiting any longer for the latter to find time to come to the office.

The description of the vehicle which the authorities have had built, according to their own designs, requires no further explanation except to say that the movable desks are intended for use by the public, hence the arrangement by which they can be opened outward over the road. It is reported that the scheme meets with the unqualified approval of the savings bank clerks, whose days hitherto throughout the fine season have been spent in musty offices. But, contrary to what might have been expected, the public does not look upon the innovation with unalloyed delight. Some suspicious persons have spread a rumor that the administrative motor car will not always convey savings bank clerks, but will occasionally bring—more often, perhaps, than would be desirable—that unwelcome visitor, the tax collector.

The Phraseology of Sport.

THE London "Outlook," in a recent number, while conceding that every sport and pastime should, naturally, have an especial phraseology, deplored the fact that this phraseology is becoming more jargon. In its "palmy days" the P.R. could boast a language of its own; and one regrets to notice that the picturesque reporter is now doing the same disservice to cricket. When an eleven makes a bad start it is suffering from "rot and rout." One batsman is "breezy," another plays with "graceful assurance," a third is "cheaply dismissed." A score that progresses unevenly is "streaky," and a very favorite formula runs that So-and-So "played excellent cricket." This might reasonably be expected on a cricket field, where Bridge or Ping-pong would be somewhat out of place. After all, however, it is the billiard reporter who most savagely dislocates the vertebrae of the King's English. Not long ago one of the brotherhood varied the monotony of life by describing the red ball as a "pinky round."

After all, the most glaring examples of idiotic phraseology in the English papers are exceedingly tame beside those of our own, says the "Bookman." For instance, let us take the American equivalent for the English game of cricket. The knowing reporter writing a description of a game of baseball never makes the mistake of calling the ball "the ball." To him, of course, it is the "sphere," the "pellet," the "pea" or the "leather." A batsman never makes his base on balls; "he strolls" or he gets "a free pass to the first corner." He does not make a base hit, but "he singles" or he "slams the pea to the center garden." He does not strike out, but "he fans" or "he pounds the air." The pitcher does not pitch; he does "slab duty" or he "bends them" or he "passes them up." We might continue in this strain indefinitely.

To refer to a baseball team representing a certain city by its proper name would be to betray a woeful lack of knowledge and experience. A few years ago, after the veteran ballplayer Anson relinquished his leadership of the Chicago team, that team was, for a short time at the beginning of the season, without any nickname whatever. Sporting writers all over the country were in a state of chaos. The Chicago newspapers opened their columns to suggestions for a suitable sobriquet, and matters generally were unsettled and unsatisfactory until the significance of the desertion of Anson dawned upon one ingenious scribe, and the Chicagos immediately became "the Orphans." During the first two years of its career in the National League the New York team was known as the "Maroons." In 1885 this title was dropped for that of "the Giants," a term which at a period when the team was unpopular was modified to "the Joints." The Bostons are, of course, "the Beaneaters;" the Washingtons, "the Senators;" the Baltimores, "the Orioles," or "the Birds;" the Brooklyns are "the Trolley Dodgers."

A school inspector, having a few minutes to spare after examining the school, put a few questions to the lower form boys on the common objects in the schoolroom.

"What is the use of that map?" he asked, pointing to one stretched across the corner of the room; and half a dozen shrill voices answered, in measured articulation:

"It's to hide the teacher's bicycle, sir!"—Weep.

George Ade, the Chicago man who writes the "Fables in Slang," hails from Indiana, which he has said is a State which a man "should never go back on—or to." The other night he met an Indiana woman who asked him if he had ever noticed how many bright people come from Indiana. "Yes," he replied, "and the brighter they are the quicker they come."

A lunacy commissioner was making his customary rounds. An inmate whose particular fancy it was to pose as a much-married man approached with the announcement that he had once again taken to himself a wife. "And who is the fortunate lady?" said the commissioner. "Ah," said the lunatic, smiling sweetly, "she's the daughter of the devil." "Indeed; and how do you get on together?" "Get on? Oh, well, I get on right enough with the wife; but it's the old people I can't put up with."

An English mining engineer who has come out from the Yukon brings among other interesting things evidence that the higher the latitude the greater the latitude. Watching a poker game in which the stakes were heavy, he saw a player give himself four aces from the bottom of the pack. Burning with indignation at such shameless cheating, he turned to a bystander and whispered, "Did you see that?" "See what?" "Why, that fellow dealt himself four aces!" "Well, wasn't it his deal?"

When Miss Delavelle Barrington was playing Miami in The Green Bushes at the old Mary Street Theater, Cork, a ludicrous incident occurred. Miami has to jump into the Mississippi, but when Miss Barrington reached the rocky eminence from which she had to leap she saw there was no mattress below to receive her; also the ledge of rock in front of the supposed river was too low to conceal the actress after her leap. Miss Barrington, however, nothing daunted, took her leap, and came down with a thud on the bare stage. The situation struck a member of the "gods," for a stentorian voice called out: "Oh, be jabers, 'tis frozen!"

A salutation of respect in China is to comment on the mature and even venerable appearance of one's guest. When the United States Minister to Siam (Mr. Barrett) called officially on Li Hung Chang he was accompanied by a prominent missionary, a man eighty years of age, with white hair and beard, who was to serve as interpreter. Unknown to Mr. Barrett, the missionary and the Chinaman had had a falling out some years before. Li came into the reception room, saluted Mr. Barrett cordially, and bowed stiffly to the patriarchal interpreter. To the youthful Minister the Premier said: "I congratulate you, sir, on your venerable mien;" and then, nodding toward the octogenarian, he asked: "And is this your son?"

A Highland laird who could not afford to keep his own piper was accustomed to employ the village piper when he had company. On one occasion, through some oversight, Donald had not been given his preliminary glass of whiskey before he began his performance. Accordingly, he found his bagpipe in a most refractory temper. The laird asked him what was the matter with it, and Donald replied that the leather was so hard that he could do nothing with it. "What will soften it?" asked the anxious laird. "Och! just whuskey," said Donald. A tumbler of whiskey was at once brought, which Donald immediately drank. "You rascal!" said the laird; "did you not say it was for the bagpipes?" "Och, yess, yess," said Donald, "but she will be a ferry peculiar pipes this. She aye likes it blawed in."

Gladstone was fond of loitering around the second-hand book-shop windows, and fingering the volumes which were there displayed. If he picked up a book that interested him, he frequently became quite oblivious to his surroundings. On one of these occasions, a loafer, who must have carefully studied Mr. Gladstone's habits, whispered quietly: "Half a crown, please, sir." Without raising his eyes from the book, Mr. Gladstone put his hand in his pocket, and handed over the half-crown. A few minutes later he was going off with his prize, when the bookseller, who knew him well by sight, stopped him with a demand for one shilling, the price of the book. "But I have already given you half a crown," said Mr. Gladstone, and explanations followed.

In the heyday of the glory and power of the late Ward McAllister, the leader of New York society, he was a slave to conventions. Like most young conservatives, he grew liberal with years. When his brother, the late Hall McAllister, came to visit him from San Francisco, he looked upon it as an affliction of a country relative. Hall was developed here, and he wore a broad-brimmed hat, and had something of the Western breeziness in his manner that distressed his brother, the New York society leader. Ward asked Hall if he would please wear a silk hat, frock coat and gloves. "No," said Hall, "you attend to all that nonsense for me. I am too old to change. Let me go my own way." Hall had the habit of shaking hands with ladies upon making new acquaintances. This especially distressed his brother. "It is very bad taste to offer your hand to a lady," explained Ward. "Don't do it, Hall." Finally Ward introduced Hall to Mrs. Astor, and she cordially offered him her hand. "No, madam," said Hall. "I should like very much to shake hands with you, but I can't. My brother Ward says I mustn't."

A Large Covey.

Two old hunters were swapping yarns and had got to quail.

"Why," said one, "I remember a year when quail were so thick that you could get eight or ten at a shot with a rifle."

The other one sighed.

"What's the matter?" said the first.

"I was thinking of my quail hunts. I had a fine black horse that I rode everywhere, and one day out hunting quail I saw a big covey on a low branch of a tree. I threw the bridle rein over the end of the limb and took a shot.

"Several birds fell and the rest flew away.

"Well, sir, there were so many quail on that limb that when they flew off it sprung back into place and hung my horse."—Los Angeles "Times."

Anecdotal.

On one occasion Governor "Dick" Oglesby of Illinois went down to Joliet to inspect the State prison, and in one of the cells he found a very ugly man. "How did you get in here?" asked Oglesby. "Abduction," was the reply; "I tried to run off with a girl, and they caught me." "I'll pardon you as soon as I get back to Springfield," said the governor; "I don't see how you could expect to get a wife in any other way."

When he was plain Professor Thompson, Lord Kelvin invented the mirror galvanometer and siphon recorder, which made submarine telegraphy commercially practicable. It is related that one day when he was engaged on his deep-sea soundings work, he was discovered by a visitor experimenting with a long coil of wire. "What is that for?" enquired the visitor, pointing to the wire. "Making soundings," replied the professor. "Ah," said the guest, jocularly, "what kind of note does it give off?" "The deep C, of course," came the answer, like a shot, accompanied by the well-known twinkle in the professor's eye.

Not many years ago there was a veteran teacher in an Ontario high school who often made his classes wince under the lash of his bitter sarcasm and ready wit. One day a little half-starved yellow cur strayed into the school and the boys thought they saw a chance to express their feelings toward "Fussy," who was temporarily absent from the room. The frightened mongrel was picked up, fitted with a pair of spectacles and tied yelping on the teacher's chair. "Fussy" entered the room, walked to the desk, calmly surveyed the work of his pupils, and then turning to them said pleasantly: "In my absence, I see you have held a business meeting and elected one of your number chairman."

The late Professor Blackie, who was familiar to everyone in the streets of Edinburgh, had long, venerable, white locks. He was one day accosted by a very dirty little bootblack, with his "Clean your boots, sir?" The professor was impressed by the grime on the boy's face. "I don't want my boots cleaned, my lad," said he, "but if you'll go and wash your face I'll give you sixpence." "A' richt, sir!" was the boy's reply. Then he went over to a neighboring fountain and fulfilled his part of the bargain. When he returned he held out his hand for the money. "Well, my lad," said the professor, "you have earned your sixpence. Here it is." "I dinna want it," replied the boy, with a self-important air. "Ye can keep it and get your hair cut."

It is scarcely credible that so faithful a servant and so good a courtier as John Brown of Balmoral could ever deliberately have kept his sovereign waiting, but the London "Tatler" relates an anecdote which shows that he had a very human side. Brown was very fond of fishing, and one day, when he had a fine salmon on his hook, there came a message from the castle on Deeside, desiring his presence at once. Queen Victoria was going for her afternoon drive, and it was Brown's duty to attend her, as he always did, sitting in the rumble of the carriage. "Tell Her Majesty that I'll be quickly," he said. But the salmon was strong and could not be landed at once. Another and more urgent message reached him. "Tell Her Majesty that I have a salmon on, but I'll be in in a few minutes." Still the salmon held out, and a third and imperative command arrived. "Tell Her Majesty," shouted Brown, "that it's not possible for me to leave without the salmon!" Nor did he. But whether the Queen knew enough of fishing and fishermen to appreciate the circumstances is not told.

The Original Mr. Squeers.

THE thoughtlessness of writers in caricaturing people for grotesque purposes in their novels has been the cause of much annoyance and suffering to sensitive persons. Both Dickens and Thackeray sinned in this respect through their perfectly evident portraiture of persons who could easily be identified.

A writer in the "Literary Era," after citing the offences of Thackeray, Disraeli and others, brings up the notable case of the schoolmaster in "Nicholas Nickleby," and says:

The greatest injury which Dickens ever inflicted on a fellow-being was his too accurate portrait of an innocent man in his Squeers. That Yorkshire schoolmasters were, as a rule, cruel and wicked enough, it is true. But the particular schoolmaster, who was recognized and who recognized himself as the original Squeers, seems to have been an exception to the rule.

It will be remembered that Dickens and his illustrator traveled together to the north of England for the purpose of collecting material for "Nickleby," and especially for the Dotheboys episode. At Great Bridge they visited a boarding-school known as Bowes Academy. The master, William Shaw, received the strangers with some hauteur, and did not so much as withdraw his eyes from the operation of pen-making during the interview.

"Phiz" sketched him in the act. "Boz" described the act. The personal peculiarities of William Shaw were recognized in Squeers. Shaw became a butt of popular ridicule, lost his pupils, and finally died of a broken heart. Yet there is abundant evidence to prove that he was a really excellent and kind-hearted man, who was made to suffer for the misdeeds of his neighbors.

A Pretty Broad Hint.

AN anecdote is told of one of the smaller South American republics which illustrates the methods which are adopted when it comes to a question of making war. The "navy" of the particular power referred to consists of a single, old-fashioned, side-wheel steamer, armed with one gun. In time of peace she is engaged in hauling freight up and down the river which runs close to the capital. At the outbreak of one of the periodical wars, not so very long ago, the president of the republic took charge of the steamer and started up stream on a recruiting expedition, leaving his senior general in charge of the military preparations at the capital. A couple of days later the steamer returned, and some seventy miserable-looking natives, each firmly bound with a strong rope, were marched off and turned over to the general, with a note from the president, which read: "Dear General—I send you herewith seventy volunteers. Please return the ropes at once."

Curious Bits of News.

Dr. G. L. Johnson, whose studies of the eyes of mammals have recently been published, calls attention to the fact that men and monkeys alone possess parallel and convergent vision of the two eyes. On the other hand, the lower mammals possess divergent and consequently very widely extended vision. Squirrels, for instance, and probably hares and rabbits as well, are able to see an enemy approaching directly from behind without turning the head.

Don't Allow Operation for Cancer

There is a simpler, safer and more effective Method of Treatment.

Dr. J. C. Oliver, of Cincinnati, Ohio, U.S.A., in a paper he read before the Ohio State Medical Society, May 1896, said: "I have operated in a considerable number of cases of Cancer recently, and with one exception all have died within fourteen months after the operation."

This statement of a prominent Surgeon, should make any one suffering from cancer, hesitate before submitting to operation and consider carefully the evidence offered on behalf of the new Constitutional remedy, which cures Cancers, Tumors and all malignant growths, without the necessity of operation. It is a simple vegetable medicine that searches out and destroys the cancer growths, completely eradicating the disease, and at the same time, builds up and invigorates the system.

Stott & Jury, Bowmanville, Ont., will be pleased to send full particulars of this treatment, in a plain, sealed wrapper.

Out on Suspended Sentence

Judge Ketcham held court in town on Saturday, and took evidence in a case in which a well known young man in town was charged with indecent assault upon a young lady. The evidence produced showed the young man technically guilty, but the judge held the charge was very trivial, and allowed the accused to go on suspended sentence.

The pall-bearers were Messrs. Wm. Galley, Wm. Borland, John Ross, Robert Robertson, John Robertson and Andrew McFarlane, all of whom have been in the employ of the company for upwards of thirty years. The remains were interred at the Little Lake Cemetery.

A STEADY WORKER

Coffee Works Slow But Sure

Many people use coffee day after day without any idea of the serious work it does with nerves, stomach, bowels, and sometimes with the eyes, heart and kidneys. Its work is done gradually, that is, the poison affects the nerve centres a little to-day and a little to-morrow, and so on, and finally the nerve cells are slowly broken down and then nature begins the call for help.

It is a safe proposition that if a man or woman has headaches, stomach trouble, or any such ailments come on at intervals, something is wrong with the food or drink, and this question should be investigated carefully, for health is the best capital anyone can possess and wilfully breaking it down is a piece of childish folly.

It is easy to leave off coffee if one will take Postum Food Coffee, properly made, for Postum has a delicious coffee flavor, and a deep seal brown color which changes to a golden brown when cream is added, and it satisfies the coffee drinker without any of the bad effects of coffee; on the contrary, the result of using Postum is the rebuilding of the broken-down nerve centres by the food elements contained in it.

Postum is a pure food beverage made by scientific food makers and can be depended upon absolutely for its purity and the good results that follow its use.

To bring out the flavor and food value Postum must be boiled at least 15 minutes after the boiling begins.

MEMORIAL SERVICE

Sermon Preached by Rev. J. G. Potter on Sunday Evening

—At St. Andrews church last night the service partook of the nature of a memorial service in view of the recent tragic death of Miss Celia Sanderson.

The subject announced last week was "A new Testament Tragedy," and the pastor, the Rev. J. G. Potter, in referring to the circumstances surrounding the death of John the Baptist, took occasion to place in contrast the peaceful though sudden death of one who had worshipped in St. Andrews' last Sunday night. Mr. Potter appealed to the parents to do all they could to secure the interest and salvation of their children, and cited a case to illustrate his meaning, when an aged pastor attending the funeral of a young girl asked his assistant if the girl had been a Christian, he replied feelingly that he did not know. Turning to her Sabbath school teacher, he whispered the same question, but she was ignorant regarding the young woman's life; then leaning over to both father and mother, he put the same question, and was much touched when they too, responded that they did not know.

After referring to the various persons and scenes in the narrative, Matt. XIV., Mr. Potter urged the following lessons:

1. The cutting off of the life of those who admonish us or teach us, will not release the conscience.

2. Let us be true to self, to duty, to conscience and to God.

3. Avoid at all times that revelry and selfish pleasure that leads to rewardless and forgetfulness of God.

4. Live every day such a life as will be useful and true to the spirit, character and purpose of your Lord and Master.

A True Brain Food

must replace the feeling of lassitude and mental tiredness by clearness and strength of mind. Not that it goes directly to the brain. That were foolish. The true brain food must be carried by rich, red blood. If mental fatigue worries and alarms you, look not to the brain, but to the stomach and assimilative organs. No remedy yet discovered possesses the marvellous brain strengthening power that Ferrozone has demonstrated in thousands of cases. Ferrozone does not stimulate the brain into a fitful glow, but by improving digestion, strengthening the nervous system, stimulating assimilation, giving new strength to the heart, it sends a stream of red vitalizing blood to the brain. Thus it is a true brain food. Ferrozone is sold by Ormond & Walsh.

MODERN CHRISTIAN'S PRAYER

Oh, Lord, I come to Thee in prayer
once more;
But pardon that I do not kneel before
Thy gracious presence—for my knees are sore
With too much walking. In my chair instead
I'll sit at ease and humbly bow my head.

I've labored in Thy vineyard. Thou dost know;
I've sold ten tickets to the minstrel show,
I've called on fifteen strangers in our town,
Their contributions to our church put down;
I've baked a pot of beans for Wednesday's spree—
An "Old Time Supper" it is going to be,
I've dressed three dolls for our annual fair,
And made a cake which we will raffle
there.

Now, with Thy boundless wisdom, so sublime;
Thou knowest that these duties all take time.
I have no time to fight with my spirit's foes,
I have no time to mend my husband's clothes.
My children roam the streets from morn till night,
I have no time to teach them to do right.

But Thou, Oh, Lord, considering my cares,
Will count them righteous and heed
my prayers.
Bless the bean supper and the minstrel
show,
And put it in the hearts of all to go.
Induce all visitors to patronize
The men who in our programme advertise,
Because I've chased those merchants till they hid
Whene'er they saw me coming — yes
they did.
Increase the contributions to our fair,
And bless the people who assemble
there.
Bless Thou the grab-bag and the gypsy tent,
The flower table and the cake that's sent,
May our whist club be to Thy service
blest,
The dancing party gayer than the rest;
And when Thou hast bestowed these blessings—then
We pray that, Thou will bless our souls.—Amen.

NORTH AMERICAN OIL & REFINING COMPANY'S

Stock and It Will Make You Rich

The company owns 2,080 acres of land located in the Newhall-Acton White Oil Fields of Los Angeles County, California. Our manager Mr. J. H. Parker, writes us under date of Jan. 15th that they have opened up two oil wells near our property, one being a gusher of white oil just as clear as alcohol, and of 52 degrees gravity. This oil is worth and is selling at $4.00 per barrel at the well, and producing better than 50 barrels per day. Our derrick is up and the machinery purchased; we expect to be drilling in a very short time. We now offer to the public 100,000 shares of this meritorious company's stock at the low price of 10 cents per share, and it is worth a great deal more money at the present time with the showing we have in the property. The demand for this oil is far greater than the supply, which is not so of the black oils of Lower California and Beaumont, Texas, that are a drug upon the market.

Regarding the officers of the company, they are all men of honor and means. There are no salaries paid to any of the officers, not even our General Manager, until our company is put on a paying basis.

INCORPORATION.

The company is capitalized for 1,500,000 shares, the incorporation having been effected under the laws of Wyoming, stock being all common stock, issued absolutely fully paid and forever non-assessable. The incorporation laws of Wyoming are peculiarly favorable to oil enterprises, and the par value of the stock has been fixed at One Cent per share in order to avoid the excessive revenue tax paid on stocks of a high par value.

LIABILITIES.

The company has no debts; all stock is fully paid and non-assessable, there are no stockholders' liabilities, and we have no royalties to pay for any purpose.

OUR LANDS.

The company's lands have been carefully selected by their engineer, Mr. J. H. Parker, who is also Vice President and General Manager, in conjunction with four of the best oil experts, who are well known throughout the state. These experts each unbeknown to the other went over our vast territory to locate a site to sink our first well; their reports are on file in the company's office, and we will be pleased to mail a copy of the same upon application, also maps of the oil fields with our property showing in the red. The directors call special attention to the maps, which have been drawn from actual surveys and personal inspection of the land and is accurate. The company's lands are distinctly shown as well as their relation to other oil lands and the location of oil wells, oil seepages and oil springs. A careful inspection of the map will aid prospective investors to judge of the oil under the company's lands.

The geological formation is perfect, the Anticlinal passing through the entire property, and being unbroken by granite formations.

GUARANTEE.

The officers and directors of the company have such great faith in the proposition that they will redeem all stock sold for cash, providing they do not strike oil as designated.

TREASURY STOCK.

The company holds in the treasury over 500,000 shares of treasury stock and some money. The proceeds of sale from the 100,000 shares now offered to the public will be used for the purpose of sinking wells.

REGISTRATION.

The stock is registered with the Colorado Title & Trust Company of Colorado Springs, Colorado, which guarantees any over-issue of stock.

The company would like to employ a few good Fiscal Agents to handle any part of this 100,000 shares of stock, giving them a very liberal commission. We take pleasure in recommending this stock to the good people of Peterborough and vicinity at the very low price of 10 cents per share; considering the condition of the property the stock is worth more money than what we are asking for it.

PROTESTS IN DENMARK AGAINST SALE OF THE INDIES ARE INCREASING.

Iron and Steel Builders Warn British Newspapers

Say They are Advertising American Machinery Gratis

Quarrel Among Danish Agents Reveals Corruption

London, Feb. 17.—The report of the English Iron and Steel Builders' Society has been issued in London. Fewer orders have been booked than at any time during the past five years. The report says: Everywhere we see the oft-repeated statement that British trade is decadent. Is it not time to stop the free advertisements given to the American methods of using machinery in this country? Does the public press realize the trap it has fallen into?

PROTESTING IN DENMARK.

London, Feb. 17.—A despatch to The Times from Copenhagen says that public protests against the sale of the West Indies are increasing. A quarrel among the Danish Agents in the negotiations has disclosed that corruption has been at work. The opponents of the treaty say that the American people will be disgusted with the bargain when the details of the transaction are made known.

Kruger was Turned Down

The Imperial Government is setting an admirable example in ignoring Dr. Leyds and Mr. Kruger and the other Boer representatives in Europe, on the ground that they are unworthy of confidence. Their whole course of action indicates either that they are phenomenally lacking in intelligence, or that they have interests in the issues of peace or war that are not the interests of their countrymen in South Africa. They have persistently encouraged the Boers to a hopeless resistance by misrepresenting the situation in South Africa. Great Britain will probably only negotiate with the Boer army in the field, if enough of a Boer army can be scraped together with which to negotiate

ITEMS OF INTEREST

Copenhagen, Feb. 17.—The Mormons are making strong efforts to gain a permanent foothold in Denmark. It is notorious that this little couary has notorious that this little country has furnished a large quota of emigrants for Utah, where there are thousands of Danish Mormons. Some of the most prominent leaders of this sect are Danes. Danish missionaries who have been sent to work in their native land have not been well received in Denmark. Most of them have been banished from the country as soon as it was discovered that they were here to gain converts to their religion and to encourage people to emigrate to Utah. For this reason their work has often been carried on secretly. The authorities of the Mormon Church seem to have decided recently that Denmark is an exceptionally good field for their operations, and there are now over a hundred Mormon missionaries in this country, under the supervision of a Superintendent at Copenhagen.

The missionaries publish an organ in this city and distribute thousands of tracts and books, and have grown so bold that they have purchased a piece of property in the best part of Copenhagen, on which they intend to build a Mormon temple. Money for this purpose is being collected among the Mormons in the United States. About five hundred Danes are induced to emigrate to Utah every year. The Danish press is aroused, and it is thought that steps will be taken to prevent a Mormon temple being built in the capital of Denmark, and to rid the country of Mormonism and its propagandists.

KINGS MUST NOT BE BURLESQUED

London, Feb. 17.—Word has gone abroad among the London theatrical managers that King Edward has no relish for plays in which kings are burlesqued. He took particular exception to the king of Illyria in "Kitty Grey," a gay Lothario who haunts theatrical green-rooms and entertains actresses at supper. Consequently the days of "Kitty Grey" are numbered. The King believes that the turning of royalty into ridicule or contempt is not beneficial to loyalty, yet it is asserted that his own popularity is largely due to his "Illyrian" reputation. The character of the King of Illyria apparently is based on that of the king of the Belgians, who is King Edward's cousin.

SLOW BRITISH MAIL SERVICE

London, Feb. 17.—Deserved complaint is made in the press of the extremely slow Atlantic mail service by the British Post-Office. Both the Cunard and the White Star Companies are now transmitting mails weekly by eight and nine-day boats, their fast steamer being laid aside. London merchants demand that the postal authorities should notify the public when a fast German steamer is available for the mails as an alternative to the slow British one. Immense inconvenience and loss are occasioned by the winter uncertainty of the transatlantic mail service, and the whole matter is to be brought up in Parliament soon.

Paris, Feb. 17.—M. Rouyer, correspondent to La Patrie, has written to his paper, giving startling information of the massacre of a French scientific mission by cannibals at Sieraka, New Guinea, on January 1st. The yacht Salvatti, with the mission on board, cast anchor off the coast. The natives exhibited signs of friendliness, and a number landed. During the night, however, they surprised the camp, killed twenty-five and wounded thirty-three. The murdered include Baron Villars, Count de Saint Remy, M. Hagenback and Fries.

M. Rouyer, the correspondent, was rendered unconscious by a blow from a club, and when he woke in the morning he was tied hand and foot, and surrounded by a body of savages. The body of Baron Villars was bound to a tree. The body was naked and the head split open. Count de Saint Remy's head was sticking from the head of a spear, and M. Hagenback was spitted over a fire and the natives were preparing to cut him up. The ground about was covered with corpses.

Before the horrid meal was commenced, Dr. Porter had led the remainder of the mission from the yacht on the cannibals, who fled, leaving 22 dead. The clothes of M. Fries were found, but he had evidently been devoured through the night.

New York, Feb. 17.—The worst snowstorm that has come to New York in three years began last night, and the weather department predicted that it would continue for the next 24 or 36 hours. Traffic was generally tied up, and business men who started for their respective offices at the usual time were from one to three hours late. The storm an hour after it started had all the marks of the blizzard of 14 years ago. It was accompanied by a howling gale out of the north, and, according to the weather bureau reports, covered an area from along the New England coast to the interior of New York State.

The Brooklyn residents and the commuters suffered the worst. Dozens of lines operated by the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company were completely tied up for hours.

In New York and the Bronx surface railroad traffic was delayed. There were frequent blockades on every line. In some parts of the city during the early hours cars almost butting into each other stretched for a mile or more and waited five or ten minutes before they could move.

Paris, Feb. 16.—Liberte bitterly accuses Russia of want of foresight in allowing any British-Japanese agreement to be made. It charges Russian statesmen, and particularly De Witte, the Minister of Finance, with having in every way recently discouraged Japanese good-will, instancing Japan's recent attempt to float a loan in Russia. When this failed, the Japanese naturally turned to the London market. The paper adds: "The new agreement is directed against Russia, and virtually involves us, too. We have already noted during Constantinople incidents that we were far from obtaining from Russia all the assistance due us. We remain determined partisans of the Franco-Russian alliance, but it is important that its solidity shall not be compromised."

TWO THOUSAND PERISHED IN AN EARTHQUAKE

Four Thousand Houses Destroyed, and 34 Villages Suffered—A Volcano Breaks into Eruption

Baku, Transcaucasia, Feb. 17.—Details which are slowly reaching Baku from Shemaka, about seventy miles from here, show that two thousand persons, mostly women and children, perished as a result of the earthquake last week, and about 4,000 houses were destroyed.

Thirty-four villages of the country surrounding Shemaka also suffered.

To add to the terrors of the neighborhood a volcano near the village of Marasy, to the eastward of Shamaka, has broken into active eruption. A great crevice has appeared, whence immense flames and streams of lava are being thrown out. The course of the river Geokchaiha has been altered in consequence of its bed being [illegible] with earth, dislodged by the earthquake.

Battalions of guards and detachments of sappers with tents, have been despatched to Shemaka to aid in the work of rescue. The Red Cross Society is active in alleviating distress.

Unnecessary to Suffer From Asthma

This distressing complaint can be perfectly cured by inhaling Catarrhozone, a vegetable antiseptic that destroys the germs that cause the disease. Catarrhozone is inhaled at the mouth from a convenient pocket inhaler, and after permeating the minutest air cells, is exhaled slowly through the nostrils. It stops the cough, makes breathing regular, and eradicates the asthma so thoroughly from the system that it never returns. Don't suffer from asthma, use Catarrhozone, it will speedily cure you. Large outfit $1.00. Small size 25c. Druggist or by mail from Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

At the Opera Last Night

Prof. Pull opened his weeks engagement last night with a crowded house. The entertainment was scientific and amusing. His powers as a hypnotist are certainly marvellous. He cast his magic spell over his audience last night. Raymond, in his comic songs pleased his hearers. Rice, in illustrated sentimental songs captivated the audience, while J. W. Pull's acrobatic work is excellent. There will be a complete change in programme each night, he should have full houses. He announced his blind ride which will start from the Opera House to-day at 12 o'clock. He will drive a team of horses through the principal streets with his eyes blind-folded.

RUSSIA PRETENDS IT DOESN'T CARE.

Its Objects in Far East Identical with British Jap Alliance

GERMANS HAVE TO CHOOSE

And Their Interests Will Demand That They Side with Great Britain

London, Feb. 17.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Times quotes an article on the British-Japanese alliance in the Exchange Gazette, which paper, he says, he has reason to believe in this instance expresses with considerable fidelity the views held in authoritive quarters. The Exchange Gazette says the objects of the Anglo-Japanese agreement, namely, the maintenance of the status quo in the Far East and the integrity of China and Corea, are also the avowed object of the Russian policy. Russia has, therefore, no reason to regard the Anglo-Japanese alliance with suspicion. Russia's Eastern policy is determined by her civilizing mission and geographical position. Its ultimate triumph is guaranteed by its past successes. Russian interests in Manchuria, Mongolia, and Chinese Turkestan are not in the least affected by any diplomatic bargain concluded by rival powers.

The Clerical Kolnische Volkszeitung, quoted by the Berlin correspondent of the Times, says that since the Anglo-Japanese agreement has been concluded it is hardly possible that Germany can be equally friendly with Great Britain and Russia. Germany will be in the same position as was Bismarck in 1879, when, forced to choose between Austria-Hungary and Russia, he chose Austria-Hungary. Germany is concerned in various parts where Great Britain and Russia are in rivalry. The paper adds: "In all enterprises of the world of politics, the subject of England as a mighty naval power is for us of great value, but of course we cannot obtain it if we go hand in hand with Russia, which would simply mean that we should here and there help Russia to balk English plans."

THE REV. DR. HARPER DEAD

A Methodist Minister for Sixty Years Passed Away

Word has been received of the death on Wednesday of last week, at the home of his son, at Nantasket, Mass., of the Rev. Ephraim B. Harper, D. D., one of the pioneer Methodist ministers of Canada. Dr. Harper had reached the age of eighty-four. He was one of the best known and best beloved of Methodist ministers in Canada. For over sixty years he served the church in many important towns and cities of Quebec and Ontario. The funeral took place Friday at Norval, Ont. The service was conducted by Rev. Drs. Withrow and Blackstock, and was attended by quite a large number of Methodist ministers. Mr. Harper was born of Irish parentage, near Perth, and was educated in the grammar school at that place. He started life in commercial pursuits and was converted among Methodists. He studied hard and systematically, and at the age of twenty-two, when he entered the ministry, he was well prepared for circuit work.

He was received on trial by the conference of 1842 and was received into full connection and ordained in 1844. He was then stationed at Dundas, Ont. His subsequent appointments, according to the conference records have been as follows:—Kingston, 1848-50; Toronto, 1851-54; Hamilton, 1855-57; Belleville, 1858-60; St. James, Montreal, 1861-63; Hamilton, 1864-66; Ottawa, 1867-69; Guelph, 1871-72; Port Hope, 1873; Cobourg, 1874; Port Hope, 1875; Belleville, 1876-77; Peterboro, 1878-80; Barrie, 1881-1883; Collingwood, 1884-86; Brantford, 1887-89; Davenport, Toronto, 1889-90. In 1891, having completed fifty years in the active ministry, he was placed on the superannuated list and went to reside at Barrie, where he lived for about seven years, leaving there three or four years ago to go to Nantasket, Mass., to reside with his son, the Rev. Cecil Harper.

Dr. Harper received the M.A. degree from Victoria University in 1860 and the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred upon him by Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn., in 1870.

The present Methodist church was built during the time Dr. Harper was pastor at Port Hope.

SEEKING LIGHT

Brockville Deputation Visit Ottawa Investigating Lighting Plants

Ottawa, Feb. 18—A deputation from Brockville consisting of Mayor W. H. Harrison and Messrs. R. Bowie and W. H. Comstock, ex-M.P., light commissioners, were in the city for the purpose of getting pointers for the improvement of the lighting service of the Island City. Recently a by-law empowering the expenditure of $50,000 on a lighting plant was voted on and sanctioned by the ratepayers. Two years ago the gas and electric companies were bought out and the town has since been operating its own plant. It desires that it should be modernized as fully as possible. The deputation was received by Ald. Coates, president of the gas company, and shown through the gas works by Manager T. Dunderdale, and afterwards the electric power houses were visited.

The labor movement is in the ascendancy at Brockville. At the recent election Mayor Harrison, labor candidate, was elected by the largest majority ever secured by an aspirant for that office, and out of a council of ten, seven are labor men.

ANNUAL VISIT TO PETERBORO'

Geo. Ruskin of the Colportage Mission of Algoma and the Northwest Making His Annual Visit

Geo. Ruskin, of the Colportage Mission of Algoma and the Northwest, is making his annual visit to Peterborough in behalf of the work of disseminating throughout the districts biblical literature, among the labourers, Indians and settlers. The work is the outcome of previous evangelistic work, commenced in Muskoka in 1875, and in Parry Sound in 1876, and extending over a wide district. Since the commencement of the Colportage work in 1884 there have been supplied by the mission more than 21,000 copies of scriptural books, in two languages, of which account have been taken, and thousands additional of which no account has been kept, besides the free distribution of large quantities of tracts and magazines, and 63 various editions of books and tracts, etc., published by the mission in five languages, numbering about 280,000 copies. The work is in no way denominational, but for godliness, beneficial to all creeds and nationalities, and will be enlarged as means are forthcoming to do so.

The Missionary gratefully acknowledges $35.10 contributed in Peterborough last year.

GOLD IN YOUR GARRET

In many thousands of garrets and attics women have gold stored away and are not aware of it. It is not in coins, nuggets or bars that the gold is held, neither is it in bank notes or bonds; it is there in the form of cast-off and faded clothing, garments and materials that can be turned into a gold value by the use of Diamond Dyes.

At a cost of ten cents you can recolor a dress, skirt, jacket, cape, blouse or waist, and make them as good and stylish as new ones purchased in a store. With one or two packages of Diamond Dyes you can give new life and beauty to your husband's overcoat or suit thrown aside perhaps for the rag gatherer. Your cotton and wool rags re-dyed with Diamond Dyes will make up handsome mats or rugs that will add to the comfort of your home. All the work and transformations suggested will give you results that have a gold value.

THE NORTH AMERICAN LIFE

Another Milestone Marked in the History of this Popular and Progressive Company

Elsewhere will be found the financial statement submitted at the twenty-first annual meeting of the North American Life Assurance Company, held at the head office, Toronto, on January 28th.

Again the old story of prosperity and phenomenal progress is repeated, with even greater emphasis than ever before in the history of the Company. The business has exceeded the best previous year by over half a million dollars.

The financial statement speaks for itself, and need not be repeated in this article. It is sufficient to say that Mr. Wm. McCabe, the Managing Director, and Mr. Goldman, the efficient and popular Secretary, as well as the Board of Directors, are to be heartily congratulated on the result of the year's operations.

A. O. U. W. GRAND LODGE

Ald. Shortly will Represent Peterborough Lodge—Proposed Change in the Rates

The Grand Lodge A.O.U.W. will meet in Toronto to-morrow. About five hundred delegates will be present.

The principle discussion at the meeting will be the proposed change in the assessment rates. Some changes will be recommended by a committee of the Grand Lodge and as there is considerable opposition the arguments will be very interesting.

The Grand Lodge has a membership of over 44,500 and the amount of insurance carried is about $70,000,000.

Alderman Shortly will attend the meeting as a delegate of Peterborough Lodge.

The Brand of Food That Dealers Sell Most of is the Kind for You to Use

Careful investigation has disclosed the fact that some of our largest retail grocers keep in stock no less than twenty different brands of breakfast cereals. These grocers, catering to the whims and fancies of a varied trade, acknowledge that only four of the twenty brands are good sellers, and that Malt Breakfast Food is the great leader with all classes of the people.

The high position attained by Malt Breakfast Food in this country has been acquired in less than eighteen months. This proves most conclusively that as a breakfast dish Malt Breakfast Food is giving entire satisfaction to old and young. The large number of letters of approval that the manufacturers receive monthly from every section of the Dominion and Newfoundland telling of improved digestive vigor, stronger nerves, increase in weight and improvement in health, point to the fact that Malt Breakfast Food is a true health food. One trial makes it the favorite breakfast dish. Ask your grocer for it.

MR. MOORE'S PRODUCTION.

A Most Valuable Work of Reference for Peterborough

A Compendium of Legislation Affecting the Town—Mr. Moore Generously Presents The Book to the Town.

A very useful little work has been issued by Mr. W. H. Moore, barrister, being a Compendium of Legislation affecting Peterborough, including a digest of the principal by-laws of the town. Mr. Moore has generously presented the manuscript to the town, and the work has been printed, making a neat little volume. The work entailed many months of hard labor and diligent research. That the Council should have ordered but 25 volumes bound in cloth, is unfortunate. It is to be hoped that they will at once have the entire edition strongly bound.

Mr. Moore certainly has the thanks of the ratepayers for his valuable gift. In the preface, Mr. Moore says:

Having had occasion at times to refer to the particular Acts of Parliament relating to the town of Peterborough, it recently occurred to me that it would be of advantage to those who had municipal duties to perform and others who took an interest in the Town's affairs, to have a means of learning what were the provisions of those Acts, without suffering the considerable loss of time entailed in searching through the many volumes in which the Town's special legislation is contained. With this object in view, and at considerable labor, I have collected all these Acts, extending from 1847 to 1901, making a short note only of those which have become obsolete or are of little concern to the Town, such as Acts relating to railways, or of a semi-private character, but showing where these may be found, and giving in full, or nearly so, such Acts as are existing, and refer entirely and are of peculiar interest to the Town. It will be observed that in many instances verbatim copies are not given, yet so closely following the text as to fully retain the sense and force in all essentials, my object being that the layman might read and readily understand the provisions of the various Acts, and that others might also find herein the substance of that they desired and the means on hand for at once turning to the Act, and any section of it, which they wished to consult.

There will also be found copies of two proclamations of the Lieut. Governor of Ontario, the one extending the boundaries of the Town and the other incorporating Jackson Park; also two by-laws, the first for separating the Town from the then United Counties of Peterborough and Victoria, and the second in relation to the taking $120,000 stock in the Port Hope, Lindsay and Beaverton Railway Company, to assist in building the branch line from Millbrook, on which the Town still holds a mortgage in lieu of the subscribed stock, as I considered them cognate to the work, and of sufficient importance to justify a place in it.

I sincerely trust the objects I have had in view have in some measure been attained, and that this small volume may be found a considerable convenience to those who wish to gain information with regard to the subjects I have dealt with.

W. H. MOORE.

THE NEW SKATING RINK

A Very Enthusiastic Meeting Held Last Night—To Meet Again on Thursday

A meeting was held in the offices of Hatton & Bradburn last night to further consider arrangements for the erection of a new skating rink. A large number of prominent citizens were present and all are taking a deep interest in the undertaking.

Mayor Deane occupied the chair and after calling the meeting to order, stated that the committee to select a suitable site would give their report. Mr. Hatton, one of the committee, stated that they had looked at a number of places, and had found the prices asked for them. They did not decide on any lot as it was understood that there were other places to see that they had not time to visit. At the meeting several other lots were mentioned, and the committee was authorized to see these places and report at the next meeting. Considerable discussion took place regarding the size of the lots and it was decided to secure one with a good frontage as well as being of a good depth.

Mr. Charlie Bradburn was appointed secretary and by all appearances Mr. Bradburn will be a very busy man as there is considerable stock already sold, and the amount will be doubled in a very short time. The interest taken in the new rink is remarkable, and it is to be hoped that the same interest will continue. The meeting adjourned until 8 o'clock on Thursday night when a very large attendance is expected.

A FRENCH PRELATE TO COME TO CANADA

The Vatican's Representative in the Dominion to be Changed

Mgr. Zandetti of Paris, to Come to Come to Canada

The Pope Still Refuses to Have Anything to do With The Hague

Rome, Feb. 16—There has been quite a shuffle of foreign representatives from the Vatican. Mgr. Martinelli has arrived here to receive his cardinal's hat. Mgr. Zandetti, formerly Archbishop of Bucharest and now Canon of St. Marie Majure at Paris, will go to Canada to replace Mgr. Falconio, who will succeed Mgr. Martinelli as Papal delegate at Washington.

The Vatican still refuses to send a representative to The Hague, as it blames the Netherlands Government for being excluded from the peace conference.

The Pope's health is good, notwithstanding reports to the contrary. He takes his usual daily walks, and eats and sleeps well.

OYSTER SUPPER

In the Cosy School Room of Murray Street Baptist Church

The members of the Baptist Young People's Union of Murray street church, with a number of their friends, spent a very pleasant evening in the school room of the church last night. The Union meets each Monday evening, and it is customary on the last Monday of each quarter to hold an informal gathering. Last evening this meeting took the form of an oyster supper, and the members are to be congratulated upon the manner in which the spread, and the programme preceding it were prepared.

Mr. R. Merrit, President of the Y.P.U. took the chair, and the literary portion of the evening's enjoyment was begun a selection by the orchestra—with "Never Alone." This was followed by a clever Irish reading by Miss Bradshaw, and a charade in which a young gentleman and two of the ladies presented three scriptural people Pharisee, Scribe and Sadducee. The orchestra again favored the assembly with a selection, "Come to Jesus," and were followed by the Ladies' Comb Orchestra who were enthusiastically encored. The final number on the programme was a tableau presented by Misses Stainbrook, Taylor and Martin, representing the "Three Graces." This was a touching and beautiful pose by the three young ladies, attired in snowy white and with hair flowing loosely over their shoulders. In the centre was the cross, also snowy white, and grown with ivy.

While these numbers were being rendered, others had been busy in the kitchen adjoining, and now the company, about one hundred in number, sat down to a fresh and tempting repast of oysters, cake and coffee, etc. The unstinted enjoyment of all was evidenced by the happy trend of conversation and the constant ripple of laughter around the board.

Supper was served by a number of pretty misses, each wearing as a distinction of her rank a dainty creation of white lace in her hair, and a spotless pinafore apron; and they were ably assisted by some of the male members of the Union.

Supper over, the gathering joined in the National Anthem, and one of the most successful functions which have been held by the Union was closed.

The Murray St. Y.P.U. is an active, aggressive body, and as it is fed from a Sabbath School with a membership of about 300, the prospects for its growth are most encouraging.

WIN AT KINGSTON

Peterborough Wins the Round by 1st Goals—Score Last Night 4-2

The Intermediates of Peterborough, journeyed to Kingston yesterday to play the Cadet team of the R.M.C. of that city.

The game was closely contested by the two teams, the Cadets playing a much better game than they did in Peterborough last week.

At half-time the score stood 1—0 in favor of Kingston, but the Intermediates were resting themselves, and in the second-half, turned the score, and won from the Cadets by a score of four goals to two.

The next match will be played here on Thursday or Friday of this week with the Hamilton team.

Mr. Nicholls' Gift to Ridley

Mr. Frederic Nicholls, President of the General Electric Company, has presented to Ridley College a combined hall and hockey rink, which is to cost at least $5,000. This generous gift is the outcome of his interest in the new building erected for the junior department, and the acquisition of seventy acres of land for playing-ground. These new enterprises at Ridley are largely the result of Mr. Nicholls' counsel, energy and financial help. He has now endeared himself to Ridley boys by providing them with the means for winter sport and with a hall for prize day ceremonies. He is also interested in the new wing to be at once erected to provide further accommodation in the already crowded junior school.

PROTESTS IN DENMARK AGAINST SALE OF THE INDIES ARE INCREASING.

Kruger was Turned Down

The Imperial Government is setting an admirable example in ignoring Dr. Leyds and Mr. Kruger and the other Boer representatives in Europe, on the ground that they are unworthy of confidence. Their whole course of action indicates either that they are phenomenally lacking in intelligence, or that they have interests in the issues of peace or war that are not the interests of their countrymen in South Africa. They have persistently encouraged the Boers to a hopeless resistance by misrepresenting the situation in South Africa. Great Britain will probably only negotiate with the Boer army in the field, if enough of a Boer army can be scraped together with which to negotiate

Iron and Steel Builders Warn British Newspapers

Say They are Advertising American Machinery Gratis

Quarrel Among Danish Agents Reveals Corruption

London, Feb. 17.—The report of the English Iron and Steel Builders' Society has been issued in London. Fewer orders have been booked than at any time during the past five years. The report says: Everywhere we see the oft-repeated statement that British trade is decadent. Is it not time to stop the free advertisements given to the American methods of using machinery in this country? Does the public press realize the trap it has fallen into?

PROTESTING IN DENMARK.

London, Feb. 17.—A despatch to The Times from Copenhagen says that public protests against the sale of the West Indies are increasing. A quarrel among the Danish Agents in the negotiations has disclosed that corruption has been at work. The opponents of the treaty say that the American people will be disgusted with the bargain when the details of the transaction are made known.

ITEMS OF INTEREST

Copenhagen, Feb. 17.—The Mormons are making strong efforts to gain a permanent foothold in Denmark. It is notorious that this little country has notorious that this little country has furnished a large quota of emigrants for Utah, where there are thousands of Danish Mormons. Some of the most prominent leaders of this sect are Danes. Danish missionaries who have been sent to work in their native land have not been well received in Denmark. Most of them have been banished from the country as soon as it was discovered that they were here to gain converts to their religion and to encourage people to emigrate to Utah. For this reason their work has often been carried on secretly. The authorities of the Mormon Church seem to have decided recently that Denmark is an exceptionally good field for their operations, and there are now over a hundred Mormon missionaries in this country, under the supervision of a Superintendent at Copenhagen.

The missionaries publish an organ in this city and distribute thousands of tracts and books, and have grown so bold that they have purchased a piece of property in the best part of Copenhagen, on which they intend to build a Mormon temple. Money for this purpose is being collected among the Mormons in the United States. About five hundred Danes are induced to emigrate to Utah every year. The Danish press is aroused, and it is thought that steps will be taken to prevent a Mormon temple being built in the capital of Denmark, and to rid the country of Mormonism and its propagandists.

KINGS MUST NOT BE BURLESQUED

London, Feb. 17.—Word has gone abroad among the London theatrical managers that King Edward has no relish for plays in which kings are burlesqued. He took particular exception to the king of Illyria in "Kitty Grey," a gay Lothario who haunts theatrical green-rooms and entertains actresses at supper. Consequently the days of "Kitty Grey" are numbered. The King believes that the turning of royalty into ridicule or contempt is not beneficial to loyalty, yet it is asserted that his own popularity is largely due to his "Illyrian" reputation. The character of the King of Illyria apparently is based on that of the King of the Belgians, who is King Edward's cousin.

SLOW BRITISH MAIL SERVICE

London, Feb. 14.—Deserved complaint is made in the press of the extremely slow Atlantic mail service by the British Post-Office. Both the Cunard and the White Star Companies are now transmitting mails weekly by eight and nine-day boats, their fast steamer being laid aside. London merchants demand that the postal authorities should notify the public when a fast German steamer is available for the mails as an alternative to the slow British one. Immense inconvenience and loss are occasioned by the winter uncertainty of the transatlantic mail service, and the whole matter is to be brought up in Parliament soon.

Paris, Feb. 17.—M. Rouyer, correspondent to La Patrie, has written to his paper, giving startling information of the massacre of a French scientific mission by cannibals at Sileraka, New Guinea, on January 1st. The yacht Salvatti, with the mission on board, set anchor off the coast. The natives exhibited signs of friendliness, and a number landed. During the night, however, they surprised the camp, killed twenty-five and wounded thirty-three. The murdered include Baron Villars, Count de Saint Remy, M. Hagenbeck and Fries.

M. Rouyer, the correspondent, was rendered unconscious by a blow from a club, and when he woke in the morning he was tied hand and foot, and surrounded by a body of savages. The body of Baron Villars was bound to a tree. The body was naked and the head split open. Count de Saint Remy's head was sticking from the head of a spear, and M. Hagenbeck was spitted over a fire and the natives were preparing to cut him up. The ground about was covered with corpses.

Before the horrid meal was commenced, Dr. Fortier had led the remainder of the mission from the yacht on the cannibals, who fled, leaving 25 dead. The clothes of M. Fries were found, but he had evidently been devoured through the night.

New York, Feb. 17.—The worst snowstorm that has come to New York in three years began last night, and the weather department predicted that it would continue for the next 24 or 36 hours. Traffic was generally tied up, and business men who started for their respective offices at the usual time were from one to three hours late. The storm an hour after it started had all the marks of the blizzard of 15 years ago. It was accompanied by a howling gale out of the north, and, according to the weather bureau reports, covered an area from along the New England coast to the interior of New York State.

The Brooklyn residents and the commuters suffered the worst. Dozens of lines operated by the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company were completely tied up for hours.

In New York and the Bronx surface railroad traffic was delayed. There were frequent blockades on every line. In some parts of the city during the early hours cars almost butting into each other stretched for a mile or more and waited five or ten minutes before they could move.

Paris, Feb. 15.—Liberte bitterly accuses Russia of want of foresight in allowing any British-Japanese agreement to be made. It charges Russian statesmen, and particularly De Witte, the Minister of Finance, with having in every way recently discouraged Japanese good-will, instancing Japan's recent attempt to float a loan in Russia. When this failed, the Japanese naturally turned to the London market. The paper adds: "The new agreement is directed against Russia, and virtually involves us, too. We have already noted during Constantinople incidents that we were far from obtaining from Russia all the assistance due us. We remain determined partisans of the Franco-Russian alliance, but it is important that its solidity shall not be compromised."

RUSSIA PRETENDS IT DOESN'T CARE.

Its Objects in Far East Identical with British Jap Alliance

GERMANS HAVE TO CHOOSE

And Their Interests Will Demand That They Side with Great Britain

London, Feb. 17.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Times quotes an article on the British-Japanese alliance in the Exchange Gazette, which paper, he says, he has reason to believe in this instance expresses with considerable fidelity the views held in authoritive quarters. The Exchange Gazette says the objects of the Anglo-Japanese agreement, namely, the maintenance of the status quo in the Far East and the integrity of China and Corea, are also the avowed object of the Russian policy. Russia has, therefore, no reason to regard the Anglo-Japanese alliance with suspicion. Russia's Eastern policy is determined by her civilizing mission and geographical position. Its ultimate triumph is guaranteed by its past successes. Russian interests in Manchuria, Mongolia, and Chinese Turkestan are not in the least affected by any diplomatic bargain concluded by rival powers.

The Clerical Kolnische Volkszeitung, quoted by the Berlin correspondent of the Times, says that since the Anglo-Japanese agreement has been concluded it is hardly possible that Germany can be equally friendly with Great Britain and Russia. Germany will be in the same position as was Bismarck in 1879, when, forced to choose between Austria-Hungary and Russia, he chose Austria-Hungary. Germany is concerned in various parts where Great Britain and Russia are in rivalry. The paper adds: "In all enterprises of the world of politics, the support of England as a mighty naval power is for us of great value, but of course we cannot obtain it if we go hand in hand with Russia, which would simply mean that we should here and there help Russia to balk English plans."

THE REV. DR. HARPER DEAD

A Methodist Minister for Sixty Years Passed Away

Word has been received of the death on Wednesday of last week, at the home of his son, at Nantasket, Mass., of the Rev. Ephraim B. Harper, D. D., one of the pioneer Methodist ministers of Canada. Dr. Harper had reached the age of eighty-four. He was one of the best known and best beloved of Methodist ministers in Canada. For over sixty years he served the church in many important towns and cities of Quebec and Ontario. The funeral took place Friday at Norval, Ont. The service was conducted by Rev. Drs. Withrow and Blackstock, and was attended by quite a large number of Methodist ministers. Mr. Harper was born of Irish parentage, near Perth, and was educated in the grammar school at that place. He started life in commercial pursuits and was converted among Methodists. He studied hard and systematically, and at the age of twenty-two, when he entered the ministry, he was well prepared for circuit work.

He was received on trial by the conference of 1842 and was received into full connection and ordained in 1844. He was then stationed at Dundas, Ont. His subsequent appointments, according to the conference records have been as follows:—Kingston, 1849-50; Toronto, 1851-54; Hamilton, 1855-57; Belleville, 1858-60; St. James, Montreal, 1861-63; Hamilton, 1864-66; Ottawa, 1867-69; Guelph, 1871-72; Port Hope, 1873; Cobourg, 1874; Port Hope, 1875; Belleville, 1876-77; Peterboro, 1878-80; Barrie, 1881-1883; Collingwood, 1884-86; Brantford, 1887-88; Davenport, Toronto, 1889-90. In 1891, having completed fifty years in the active ministry, he was placed on the superannuated list and went to reside at Barrie, where he lived for about seven years, leaving there three or four years ago to go to Nantasket, Mass., to reside with his son, the Rev. Cecil Harper.

Dr. Harper received the M.A. degree from Victoria University in 1860 and the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred upon him by Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn., in 1879.

The present Methodist church was built during the time Dr. Harper was pastor at Port Hope.

TWO THOUSAND PERISHED IN AN EARTHQUAKE

Four Thousand Houses Destroyed, and 34 Villages Suffered--A Volcano Breaks into Eruption

Baku, Transcaucasia, Feb. 17.—Details which are slowly reaching Baku from Shemakha, about seventy miles from here, show that two thousand persons, mostly women and children, perished as a result of the earthquake last week, and about 4,000 houses were destroyed.

Thirty-four villages of the country surrounding Shemakha also suffered.

To add to the terrors of the neighborhood a volcano near the village of Maraosy, to the eastward of Shemakha, has broken into active eruption. A great crevice has appeared, whence immense flames and streams of lava are being thrown out. The course of the river Geokchai has been altered in consequence of its bed being dammed with earth, dislodged by the earthquake.

Battalions of guards and detachments of sappers with tents, have been despatched to Shemakha to aid in the work of rescue. The Red Cross Society is active in alleviating distress.

Unnecessary to Suffer from Asthma

This distressing complaint can be perfectly cured by inhaling Catarrhozone, a vegetable antiseptic that destroys the germs that cause the disease. Catarrhozone is inhaled at the mouth from a convenient pocket inhaler and after permeating the minutest air cells, is exhaled slowly through the nostrils. It stops the cough, makes breathing regular, and eradicates the asthma so thoroughly from the system that it never returns. Don't suffer from asthma, use Catarrhozone, it will speedily cure you. Large outfit $1.00. Small size druggist or by mail from, Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

At the Opera Last Night

Prof. Pull opened his weeks engagement last night with a crowded house. The entertainment was scientific and amusing. His powers as a hypnotist are certainly marvellous. He cast his magic spell over his audience last night. Raymond, in his comic songs pleased his hearers. Rice, in illustrated sentimental songs captivated the audience, while J. W. Pull's acrobatic work is excellent. There will be a complete change in programme each night, he should have full houses. He announced his blind ride which will start from the Opera House to-day at 12 o'clock. He will drive a team of horses through the principal streets while his eyes blind-folded.

SEEKING LIGHT

Brockville Deputation Visit Ottawa Investigating Lighting Plants

Ottawa, Feb. 15—A deputation from Brockville consisting of Mayor W. H. Harrison and Messrs. R. Bowie and W. H. Comstock, ex-M.P., light commissioners, were in the city for the purpose of getting pointers for the improvement of the lighting service of the Island City. Recently a by-law empowering the expenditure of $60,000 on a lighting plant was voted on and sanctioned by the ratepayers. Two years ago the gas and electric companies were bought out and the town has since been operating its own plant. It desires that it should be modernized as fully as possible. The deputation was received by Ald. Coates, president of the gas company, and shown through the gas works by Manager T. Dunderdale, and afterwards the electric power houses were visited.

The labor movement is in the ascendancy at Brockville. At the recent election Mayor Harrison, labor candidate, was elected by the largest majority ever secured by an aspirant for that office, and out of a council of ten, seven are labor men.

ANNUAL VISIT TO PETERBORO'

Geo. Ruskin of the Colportage Mission of Algoma and the Northwest Making His Annual Visit

Geo. Ruskin, of the Colportage Mission of Algoma and the Northwest, is making his annual visit to Peterborough in behalf of the work of disseminating throughout the districts biblical literature, among the labourers, Indians and settlers. The work is the outcome of previous evangelistic work, commenced in Muskoka in 1875, and in Parry Sound in 1876, and extending over a wide district. Since the commencement of the Colportage work in 1884 there have been supplied by the mission more than 21,000 copies of scriptural books, in two languages, of which account have been taken, and thousands additional of which no account has been kept, besides the free distribution of large quantities of tracts and magazines, and 53 various editions of books and tracts, etc., published by the mission in five languages, numbering about 330,000 copies. The work is in no way denominational, but for godliness, beneficial to all creeds and nationalities, and will be enlarged as means are forthcoming to do so.

The Missionary gratefully acknowledges $35.10 contributed in Peterborough last year.

GOLD IN YOUR GARRET

In many thousands of garrets and attics women have gold stored away and are not aware of it. It is not in coins, nuggets or bars that the gold is held, neither is it in bank notes or bonds; it is there in the form of cast-off and faded clothing, garments and materials that can be turned into a gold value by the use of Diamond Dyes.

At a cost of ten cents you can re-color a dress, skirt, jacket, cape, blouse or waist, and make them as good and stylish as new ones purchased in a store. With one or two packages of Diamond Dyes you can give new life and beauty to your husband's overcoat or suit thrown aside perhaps for the rag gatherer. Your cotton and wool rags re-dyed with Diamond Dyes will make up handsome mats or rugs that will add to the comfort of your home. All the work and transformations suggested will give you results that have a gold value.

THE NORTH AMERICAN LIFE

Another Milestone Marked in the History of This Popular and Progressive Company

Elsewhere will be found the financial statement submitted at the twenty-first annual meeting of the North American Life Assurance Company, held at the head office, Toronto, on January 28th.

Again the old story of prosperity and phenomenal progress is repeated, with even greater emphasis than ever before in the history of the Company. The business has exceeded the best previous year by over half a million dollars.

The financial statement speaks for itself, and need not be repeated in this article. It is sufficient to say that Mr. Wm. McCabe, the Managing Director, and Mr. Goldman, the efficient and popular Secretary, as well as the Board of Directors, are to be heartily congratulated on the result of the year's operations.

A. O. U. W. GRAND LODGE

Ald. Shortly will Represent Peterborough Lodge—Proposed Change in the Rates

The Grand Lodge A.O.U.W. will meet in Toronto to-morrow. About five hundred delegates will be present.

The principal discussion at the meeting will be the proposed change in the assessment rates. Some changes will be recommended by a committee of the Grand Lodge and as there is considerable opposition the arguments will be very interesting.

The Grand Lodge has a membership of over 41,500 and the amount of insurance carried is about $70,000,000.

Alderman Shortly will attend the meeting as a delegate of Peterborough Lodge.

The Brand of Food That Dealers Sell Most of is the Kind for You to Use

Careful investigation has disclosed the fact that some of our largest retail grocers keep in stock no less than twenty different brands of breakfast cereals. These grocers, catering to the whims and fancies of a varied trade, acknowledge that only four of the twenty brands are good sellers, and that Malt Breakfast Food is the great leader with all classes of the people.

The high position attained by Malt Breakfast Food in this country has been acquired in less than eighteen months. This proves most conclusively that as a breakfast dish Malt Breakfast Food is giving entire satisfaction to old and young. The large number of letters of approval that the manufacturers receive monthly from every section of the Dominion and Newfoundland telling of improved digestive vigor, stronger nerves, increase in weight and improvement in health, point to the fact that Malt Breakfast Food is a true health food. One trial makes it the favorite breakfast dish. Ask your grocer for it.

MR. MOORE'S PRODUCTION.

A Most Valuable Work of Reference for Peterborough

A Compendium of Legislation Affecting the Town—Mr. Moore Generously Presents The Book to the Town.

A very useful little work has been issued by Mr. W. H. Moore, barrister, being a Compendium of Legislation affecting Peterborough, including a digest of the principal by-laws of the town. Mr. Moore has generously presented the manuscript to the town, and the work has been printed, making a neat little volume. The work entailed many months of hard labor and diligent research. That the Council should have ordered but 25 volumes bound in cloth, is unfortunate. It is to be hoped that they will at once have the entire edition strongly bound.

Mr. Moore certainly has the thanks of the ratepayers for his valuable gift. In the preface, Mr. Moore says:

Having had occasion at times to refer to the particular Acts of Parliament relating to the town of Peterborough, it recently occurred to me that it would be of advantage to those who had municipal duties to perform and others who took an interest in the Town's affairs, to have a means of learning what were the provisions of these Acts, without suffering the considerable loss of time entailed in searching through the many volumes in which the Town's special legislation is contained. With this object in view, and at considerable labor, I have collected all these Acts, extending from 1847 to 1901, making a short note only of those which have become obsolete or are of little concern to the Town, such as Acts relating to railways, or of a semi-private character, but showing where these may be found, and giving in full, or nearly so, such Acts as are existing, and refer entirely and are of peculiar interest to the Town. It will be observed that in many instances verbatim copies are not given, yet so closely following the text as to fully retain the sense and force in all essentials, my object being that the layman might read and readily understand the provisions of the various Acts, and that others might also find herein the substance of that they desired and the means on hand for at once turning to the Act, and any section of it, which they wished to consult.

There will also be found copies of two proclamations of the Lieut. Governor of Ontario, the one extending the boundaries of the Town and the other incorporating Jackson Park; also two by-laws, the first for separating the Town from the then United Counties of Peterborough and Victoria, and the second in relation to the taking $120,000 stock in the Port Hope, Lindsay and Beaverton Railway Company, to assist in building the branch line from Millbrook, on which the Town still holds a mortgage in lieu of the subscribed stock, as I considered them cognate to the work, and of sufficient importance to justify a place in it.

I sincerely trust the objects I have had in view have in some measure been attained, and that this small volume may be found a considerable convenience to those who wish to gain information with regard to the subjects I have dealt with.

W. H. MOORE.

THE NEW SKATING RINK

A Very Enthusiastic Meeting Held Last Night—To Meet Again on Thursday

A meeting was held in the offices of Hatton & Bradburn last night to further consider arrangements for the erection of a new skating rink. A large number of prominent citizens were present and all are taking a deep interest in the undertaking.

Mayor Deans occupied the chair and after calling the meeting to order, stated that the committee to select a suitable site would give their report. Mr. Hatton, one of the committee, stated that they had looked at a number of places, and had found the prices asked for them. They did not decide on any lot as it was understood that there were other places to see that they had not time to visit. At the meeting several other lots were mentioned, and the committee were authorized to see these places and report at the next meeting. Considerable discussion took place regarding the size of the lots and it was decided to secure one with a good frontage as well as being of a good depth.

Mr. Charlie Bradburn was appointed secretary and by all appearances Mr. Bradburn will be a very busy man as there is considerable stock already sold, and the amount will be doubled in a very short time. The interest taken in the new rink is remarkable, and it is to be hoped that the same interest will continue. The meeting adjourned until 9 o'clock on Thursday night when a very large attendance is expected.

A FRENCH PRELATE TO COME TO CANADA

The Vatican's Representative in the Dominion to be Changed

Mgr. Zandetti of Paris, to Come to Come to Canada

The Pope Still Refuses to Have Anything to do With The Hague

Rome, Feb. 18—There has been quite a shuffle of foreign representatives from the Vatican. Mgr. Martinelli has arrived here to receive his cardinal's hat. Mgr. Zandetti, formerly Archbishop of Bucharest and now Canon of St. Marie Majure at Paris, will go to Canada to replace Mgr. Falconio, who will succeed Mgr. Martinelli as Papal delegate at Washington.

The Vatican still refuses to send a representative to The Hague, as it blames the Netherlands Government for being excluded from the peace conference.

The Pope's health is good, notwithstanding reports to the contrary. He takes his usual daily walks, and eats and sleeps well.

OYSTER SUPPER

In the Cosy School Room of Murray Street Baptist Church

The members of the Baptist Young People's Union of Murray street church, with a number of their friends, spent a very pleasant evening in the school room of the church last night. The Union meets each Monday evening, and it is customary on the last Monday of each quarter to hold an informal gathering. Last evening this meeting took the form of an oyster supper, and the members are to be congratulated upon the manner in which the spread, and the programme preceding it were prepared.

Mr. H. Merritt, President of the Y.P.U. took the chair, and the literary portion of the evening's enjoyment was begun a selection by the orchestra—with "Never Alone." This was followed by a clever Irish reading by Miss Bradshaw, and a dialogue in which a young gentleman and two of the ladies presented three scriptural peoples Pharisee, Scribe and Sadducee. The orchestra again favored the assembly with a selection, "Come to Jesus," and were followed by the Ladies' Comb Orchestra who were enthusiastically encored. The final number on the programme was a tableau presented by Misses. Holdbrook, Taylor and Martin, representing the "Three Graces." This was a touching and beautiful pose by the three young ladies, attired in snowy white and with hair flowing loosely over their shoulders. In the centre was the cross, also snowy white, and grown with ivy.

While these numbers were being rendered, others had been busy in the kitchen preparing, and now the company, about one hundred in number, sat down to a rich and tempting repast of oysters, cake and coffee, etc. The unstinted enjoyment of all was enhanced by the happy trend of conversation and the constant ripple of laughter around the board.

Supper was served by a number of pretty waitresses, each wearing as a distinction of her rank a dainty creation of white lace in her hair, and a spotless pinafore apron; and they were ably assisted by some of the male members of the Union.

Supper over, the gathering joined in the National Anthem, and one of the most successful functions which have been held by the Union was closed.

The Murray St. Y.P. U. is an active, aggressive body, and as it is fed from a Sabbath School with a membership of about 200, the prospects for its growth are most encouraging.

WIN AT KINGSTON

Peterborough Wins the Round by [illegible] Goals—Score Last Night 4-2

The Intermediates of Peterborough, journeyed to Kingston yesterday to play the Cadet team of the R.M.C. of that city.

The game was closely contested by the two teams, the Cadets playing a much better game than they did in Peterborough last week.

At half-time the score stood 1—0 in favor of Kingston, but the Intermediates were resting themselves, and in the second-half, turned the score, and won from the Cadets by a score of four goals to two.

The next match will be played here on Thursday or Friday of this week with the Hamilton team.

Mr. Nicholls' Gift to Ridley

Mr. Frederic Nicholls, President of the General Electric Company, has presented to Ridley College a combined hall and hockey rink, which is to cost at least $5,000. This generous gift is the outcome of his interest in the new building erected for the junior department, and the acquisition of seventy acres of land for playing-ground. These new enterprises at Ridley are largely the result of Mr. Nicholls' counsel, energy and financial help. He has now endeared himself to Ridley boys by providing them with the means for winter sport and with a hall for prize day ceremonies. He is also interested in the new wing to be at once erected to provide further accommodation in the already crowded junior school.

A Bill Introduced Seeking to Change Back Old System

A bill has been introduced into the Ontario Legislature by Dr. Barr, of Dufferin, providing that County Councils shall be composed of the Reeves of townships and villages, and Mayors of towns within and not separated from the county, and to include also, where the population warrants such representation, the Deputy Reeves in townships and the Reeves and Deputy Reeves in towns.

This is a move in the right direction, and will, it is said, have the sanction of the government.

CLAIMS THRONE OF BRITAIN

Wife of Bavarian Crown Prince Said to Be Queen Mary IV.

London, Feb. 18—The celebration by the legitimists of the anniversary of the beheading of King Charles I. a short time ago, calls attention to the charming woman who by the legitimist calendar should be queen of England to-day by reason of direct descent from King Charles. Queen Mary IV., as she would be known, has risen to the occasion with a new photograph which looks greatly unlike any previously printed pictures.

Instead of being Queen of England this lady is the wife of Louis, Crown Prince of Bavaria, and is likely soon to become queen consort of that country, the prince regent, Luitpold, being an old man. She lives at Munich and has a son of 33 who were his claims recognized would now be Prince of Wales.

Why Remain Unsightly adn Disfigured?

Paine's Celery Compound

WILL REMOVE EVERY TRACE OF POISON FROM THE BLOOD AND GIVE YOU A PERFECT AND HEALTHY CIRCULATION.

Are you troubled with eczema, salt rheum, eruptions, boils or running sores? The troubles mentioned are common, and arise from a debility of the nervous system which leaves the excretory organs so weak that they cannot remove the waste matter, and the noxious particles remain in the system carrying disease instead of health to every tissue of the body.

For the various unsightly and horrible blood and skin diseases, Paine's Celery Compound is the medicine recommended and endorsed by our ablest medical practitioners. Its vitalizing, purifying effect upon the blood is unequalled by any other medicine.

Mr. D. McMahon, Peterboro, Ont., writes about his wonderful cure as follows: "I have great pleasure in testifying to the fact that Paine's Celery Compound has caused a remarkable change in my condition. I was troubled with a very bad type of eczema on my face and in patches over my body for four years. I was under treatment of three doctors at different periods and have also tried many remedies, but all proved useless. At last I bought a bottle of Paine's Celery Compound, and put in bottles of [illegible] as recommended on the label. The one bottle did me so much good that I bought five bottles more, and am now happy to say that I am perfectly cured and completely free from the troublesome disease."

ITEMS OF INTEREST

Tiflis, Russian Transcaucasia, Feb. 18.—Two hundred bodies of victims of the earthquake which destroyed the town of Shamakha, had been recovered up to last evening. It appears certain that several hundred bodies are buried in the fissures and debris caused by the shocks. The quakes continue at intervals and the work of excavating in search of the victims, therefore, proceeds with difficulty. Among the dead are many women, who at the time of the earthquake shock were assembled in the [illegible] bath houses.

Curious Bits of News.

Mark Hanna's secretary says that since 1896 over five hundred children have been named after the Republican "boss."

At the time when the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall were in Victoria, B.C., there were three families living in Quebec street named respectively "George," "Cornwall," and "York," and the eldest Miss George had the Christian name of "May."

An official decision of the much-discussed question whether there is such a condition of affairs in the Philippines as constitutes a state of war, has been given by the United States War Department in connection with a pending claim. The Department holds that the islands are still in a condition of war.

An important step has been taken toward the abolition of slavery in German East Africa by the publication of an imperial edict which permits every slave to end his condition of servitude by the payment of a sum of money, the amount of which is to be determined by the authorities. Every slave is to be permitted to work for himself two days in the week, or to use for his own purposes the corresponding proceeds of his labor. This will give the slaves an opportunity to accumulate the purchase money. It is further decreed that masters shall not transfer ownership without the consent of the slave.

It is understood that Seth Low, shortly after he was elected mayor of New York, sold a million and a half dollars' worth of securities owned by him in various banks that are doing business with the city, so that he might not in the least embarrass the city. He is determined that the conduct of New York city affairs shall not be liable to the slightest suspicion so far as lies in his power. Many of the stocks sold had been held by him for years, and were gilt-edged securities. His friends say that in disposing of those permanent investments Low made considerable of a sacrifice, as he can not find the equal of some of them as income producers.

The strange story of the elopement of an ordinary milch cow with a bull moose comes from Lake Onawa, a pretty sheet of water in the hills of Piscataquis County, Maine, much frequented by sportsmen from the big cities. The cow was the property of Dr. A. T. Sanden of New York, whose cottage is located on the shore of Onawa, and she was kept in a pasture enclosed by a rail fence. A big moose had been several times seen hanging around the cottage grounds late at night, displaying great boldness. One night he came close up to where the cow was, and the two seemed to be good friends. Late at night a tremendous crash was heard, and next morning the fence was a wreck and the cow gone. Neither she nor the moose has been seen since.

Too Much Parent.

In these days of strenuous parentage, it may not be amiss to suggest mildly that there may be, in the constitution of a family, such a thing as too much parent. Time was when being a parent was incidental to other business in life. Our grandfathers brought up children, a dozen at a time, with a careless familiarity that takes away the modern breath. Each of the dozen was disciplined and duly chastened. They were whipped when they told lies, and occasionally when they did not. They learned to read at four; were put to work at five, as a matter of course; and developed, in due time, the stuff that men are made of. There was never any particular fuss about it. The larger the family, the more whippings it took. But there were always enough to go around, and no one the worse for it. The advertisement, "Boy missing. Run away from home," was not an uncommon feature of the weekly newspaper. But of the remnant who had the courage to stay at home and grow up, it may be said that they made admirable citizens. They had the rare privilege of passing their childhood and youth in the presence of men and women who had other and more important business in life than that of being parent to offspring. They grew up with a chastened sense of their own unimportance in the scheme of being, and a philosophic expectation of taking the hard knocks of life as they came.

We have changed all that. We have listened to the voice of Froebel, "Let us play with our children;" and to the educational moralist, "A father should be his boy's best friend;" and to our most famous and most unpractical poet, "The child is father to the man;" and the whole business of child-raising is turned other end to. We no longer raise them by the dozen. One or two at a time is as much as we dare venture, and very cautiously at that. We study the development and take notes on the bumps, phrenological; the other kind the modern child is never allowed to have. We agonize over our relation to his moral growth, and drop tentative, trembling seeds into the ground of his being, and exchange specimens if anything comes of it. The result, as a whole, is not, it must be admitted, altogether unpleasing. There is something about the well-born, well-bred, wholesome child of to-day that gladdens the eye and the heart. But the poor parent! We protest that he has never had a chance in life. Two to one his own parents belonged to the old school, and disciplined him within an inch of life. And now his children belong to the new. He is ground between the upper and the nether stone. Only in scattered, precious moments does he dare call himself his own. Late in the evening, perhaps, when the all-important child has been adequately played with and encouraged and developed and put to bed on his hygienic pillow, there comes a moment when the exhausted parent may sit down before the fire and draw a comfortable, grown-up breath, and gather strength and wisdom for the morrow.

As we watch him, we are reminded of the pleasant old gentleman who, across the reception-plate, is accosted by the genial young girl: "After all, sir, there's nothing so delicious as the wing of a chicken, is there?" And the old gentleman: "I don't know, my dear. When I was young the old people always ate the wings, and now I am old the young people eat them. I have never tasted the wing of a chicken."—From the "Contributors' Club."

Australia's Governor-General.

It is feared in some quarters that the Earl of Hopetoun will not be able to complete his term as Governor-General of Australia. His Lordship has never entirely shaken off the effects of the illness which prostrated him in India on his way out to Australia, and though he was easily prominent as the host of the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall, he has since, owing to his unsatisfactory health, been unable to fill so many of his public engagements.

Gratitude

Always seeks to find some expression for itself, and womanly gratitude will not keep silence. Cynical people sometimes say Why do women write these testimonials to the value of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription? The answer can be put in one word, Gratitude. When, after years of agony a woman is freed from pain, when the weak woman is made strong and the sick woman well, the natural impulse is to write a word of grateful thanks for the medicine which caused the cure.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription cures diseases peculiar to women. It establishes regularity, stops weakening drains, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness.

"Having used Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and 'Golden Medical Discovery' during the past year," writes Mrs. Mattie Long, of [illegible] Valley, Perry Co., Pa., "I can truthfully recommend the medicine for all female weakness. I have used several bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' which I consider a great blessing to weak women. I was so nervous and discouraged that I hardly knew what to do. Your kind advice for home treatment helped me wonderfully. Thanks to Dr. Pierce."

Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure biliousness, and sick headache. They should be used in connection with "Favorite Prescription," whenever the use of a laxative is indicated.

Anecdotal.

It is related that once, when a captain in the army was cornered by the enemy, he addressed his men as follows: "My men, fight like demons until your powder gives out, then run. I'm a little lame, I'll start now."

An English rector on coming into a new parish, asked the clerk if there were any Puseyites (followers of Dr. Pusey, a high churchman) in the community. "No, sir," replied the clerk; "there used to be some, but for the last two years the boys have took all their eggs."

Mark Twain was recently chaffing Sir Wemyss Reid on the vagaries of English pronunciation. "You spell a name B-e-a-u-c-h-a-m-p, and pronounce it Marchbanks," he said. "And you do precisely the same thing," replied Sir Wemyss. "What do you mean?" asked Mark Twain. "Well, you spell your name C-l-e-m-e-n-s, and you pronounce it Twain."

An error of a new clerk in the mailing department of an English publishing house was responsible the other day for the mailing of a prospectus to a world-famous statesman, who had been dead for some years. The letter was returned a few days later, with the following endorsement: "In Heaven, ———, 1901. Gentlemen: As your publications are not permitted to circulate here, I believe it would be useless for me to subscribe for them. Yours respectfully," and here followed the name of the famous statesman.

When asked what he thought of a certain captain who frequented the Essex links, a Scotch caddie said: "Weel, sir, he's a verra nice gentleman an' a good gaufer, but he's awfu' nerra—awfu' nerra." "Narrow! What do you mean, Donald?" "Weel, sir, it wis this way. Efter the game was ower, and I had carried his clubs up tae the house, he says: 'Donald, will ye hae a draw?' and I said: 'I do be verra pleased,' so he gets the bottle, an' he pourin' awa' intae a glass, an' I wantin' tae be genteel, says: 'Stop! stop'—an' he stopped."

What to do with Jefferson Davis should he be captured, was a problem that puzzled Lincoln's Cabinet not a little. In speaking of it to General Grant one day, the President remarked: "There was once an Irishman who had signed the Father Mathew temperance pledge. Going into a saloon to get a glass of lemonade to quench his thirst, he leaned over and whispered to the barkeeper: 'And couldn't you put a little brandy in it unbeknownst to meself?' So," continued Mr. Lincoln, "let Davis escape all unbeknown to yourself if you can."

L. R. Stockwell, the popular actor, says that some years ago in San Francisco, when Peter Jackson, the colored pugilist, was a feature in a revival of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," "Bill" Nye was to have lectured at the Baldwin Theater, but was greeted by so small an audience that he excused himself and went over to hear Jackson talking of the pearly gates to Little Eva. After the performance Stockwell met Nye in the lobby of the theater, and he exclaimed: "Hello, Nye! What did you think of Peter?" "Well," responded the humorist, dryly, "anatomically he was great, but Uncle Tomically he is the worst I ever saw."

Of the 12,000,000,000 letters annually distributed by the postoffices of the world 8,000,000,000 are addressed in English, 1,200,000,000 in German and 1,000,000,000 in French. All the other languages have less than 2,000,000,000 between them.

By employing compressed air, a Dresden manufacturer has lately succeeded in producing glass vessels of extraordinary size. Heretofore, it is said, concave glass could be blown into vessels having a capacity not exceeding about 26 gallons, but by the new process glass bath-tubs and large glass bottles can be blown.

The highest tunnel in the world is now in course of construction by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company at Crow's Nest Pass. It is at an altitude of 4,500 feet above sea level. The Loop Tunnel, as the work is called, will be 840 feet long, of which over 300 feet are completed. A force of 300 men is working day and night, and it is anticipated it will be finished by December next. This tunnel will shorten the route by fourteen miles, and will greatly reduce grades and curvatures.

A sporting friend of the editor of "Sporting and Dramatic News" keeps some green-tree frogs in a glass globe, and the children feed them on flies and other insects. "In their bowl stands a miniature flight of steps, and when the frogs climb up and perch on those steps my friend leaves his mackintosh at home, being assured of fine weather. When the frogs huddle together at the bottom of the globe, then he says it is a safe sign of coming rain."

For soldiers' use, and for employment under circumstances where fresh milk, coffee and chocolate are not easily obtainable, a dried preparation is now being manufactured which serves excellently as a substitute. Skimmed milk is evaporated by the help of an air blast to the condition of a paste, and, after being dried, is reduced to powder by grinding. Then it is mixed with powdered chocolate, half and half, and is either put up as dust or compressed into cakes. When wanted, water is added, the resulting fluid is boiled, and all that is needed is a little sugar.

A system of teaching the French language by phonograph is to be tried in England. Several prominent French professors are devoting their energies to preparing phonograph cylinders carrying French lessons upon them. The phonographic records are accompanied by a book, which contains thirty lessons, each of which corresponds to a phonographic cylinder, and each lesson is ingeniously illustrated. All that the student has to do is to set the phonograph in motion, and the book will explain what the instrument is saying.

The following advertisement is from the Tokio "Nippon" (newspaper): "I am a beautiful woman. My abundant undulating hair envelops me as a cloud. Supple as a willow is my waist. Soft and brilliant is my visage as the satin of the flowers. I am endowed with wealth sufficient to saunter through life hand in hand with my beloved. Were I to meet a gracious lord, kindly, intelligent, well educated, and of good taste, I would unite myself with him for life, and later share with him the pleasure of being laid to rest eternal in a tomb of pink marble."

One of the oddest of recent inventions is a refrigerating egg, as it might be called. It is an ovoid capsule of nickel-plated copper, about the size and shape of a hen's egg, hollow and nearly filled with ice. If you have a glass of milk that is not cold enough, you do not like to put ice into it, because dilution with water spoils the beverage. But, if you have one of these eggs handy, you may drop it into the glass, and in a few moments the liquid is reduced to the desired temperature. In the same way you may cool your cup of coffee, if it is too hot, and the idea is equally applicable to any other drink.

Curious Bit of News.

Dr. G. L. Johnson, whose studies of the eyes of mammals have recently been published, calls attention to the fact that men and monkeys alone possess parallel and convergent vision of the two eyes. On the other hand, the lower mammals possess divergent and consequently very widely extended vision. Squirrels, for instance, and probably hares and rabbits as well, are able to see an enemy approaching directly from behind without turning the head.

Anecdotal.

While preaching from the text: "He giveth his beloved sleep," a minister stopped in the middle of his sermon, gazed upon his dozing auditors, and said: "Brethren, it is hard to realize the wondrous unbounded love the Lord appears to have for a good portion of this congregation."

The "Green Bag" tells of a lawyer who was about to furnish a bill of costs. "I hope," said his client, who was a baker, "that you will make it as light as possible." "Ah," said the lawyer, "you might perhaps say that to the foreman of your establishment, but that is not the way I make my bread!"

While James McNeill Whistler, the eccentric American painter, was in a London shop one day a customer rushed in, and, mistaking Mr. Whistler for a clerk, exclaimed: "I say, this hat doesn't fit." The artist eyed him for a minute, and then replied, scornfully: "Neither does your coat, and I'll be hanged if I like the color of your trousers."

An attorney named Else, rather diminutive in his stature, and not particularly respectable in his character, once met Jekyll. "Sir," said he, "I hear you have called me a pettifogging scoundrel. Have you done so, sir?" "Sir," said Jekyll, with a look of contempt, "I never said you were a pettifogger, or a scoundrel, but I said you were 'little Else.'"

When Bishop Potter was asked, the other day, what he thought of woman suffrage he made the diplomatic reply: "My dear madam, I have gotten away beyond that; I am trying to make the best terms with the sex that I can obtain." This brings to mind the mot of William M. Evarts when asked by a lady if he did not think that woman was the best judge of woman. He replied: "Not only the best judge, madam, but the best executioner."

"S. Paul" is the name above a chemist's shop in a London suburb. It arrested the attention of a convivial gentleman returning home in the small hours, and he rang the bell vigorously. The chemist's head appeared above. "What is it?" he called out. "Want speak t' you ver' pert'clar," said the convivial one. "What is it; d' you want some medicine?" "Want speak t' you ver' pert'clar." The chemist hastily dressed, came down, and opening the door exclaimed impatiently, "Well now, what is it?" "I want know—did you ever get answer to that terr—terr'ble long epistle you wrote to Thes'lonians?"

J. Pierpont Morgan makes his boast that he never has been interviewed, and declares that in the last seven years but one interviewer ever has been able to approach him. This was on a recent trip to Europe, when a representative of the London "Times" would not take "No" for his answer. "Tell the 'Times' man my time is worth ten pounds a minute," at last said Morgan. "The 'Times' man says he'll take two minutes at that," came back the reply. The interviewer handed Mr. Morgan twenty pounds, talked just two minutes by both their watches, did all the talking himself, and rose to go on the instant. "Why did you want to see me?" Morgan asked in curiosity. "Oh, I wagered one hundred pounds that I would interview you personally, that's all," was his reply. Morgan congratulated him on his enterprise, and dismissed him within the third minute of his call. When asked, the other day, if he kept the twenty pounds, Morgan said: "Yes, and I haven't earned money in a long time that gave me the satisfaction that twenty pounds did."

Lincoln, even as a young man, was always ready and resourceful on the platform. In the new book, Lincoln in Story, it is related that in 1836 Lincoln made a telling speech in an election campaign for the State Legislature of Illinois. George Forquer, an old and respected citizen, who had changed his party, and almost simultaneously had been appointed to a fat office by his new friends, was present. Just at this time Mr. Forquer had completed the finest house in Springfield and over it erected a lightning-rod, the first in that region. At the conclusion of Lincoln's speech, Forquer took it upon himself to reply, commencing thus: "This young man will have to be taken down, and I am sorry the task devolves upon me." He then proceeded to answer Lincoln's argument in an able and fair but patronizing manner. At length Forquer ended and Lincoln had the floor to reply. "The gentleman has seen fit," said he, "to allude to my being a young man, but he forgets that I am older in years than in the tricks and trades of politicians. I desire long life and I desire place and distinction, but I would rather die now than, like the gentleman, live to see the day that I would change my politics for an office worth $3,000 a year and then feel compelled to erect a lightning-rod to protect a guilty conscience from an offended God."

Hard Luck in the West.

The cowboy sat down on the ground, fingered a roll of bills and looked sadly at his pard.

"Bill," he said, "it's no use. I can't go to town with you to-day."

"Why?" asked Bill.

"I've only got $35 to my name."

"Figger it up ag'in," said Bill.

"No use. I've figgered it up a dozen times, and it always comes out the same. It'll take $30 for the drunk, dollar an' a half for bed an' breakfast, three an' a half for ca'tridges, an' that won't leave a cussed cent to pay the fine."—Indianapolis "Sun."

Ouida in Her Old Age.

Ouida, as Mlle. De La Ramee prefers to call herself, is now an elderly lady, but she still affects the white muslin frocks and pale blue ribbons of a bygone era. She is the autocratic queen of a large circle of admirers at Florence, where she has an ideal home, and an extraordinary collection of dogs. Ouida does not like England or English life and food, and not infrequently at London dinner-tables has asked for cold roast beef and beer, that being the level, she says, on which she places English cookery.

"I thought you were given a job in the public service because of the work you did for the party." "I was, but I quit." "Why?" "Why! Why, hang it all, they're getting so blamed particular now that they want a fellow to work for his salary."—[illegible]

A Great Whispering Gallery

His First Deer.

By REGINALD GOURLAY.

My English friend, Tom Dare, was an enthusiastic sportsman. There was nothing strange about that. Most Englishmen of his type and class are. But then he was besides one of the worst shots when he first came out to this country (he improved afterwards) that I ever saw "waste his lead upon the desert air."

Now, most Englishmen of his class (he was the younger son of a Buckinghamshire squire) are excellent shots, being to the manor born as it were, which made this defect the more remarkable. He was very credulous about some things, particularly as regarded game and shooting in America. Here, again, he resembled many other Englishmen. He was brave, generous and impulsive, much more resembling an Irishman than an Englishman in this last respect. He was also very near-sighted, which accounted in part for his frequent bad shots, and he always wore what he called "glawses."

When I first saw Tom Dare it was on the Canadian Grand Trunk train going west, somewhere between Kingston and Toronto. His compartment in the Pullman car resembled a small shop for the sale of sporting goods, or an exhibit of deadly and murderous weapons. Gun and rifle-cases lay all around him. He had evidently not been able to endure their removal from his sight to the baggage-car. At every stop he would move forward to the latter car and inspect a huge St. Bernard, a pair of pointers and an evil-minded bulldog, with deep solicitude. These interesting animals were making about as much noise as a pack of hounds in full cry, and two of them—the St. Bernard and the bulldog—were dangerous to come near. Some ideas exchanged on sporting topics, and the timely assistance I was able to give him in soothing his excited quadrupeds, made us friendly at once, for there is a singular freemasonry among sportsmen. But when he found that I lived in the very city he was bound for, and that I knew well several people he had letters of introduction to, Englishman-like, Dare expanded completely, and I was soon in possession of his experiences, tribulations and trials since his arrival in the New World, and some of his hopes and plans for the future.

It seems that, having had some property left him by a maiden aunt, as well as the usual younger son's allowance, he was free to realize the chief desire of his soul, which was to visit North America and do his utmost to lessen the number of wild animals on that continent. He confided to me in a burst of enthusiasm, invoked by some appreciative remarks of mine, betokening a congenial spirit, "that spawt—real wild spawt"—was the guiding star of his existence, and that to enjoy it, unfettered by any of the effete restraints which hedge it in at home, was the chief reason of his leaving his native shore.

We reached our destination at last, and Dare departed to a neighboring hotel with his arsenal and canines. In due time he presented his letters of introduction to various families, was taken up very kindly by society, and "put up" at most of the clubs; and was even to be seen, with an intense expression of hopeless gloom overshadowing his countenance, assisting at various fashionable functions.

I met him often at the club and elsewhere, and got to like him very much. I gathered from some remarks that fell from him that he was not altogether happy among his fashionable engagements and surroundings, and that he sighed for the hour when he could escape from them into the wilderness and hunt bears in peace. Like Lady Clara Vere de Vere, "the languid light of his proud eye was wearied with the rolling hours," and he counted the moments till the deer-shooting season opened, and till he could fly from the blandishments of dear Jane or charming Gladys or Ethel to the northern forests.

The happy, longed-for day at last arrived. A generous friend had placed his hunting lodge (he being detained at home by important business) at our disposal for the season. It was situated in Northern Algoma, in what was then—and is now—a great game country. So it happened that just forty-eight hours after the opening of the season Dare and I were standing on the porch of the comfortable little rustic house looking out over the most beautiful little lake in the world. Our four men were bringing packs and baggage from the canoes up to the house with that beautiful calm deliberation and absence of all fussy feverish haste characteristic of the Canadian "half-breed," while in front of us, leaning on his rifle, stood our guide, the redoubtable Kit Todd, best of hunters and trappers between Lake Superior and the Ottawa.

Tom Dare was in the seventh heaven. During his sojourn in Canada he had learned something about the game of the northern part of this continent. He had found out, for instance, that elk and cariboo did not abound in the neighborhood of New York; that buffalo were extinct in Ohio, in Illinois, and in the vicinity of Toronto, Canada. In fact, that they were virtually extinct everywhere in America. Also, that to get big game anywhere in America you had to go a long way back. He quite understood that in the forests he saw clothing in wild beauty the hills around him he could only expect to get a shot at red or Virginia deer, at small game—if he cared to shoot them—as often and as fast as he could fire, with now and then, by good luck, a chance at a bear or moose. "These," he remarked to Kit Todd, the guide, with great magnanimity, "were quite good enough for him. All he asked was to be led to the fray at once."

This was, of course, impossible, as it was within an hour or so of sunset, and the long black shadows of the hemlocks and birches already stretched far over the glassy waters of the little lake. But very early next morning Kit Todd, moved by Dare's pathetic entreaties, took us out for a short, informal still-hunt over the ridges, "to sorter prospect like," as he expressed it.

Dare's emotions on being at last a denizen of the vast and trackless woods were genuine and uncontrolled. I could appreciate them, for a more glorious October morning never dawned. It was pretty enough by the lake, where our lodge was, the light blue of the water exactly matching the color of the sky, while the startlingly vivid hues, by comparison, of the brilliant autumn foliage of the trees [illegible] up shores, made the water seem almost unreal—like air.

But in the great woods it was grand! The endless contrast of tints—the dark red of the oak against the light yellow of the beeches; the vivid crimson of the maple standing out like a fire on a dark night against a thick belt of cedars; the scarlet of the sumach and the gold of the birch; the great white pines and hemlocks, with mighty column-like stems, lifting their changeless mass of dark needles far above the medley of gay colors beneath, as if in disdain of their tawdry fickleness—all this wealth and confusion of color was the first thing that struck the intruder into this great temple of nature. And next the silence—or, rather, what seemed a great silence at first, for one soon discovered that it was broken by innumerable undertones, the many voices of the great forest, the never-ceasing tokens of the eternal unrest of nature. The creaking of one giant bough against another, the far-off drumming of a grouse, the bark of the red fox, the dropping of a pine cone—even the vague, uncertain descent of a leaf, or the cry of the jay or ivory-billed woodpecker far off in the deep melancholy forest, filled one with the idea that here at last were the frontiers of that great wild Nature which man in America is ever driving further and further away. But she—patient and biding her time—will perhaps come back in a few thousands of years and hide him and his works, as she has hidden those of many a race and dynasty in the Old World and the New since the earth was young.

Dare felt all these things so much that he asked to be allowed to take care of himself for a while, "to give him the true feeling of solitude," he said. So Kit and I went along one ridge, and Dare made his way along another running parallel with ours, and about a hundred yards to the right. He hadn't been gone twenty minutes when he put a bullet (45.75 Winchester) through the top of my fore-and-aft cap, which I had foolishly decorated with a deer's tail, an absurdity which almost invited accident when a "tenderfoot" was one of the party.

"That gent with the goggles is out after meat," said Kit dryly, as he surveyed the two holes. "An' seemin'ly he ain't noways pertic'ler what kind he gits."

Tom's consternation, of course, was extreme, but it was mingled with a sort of injured feeling towards me for not having been a deer. After that Todd accompanied Dare to prevent these little mistakes as to the nature of his game, and also to prevent his indulging in what Todd called "permiskyus gunnin'"—i.e., firing his rifle at partridge, rabbits, etc., which he showed every disposition to do, and which would effectually settle any hope of our even getting sight of a deer. I went along the parallel ridge alone.

There were many deer in the Algoma woods in those days (there are many now, for that matter), so we saw plenty of tracks. Still, I didn't expect much success, for several reasons. For one thing, the day was too fine. There was no wind in the woods, and the rustle of our steps in the dead leaves would be audible to the keen hearing of a deer far away. Then there were too many of us. The solitary, silent sportsman is the one that gets game, still-hunting.

So I was agreeably surprised when, not five minutes after we had separated, Dare and Todd "jumped" a deer from an oak top with the leaves still on, left by lumberers. Todd let drive at it with his single-fire rifle as it made its first long, beautiful bound out of cover, and, strange to say—for he was a first-rate shot—only scraped its flank. The deer, a spike-buck, went straight away up the ridge in full view, while with frenzied haste and uncertain aim crack! crack! crack! went Tom's repeater.

The buck was just topping the ridge, about two hundred yards off, when Dare fired a last wild, despairing shot, and the deer gave a great bound, stretching his fore and hind legs stiffly out. Then all its limbs collapsed in mid-air, and it pitched straight forward on its head.

"By gum, sir, you killed him!" yelled the guide, looking at Dare with a wild surprise, similar to that which Mark Twain's musing spider exhibited when he stepped on the red-hot shovel.

But Dare had uttered a long, loud yell of triumph and victory, and was tearing along the ridge, brandishing a murderous-looking knife. We followed, and arrived just in time to prevent his cutting the dead buck's head off on the spot for a trophy. As Todd and I came up the ridge together I heard the guide muttering: "Killed in his tracks! Goin' full lick! Two hundred yards good, an' by a tenderfoot as takes a man's hat for a deer! Meeracles ain't through happenin' yet, by gum!"

The buck was hit in the back of the head, just below the horns. The bullet had passed through the brain and out at the forehead, killing him instantly. It was a ghastly fluke, but a lucky one, for Dare had killed his first deer the very first day out, and fairly too.

We now thought we had done enough for glory that day, especially as our whole outfit had still to be unpacked. Dare, too, was most anxious to get his prey back at once to our hunting-lodge. He seemed to think that it would vanish into thin air if he took his eyes off it for a moment. So with considerable difficulty we dragged the animal back to the lodge.

And for the rest of that day, amidst all the clatter of unpacking, the talk and the chaff, Dare sat silent and happy, his head enveloped in a cloud of tobacco smoke, replying only in monosyllables when addressed. But on his face was a deep, seraphic peace, like that which illumines the countenance of a Sioux or Pawnee chief who has just succeeded in "collecting" the scalp of his deadliest enemy. For the time his heart's chief desire was realized. He had slain his first deer.

How it Looked to Him.

This is what "Short Stories" tells of a staunch young churchman who is most careful in his observance of the feasts and fasts of the year:

When the owl lunch wagons in Herald Square were still a novelty, he visited New York and saw one for the first time.

"What have we here?" he said to his companion.

"What a question from you!" was the retort. "A good churchman like you not to know a movable feast when he sees it!"

The present mace of the British House of Commons has been in use since the reign of Charles II. It has accordingly witnessed the rise and development of constitutional principles and practice, and of the responsibility of Ministers of the Crown to the House of Commons, and through the House of Commons to the people at large.

Most people, if they were asked to state the color of the sun, would say that it was orange, and they would as confidently assert that the color of the atmosphere was blue. Recent researches and investigations, however, says "Knowledge," point to the conclusion that the real color of the sun is blue, while that of the atmosphere surrounding the earth is orange.

A good many formalities are necessary for the women of Sumatra before they can lay aside their widow's weeds, says "Womanhood." Immediately after the husband's death the disconsolate widow places a flagstaff in front of her door, and on this a flag is raised. As long as the flag remains untorn by the wind etiquette forbids her to marry, but with the appearance of the first rent she can lay aside her mourning garb, begin to take notice and to receive offers of marriage.

A little machine which threads one thousand needles a minute is at work in St. Gall, Switzerland. The purpose of the machine is to thread needles that are placed afterwards in an embroidery loom for making Swiss or Hamburg lace. The device is almost entirely automatic. It takes the needle from a hopper, carries it along and threads it, ties the knot, cuts the thread off a uniform length, then carries the needle across an open space and sticks it in a rack. The work of threading these needles was formerly done by hand.

The highest waterfall in the world, geography tells us, is the Cerosola cascade, in the Alps, having a fall of 2,400 feet; that of Arvey, in Savoy, is 1,100 feet, and the falls of the Yosemite Valley range from 700 to 1,000 feet. But higher yet is the fall in the San Cayatan canyon, in the State of Durango, Mexico. It was discovered by some prospectors ten years ago in the great Barranca district, which is called the Tierras Desconocidas. While searching for the famous lost mine, Naranjal, a great roar of water was heard. With great difficulty the party pushed on and up and down the mighty chasms, until they beheld the superb fall that is at least 3,000 feet high.

The date-palm may solve the problem of what to do with the arid and alkali lands of Arizona and other Western States. Experiments have been made in the past, but renewed interest is being taken by the section of plant introduction of the Department of Agriculture at Washington. According to the New York "Sun," Professor D. G. Fairchild, agricultural explorer for the department, now traveling in Africa, has procured a number of suckers, or off-shoots, from the Delta of the Nile, which will be distributed in the southwestern States. In the United States the date is an article of luxury, but in its native country it is a most important food, many regions in Arabia and the Sahara being uninhabitable but for the date-palm.

President Harper of the University of Chicago recently received the following letter from a prospective girl-student at Pecatonica, Ill.: "Dear Dr. Harper—I know you will be pleased to learn that I have decided to attend the university school of education this fall. I am going to Chicago next Saturday on the morning train, and as I have never been in the city before, I would be glad if you would meet me at the depot. I am five feet four inches tall, have light hair and eyes, and a pleasing appearance. I shall wear a dark-brown traveling skirt and a blue waist with white yoke. I think I shall know you from your pictures, but for fear I make a mistake, will you please wear your card in your hat?"

"A pathetic incident in connection with a biograph scene occurred in Detroit, Mich., March 17 last," says "Popular Science." "A view made at the occupation of Peking was being flashed across the screen. It represented a detachment of the Fourteenth United States Infantry entering the gates of the Chinese capital. As the last file of soldiers seemed literally stepping out of the frame on to the stage, there rose a scream from a woman who sat in front. 'My God!' she cried hysterically, 'there is my dead brother Allen marching with the soldiers.' The figure had been recognized by others in the audience as that of Allen McCaskill, who had mysteriously disappeared some years before. Subsequently Mrs. Booth, the sister, wrote to the War Department and learned that it really was her brother whose presentment she so strangely had been confronted with."

Evidence to the Contrary.

Citizen—Madam, why do you persist in punching me with your umbrella?

Miss Beckley—I'm so glad I'm not an heiress, Mr. Soper. I should never know whether my suitors were attracted by myself or my money.

Mr. Soper—Oh, Miss Beckley, your mirror should leave you in no doubt on that score!—"Punch."

Changed Her Mind.

The house was "handy to the street car line" and in good repair, there were the proper number of closets and the rental was reasonable, but before coming to terms the house-hunting matron said to the agent:

"It is only fair for me to tell you that we have five boys."

"That won't make any difference, ma'am," he said, with a smile. "You will find big families of boys on both sides of you."

"Oh, then I don't want the house at all!" she exclaimed. "I want to find a neighborhood where there won't be any boys but mine!"

At last accounts she was still hunting.

A school inspector, having a few minutes to spare after examining the school, put a few questions to the lower form boys on the common objects in the schoolroom.

"What is the use of that map?" he asked, pointing to one stretched across the corner of the room; and half a dozen shrill voices answered, in measured articulation:

"It's to hide the teacher's bicycle, sir!"—"Wasp."

Don't Allow Operation for Cancer

There is a simpler, safer and more effective Method of Treatment.

Dr. J. C. Oliver, of Cincinnati, Ohio, U.S.A., in a paper he read before the Ohio State Medical Society, May 1896, said: "I have operated in a considerable number of cases of Cancer recently, and with one exception all have died within fourteen months after the operation."

This statement of a prominent Surgeon, should make any one suffering from cancer, hesitate before submitting to operation and consider carefully the evidence offered on behalf of the new Constitutional remedy, which cures Cancers, Tumors and all malignant growths, without the necessity of operation. It is a simple vegetable medicine that searches out and destroys the cancer growths, completely eradicates the disease, and at the same time, builds up and invigorates the system.

Stott & Jury, Bowmanville, Ont., will be pleased to send full particulars of this treatment, in a plain, sealed wrapper.

—A very fine specimen of a deer's head is on exhibition in the window of the Peterborough Hardware Co., George street. The head is one of the finest ever seen here, and was mounted by Mr. Elcombe.

While Rev. Father Kielty, of Douro, was making a purchase in one of the George St. stores, yesterday afternoon, his horse, which had been left in the care of a small boy, became frightened and ran away. It proceeded south and turned on Simcoe St., coming up at Mr. Cavanagh's Hotel, after smashing and freeing itself from the cutter.

Excellent to gargle with—ten times better than a mustard plaster, and more convenient for the outside. The large 25c. bottle of Nerviline is unexcelled as a household liniment. It cures everything.

FELL SIXTY-FIVE FEET AND WAS KILLED.

MR. J. E. PERRIN FELL FROM CEREAL WORKS BUILDING

Yesterday Afternoon and Expired a Few Hours After at the Nicholls Hospital

The new cereal buildings was the scene of a horrifying accident yesterday afternoon about 3.45, when J. F. Perrin, a laborer on the building fell from the top floor of the building, from which he received injuries which caused his death about three hours later.

Mr. Perrin was employed in taking wheelbarrows of mortar and brick from an elevator or hoist, which is raised and lowered by an engine on the ground. Through some misunderstanding, the hoist was lowered while he was in the act of removing a loaded barrow. This hoist ascends and descends very rapidly, and when it was lowered, Mr. Perrin lost his balance and fell head-foremost into the elevator shaft and landed on a pile of debris, over sixty feet below. An alarm was at once given that a man was injured and help rushed into the building and found the injured man lying on his back, in an unconscious condition. Medical aid was at once called and in a very few minutes Dr. Eastwood arrived on the scene. After a hurried examination, the ambulance was summoned and the man removed to the Nicholls Hospital. A further examination was made by Drs. Eastwood and Greer, and it was found that the skull was fractured, besides internal injuries. His case was very serious, and from the first very little hopes were entertained for his recovery. Death came about 6.45, without his ever regaining consciousness.

Mr. Perrin came to town from Haliburton some time ago, and boarded with his sister at No. 368 Sherbrooke street. He secured employment at the Cereal works, where he worked steadily up to the day of the accident. Deceased was about 29 years of age, and unmarried. He was of a very quiet disposition, and was well liked by all with whom he came in contact. Arrangements for the funeral were not completed up to a late hour last night.

County Coroner Grey after learning the particulars of the case decided to hold an inquest. The jury will be chosen at once and will meet in the Town Council chamber at seven o'clock this evening.

Properly Selected Food of Great Importance

Loss of memory is a sure sign that the body is not taking up proper elements from the food. Then is the time to feed especially selected foods or the person may become demented.

A mother writes about her son, and it is interesting. "My son, Albert, now 25 years old and principal of the ——High School, graduated at the Kansas University and is a graduate of the Columbia, Mo., University.

When he began teaching about a year ago he had just completed his education and was badly broken down in health. He had only about two months' vacation and spent it at Excelsior Springs, but when he returned, there was no improvement.

We thought he would get better after he began his work, but instead of improving he became more weak and nervous, and finally, forgetful in the school-room. He tried different physicians and everything he could hear of and at last gave up school and came home, after putting a teacher in his place.

I cooked every delicacy I could think of for him but he became very thin and we were greatly worried about him. One day a neighbor sent over a box of Grape-Nuts. He caught sight of the package and after reading the statement of what the food was intended for, became much interested and began using it.

He liked it, and at the end of a week was very much strengthened and improved. We were encouraged. He stuck to Grape-Nuts and in five weeks was back in the school-room.

He is now teaching the second term in the same place, has recovered entirely and gained wonderfully in flesh. He now weighs 165 pounds and is an expert foot-ball player.

My daughter, Georgie, eight years old, was a puny little girl until after we found what effect Grape-Nuts had on Albert, we put her on the food and now she is exceptionally stout and healthy. We wish to thank the Company for the great help the food has been to us." This lady lives at Hallsville, Mo. Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

PRESENTATION TO W. DREDGE

Times Employees Present Plate to Popular Pressman

Mr. Walter Dredge, foreman of the press department of The Times Printing Co., last Wednesday entered upon the life matrimonial, when he married one of the best known young ladies of Allandale.

His fellow employees resolved that the opportunity should not be allowed to pass, but that on this fitting occasion they should in some manner give expression to the high esteem which Mr. Dredge has attained with the members of the staff. Accordingly yesterday afternoon Mr. Dredge was summoned to the editorial rooms where he found awaiting him a very pleasant surprise. He was made the recipient of a beautiful dinner and tea set, while one of the typo's read the following address:

Mr. Walter Dredge,—

Dear Friend,

We who are associated with you in the office, realizing that "there comes a tide in the affairs of men," etc., and learning that you have taken that tide at its ebb, avail ourselves of this opportunity to give expression to our hearty good wishes for your future, and for the future of her whose life is henceforth so closely linked with your own. We extend to you our most sincere congratulations, and earnestly wish for you both all possible joy throughout your married life.

As a memento of our good wishes, we ask you to accept this dinner and tea set from which may you long be spared to dine.

May your lives be full of joy to others, and when your own star shall set at life's close, may it be as the morning star, which goeth not down behind a darkened west, but melts away into the brightness of heaven.

(Signed) On behalf of the employees.
Peterborough, Feb. 17. 1902.

It was a genuine surprise, but Walter rose to the occasion with a very hearty expression of appreciation of the kindness and good-will of his associates, by himself and Mrs. Dredge. May the gift of his friends and the happy current of their married life be long unbroken.

NORTH AMERICAN OIL & REFINING COMPANY'S
Stock and It Will Make You Rich

The company owns 2,080 acres of land located in the Newhall-Acton White Oil Fields of Los Angeles County, California. Our manager, Mr. J. H. Parker, writes us under date of Jan. 15th that they have opened up two oil wells near our property, one being a gusher of white oil just as clear as alcohol, and of 52 degrees gravity. This oil is worth and is selling at $4.00 per barrel at the well, and producing better than 50 barrels per day. Our derrick is up and the machinery purchased; we expect to be drilling in a very short time. We now offer to the public 100,000 shares of this meritorious company's stock at the low price of 10 cents per share, and it is worth a great deal more money at the present time with the showing we have in the property. The demand for this oil is far greater than the supply, which is not so of the black oils of Lower California and Beaumont, Texas, that are a drug upon the market. Regarding the officers of the company, they are all men of honor and means. There are no salaries paid to any of the officers, not even our General Manager, until our company is put on a paying basis.

INCORPORATION.

The company is capitalized for 1,500,000 shares, the incorporation having been effected under the laws of Wyoming, stock being all common stock, issued absolutely fully paid and forever non-assessable. The incorporation laws of Wyoming are peculiarly favorable to oil enterprises, and the par value of the stock has been fixed at One Cent per share in order to avoid the excessive revenue tax paid on stocks of a high par value.

LIABILITIES.

The company has no debts; all stock is fully paid and non-assessable, there are no stockholders' liabilities, and we have no royalties to pay for any purpose.

OUR LANDS.

The company's lands have been carefully selected by their engineer, Mr. J. H. Parker, who is also Vice President and General Manager, in conjunction with four of the best oil experts, who are well known throughout the state. These experts each unbeknown to the other went over our vast territory to locate a site to sink our first well; their reports are on file in the company's office, and we will be pleased to mail a copy of the same upon application, also maps of the oil fields with our property showing in the red. The directors call special attention to the maps, which have been drawn from actual surveys and personal inspection of the land and is accurate. The company's lands are distinctly shown as well as their relation to other oil lands and the location of oil wells, oil sepages and oil springs. A careful inspection of the map will aid prospective investors to judge of the oil under the company's lands.

The geological formation is perfect, the Anticlinal passing through the entire property, and being unbroken by granite formations.

GUARANTEE.

The officers and directors of the company have such great faith in the proposition that they will redeem all stock sold for cash, providing they do not strike oil as designated.

TREASURY STOCK.

The company holds in the treasury over 500,000 shares of treasury stock and some money. The proceeds of sale from the 100,000 shares now offered to the public will be used for the purpose of sinking wells.

REGISTRATION.

The stock is registered with the Colorado Title & Trust Company of Colorado Springs, Colorado, which guarantees any over-issue of stock.

The company would like to employ a few good Fiscal Agents to handle any part of this 100,000 shares of stock, giving them a very liberal commission. We take pleasure in recommending this stock to the good people of Peterborough and vicinity at the very low price of 10 cents per share; considering the condition of the property the stock is worth more money than what we are asking for it.

GENERAL DE WET DRIVEN BACK BY THE BRITISH

Latest Rumor Is to the Effect That Peace in South Africa Will be Announced

BY THE END OF APRIL OR THE FIRST OF MAY.

How De Wet Treated British Prisoners---Boer Delegates Think Public Opinion Has Changed in U. S.

London, Feb. 17.—A despatch to The Mail from Senekal (Orange Colony), says: While our troops were engaging a party of fifty Boers near the junction of the Wilge River and Leeuwspruit, 100 men of Wessel's commando, forming DeWet's bodyguard, crossed the Wilge lower down and rushed and drove in the Light Horse rearguard. A most exciting incident then occurred.

Seventy Boers wearing British cavalry cloaks, in the rain and under cover of the fire of a number of Boers who were in a kraal on a hill, boldly charged the Light Horse position.

The enemy fired from their horses while charging the hill, but received a heavy fire from the Light Horse defending the pom-pom, which expended all its ammunition. The enemy came back within 500 yards, and then broke back and fled, the New Zealanders' maxim and pom-pom helping to scatter them.

Four Boers were killed, and many wounded. The British loss was one man slightly wounded.

Gen. DeWet, with six men, fled up the Liebenbergsvlei River. Mr. Steyn, with a bodyguard 30 strong, is between Reitz and Bethlehem.

HOW DEWET TREATED THEM.

London, Feb. 17.—One of the prisoners taken by Gen. DeWet writes home describing the stripping process to which they are subjected. He says, speaking of the Boers:

"They gave me some old clothes not fit to go into a dusthole. They would not give me a jacket, so I went up to DeWet and saluted him, which he returned like a gentleman. I asked him for one, and he told me he was too busy. I was to ask one of his commandants; but I did not take the trouble to do that."

Another prisoner writes: "When I was binding up a wounded man, DeWet came up and asked me where he was wounded, and, if it was very bad. He is rather an evil-looking customer. Then he asked for some whiskey, and after getting that he took his hook."

It appears that the prisoners were marched for five days, and eventually sent over the Caledon River into Basutoland, where they were well treated by the natives.

PEACE BY MAY 1.

London, Feb. 17.—The latest rumor from the War Office is to the effect that peace in South Africa will be announced by the end of April or the beginning of May. People are growing very chary of accepting these rumors. Still, from what can be learned, there does seem a likelihood of such prophecy being fulfilled.

WHAT THEY EXPECT.

Paris, Feb. 17.—Dr. Leyds, the European agent of the Boers, who is now in this city, was questioned by the Associated Press correspondent to-day, regarding the subject of the mission to the United States of the Boer delegates, Messrs. Wessels and Wolmarans, who sailed for New York from Boulogne Feb. 14 on the steamer Rotterdam. He replied that they were merely going to America in response to invitations from American pro-Boers, with the view of reaching an arrangement for the distribution of funds and other assistance contributed by the people of the United States towards the Boer cause.

In other quarters, however, the impression prevails that the journey is prompted by the developments of the Anglo-German controversy as to the attitude of the powers previous to the Spanish-American war, which the members of the Boer delegation believe has produced a change of sentiment in the United States towards Great Britain, on account of the pro-Spanish action attributed to Lord Pauncefote, the British Ambassador at Washington, in April 1898. The Boers hope to utilise this supposed revulsion of feeling in an endeavor to get the United States government to modify its attitude towards mediation.

KRUGER IS BITTER.

London, Feb. 17.—President Kruger is reported to have spoken with bitter resentment of the terms, "guerillas and outlaws" applied by the British to the Boers in the field.

"When my ancestors were fighting the Spaniards in the cause of freedom, three hundred years ago," said Kruger, "they were called 'les gueux' (the beggars), but they fought on, year after year, and won liberty at last, and the name became a sacred one in history. They fought for eighty years and were victorious at last, because God was on their side, and we of South Africa have been fighting less than three years, but we will win in the end because God is with us."

THREE THOUSAND CAYUSES.

Salt Lake, Utah, Feb. 17.—Three thousand western horses, known as "cayuses," gathered from the ranges of the Inter-Mountain States, are to be shipped to South Africa for use in the British army. The animals were purchased by agents of the British army, who had been scouring the country for weeks, and have been concentrated in corrals in this city and Grand Junction, Colo.

KRITZINGER ON TRIAL.

London, Feb. 17.—The press censor in South Africa is evidently active, as the first intimation that the trial of Commandant Kritzinger, who was captured by Gen. French in December last had commenced, came from the War Secretary, Mr. Brodrick, in the House of Commons this afternoon. The Secretary did not volunteer to furnish any details, but he informed a questioner that Lord Kitchener would certainly see that the Boer general had every facility for producing witnesses. It developed during Mr. Brodrick's answer that the trial began Feb. 15.

FOUGHT FOR BRITAIN.

New York, Feb. 17.—Another passenger on the St. Paul yesterday was Eugene Hickey of No. 151 52nd street Brooklyn. Mr. Hickey is returning from South Africa, where he has been for almost a year, fighting the Boers. About a year ago Hickey stowed himself away on the ship Dunblane, which was lying at the Atlantic docks, in Brooklyn, and succeeded in getting to South Africa. He enlisted in the British army, and was put with Kitchener's Scouts, in charge of Col. Wilson. Hickey was on the firing line most of the time, and says he saw lots of active service. Hickey has a medal, which he says was presented to him by a Boer captive, which has the words "Kruger Body Guard" on it.

THE NORTH AMERICAN LIFE

Another Milestone Marked in the History of This Popular and Progressive Company

Elsewhere will be found the financial statement submitted at the twenty-first annual meeting of the North American Life Assurance Company, held at the head office, Toronto, on January 28th.

Again the old story of prosperity and phenomenal progress is repeated, with even greater emphasis than ever before in the history of the Company. The business has exceeded the best previous year by over half a million dollars.

The financial statement speaks for itself, and need not be repeated in this article. It is sufficient to say that Mr. Wm. McCabe, the Managing Director, and Mr. Goldman, the efficient and popular Secretary, as well as the Board of Directors, are to be heartily congratulated on the result of the year's operations. RUGBY CLUB BANQUET

The Complimentary Banquet at the Oriental a Grand Affair

The friends of the members of the Rugby Club tendered the ball-chasers a complimentary banquet at the Oriental Hotel.

The tables were neatly laid and prettily decorated, and fairly groaned beneath the loads of good things which were placed thereon. The members of the team and their friends did full justice to the tasteful dishes before them.

After the eatables were disposed of, a very pleasant time was spent, during which several speeches and songs were delivered in a pleasing manner by some of the guests. A very enjoyable evening was brought to a close at a late hour after passing a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Graham, their genial host.

MORE BUFFALOES IN CANADA

Herds Are Increasing, Although They Threatened to Become Extinct

Ottawa, Feb. 18—The buffaloes are increasing in such proportions in Canada that they promise in the course of a few years to become again fairly abundant. Some time ago they threatened to become extinct.

The herd of wood buffaloes in the Peace River district has trebled in size under the protection afforded it by the Northwest mounted police. Five years ago it was estimated that there were not more than 80 buffaloes in the herd; now there are 400.

In appearance there is little difference between the wood buffalo and the plains buffalo. The former is merely a larger, richer-coated animal. It differs materially, however, in its habits from the sub-species which inhabited the plains, and which has undoubtedly passed away, except for the presence of a few animals in captivity and in the Yellowstone National Park.

This species preferred the plain, and travelled hundreds of miles in its annual migrations, while the Canadian buffalo shuns the prairie and migrates but little.

RAILWAY TO DAWSON

An All-Canadian Route Would Cost to Construct and Equip $43,520,000.

Ottawa, Feb. 18—The result of the surveys made by government engineers for the purpose of determining the most feasible all-Dominion route, with the probable cost, of a railway to connect Dawson with the Canadian railway system is given in the blue book of the minister of railways.

A railway from Edmonton through to Lake Teslin would be 1,240 miles and would cost for construction and equipment $38,519,774. A branch, 317 miles long, costing with equipment $15,217,540, would connect this line with Port Simpson, on the Pacific coast. From Lake Teslin to White Horse, the head of navigation of the Yukon river, a railway would be 150 miles long and would cost, equipped, $5,000,000. This would make the total cost of building and equipping a road from Edmonton to White horse, $43,520,000. A railway from Port Simpson, on the Pacific, via Teslin, to White Horse, would cost, equipped, $34,110,000.

WAR IS DECLARED AGAINST KENTUCKY

Lee Turner and His Band Hurl Defiance at the State Authorities

A MINIATURE WAR NOW ON

And It Looks as Though There will be Considerable Trouble Ahead for the Authorities of the State.

Middlesboro, Ky., Feb. 18—War has been declared by Lee Turner and his mountaineers against the constituted authorities of Bell County. The campfires of the desperado's followers on the mountains can be seen to-night from Middlesboro.

Reports have come in that Turner and his supporters have been in back portions of the county procuring aid and that full two hundred mountaineers have joined his forces. The burning of Turner's "blind tiger," three miles from Middlesboro, yesterday, and the killing of several of his followers by deputies from this town have enraged the outlaw and he swears that he will be avenged.

About thirty of Lee Turner's men held the pass between here and Mingo Mines well guarded all day and allowed no one to pass except the mail carrier. Lee Turner talked over the telephone wire from Mingo to a correspondent to-day.

Turner said that he had been persecuted and that he would make it hot for his enemies. He expressed his intention to get carpenters from Lafollette, Tenn., next week and have them rebuild his saloon and fort, and said that he would have armed mountaineers to protect them while they were doing the work. He declared that as soon as the structure was finished he would keep a standing army of several hundred men within his stockade. He has plenty of money and there is no doubt he will attempt to carry out these plans.

A reward of $500 has been offered for Turner, dead or alive, but as all the coal miners around Middlesboro, 2,000 or more, and hundreds of mountaineers sympathize with him, it is not likely he will be caught or killed soon. It is reported that Gen. Turner, Lee's elder brother, and himself a noted desperado, is with Lee and helping him.

Nine men are known to have been killed in yesterday's fight at Turner's place. The dead are Charles Cecil, deputy Sheriff; John Doyle, of the Sheriff's posse; Charles Dye, Marsh Wollison, Perry Watson, Frank Johnson, Mike Welch, James Prade and Thomas Hopper, seven members of Turner's band.

MEN ON STRIKE

They Want the Union Hours of Work Recognized

A number of laborers who are employed on the several buildings have declared a strike. The men are members of Union 8240 of the American Federation of Labor, and demand that the union hours of work be recognized. The union rules call for the hour of five to be the close of a day's work. The men resent the action of their employer which, while it does not lengthen the hours of work, would make the time of leaving off work considerably later. The men regard this as a test case, and are determined to make a firm stand.

Contractor Begue, who has charge of the men, seemed to think that the matter was not of very great importance and would be easily adjusted.

The men have given notice that trouble is on at the works and that laborers should keep away. It is hoped that the trouble will be settled in a manner that will be entirely satisfactory to both sides, in a very short time.

BRITISH SUCCESS CRUSH CRUEL FETICH

British Troops Capture Powerful Moloch in Africa

AROS TRACED TO THEIR DEN

Famous "Ju-Ju" Taken After Terrific Battle with Aborigines

Stops Frightful Human Sacrifice and Ends Big Slave Trade—Pitiless Priests Who Gained by Traffic are Hiding.

London, Feb. 19—Reports received from West Africa tell of hot battles which the British troops had in their campaign against the Aros, a powerful native tribe which recently rose in revolt.

Most important of all is the news that their principal god, Long Ju-Ju, to whom more human sacrifice has been brought than to any other fetish in Africa, has been captured.

The peaceful natives for miles around the scene of the present operations against the Aros are rejoicing over the British victory. For them the victory of the "white man's Ju-Ju over the black man's Ju-Ju" means that they will no longer have to fear the depredations of the slave-hunting Aros and will be relieved of the terror of the power and vindictiveness of the Long Ju-Ju.

The Ju-Ju is a god or fetish whose name is whispered by the natives of West Africa with awe and terror. In his mysterious temple, hidden away in the heart of a mighty forest, hundreds of human beings have been put to death every year as sacrifices and thousands more sold into slavery to enrich the gang of priests who have carried on the awful rites with which the worship of the god was accompanied. The fame of the Ju-Ju has extended from the Niger on the west to the Cross river on the east and from the north to the sea.

According to the native belief the god was all-powerful and to disobey the commands of his priests meant death. The Ju-Ju was supposedly gifted with prophetic power, too, and with the promise of wonderful revelations as to the future thousands of ignorant natives have been induced to make pilgrimages to his temple.

Some of them were killed and offered up by the priests as thank-offerings, some were made prisoners, and a few allowed to go free. These supposed that their comrades had been eaten by the pitiless god and the tale they told on returning to their villages fed the flames of superstitious dread of the Ju-Ju's power.

The Aros are one of the most savage and warlike tribes in Africa, and one that carries on an immense slave trade, practically all its captives being sold into bondage. Four British columns have been engaged in a great circling movement which is intended to inclose the enemy in a net, and each one of them has seen desperate fighting, but it is column No. 1, under Colonel Montanaro, which has destroyed the largest of the Aro villages and fought its way through the thick bush to the lair of the Long Ju-Ju.

The Aros live in fourteen separate villages built in a great circle around the forest of thick brush in the centre of which is the temple of the Ju-Ju. Nearest is the town of Aro Chuku, upon which the English column advanced, but which they found deserted, the natives having fallen back into the forest.

The town covers five square miles, but the houses of which it was composed proved to be so utterly filthy that the English commander ordered them burned, although it had been intended that the place should be occupied permanently. Bushhouses were thrown up hastily, but the troops hardly were encamped before the fierce Aros attacked them pluckily. Beaten off, they attacked again in the night, and during all the time the town was occupied a "dropping" fire was kept up from the forest.

Next morning the column set out determined to find the temple of the Ju-Ju. To accomplish this took hours of hard marching and harder fighting in the bush, which grew thicker and more difficult to penetrate as they advanced.

In front of the column an advance guard of trained scouts was thrown out, for the Aro had learned to intrench himself strongly where the brush is the thickest, and many a British column has marched straight up to such an ambuscade and never suspected until a slaughtering volley was poured in on them. The force suffered no severe losses and finally struck a well trodden path which led to the mysterious home of the Long Ju-Ju.

Until the priests who have for so many years "officiated" in this uncanny den are captured it will be impossible to tell exactly what went on there, but according to native testimony the wretched pilgrims who visited the place were addressed in an impressive monotone by a concealed representative of the Ju-Ju and had their superstitious questions answered and their various feuds settled.

The victims were generally led to the place by a long detour and made to walk backward along the path leading to the clearing in the bush. Here it was that they were attacked by the priests and their savage allies, some set apart for a sacrifice and the rest made slaves.

Poor Girl, Pity Her

Growing! Yes, into weakness, but not strength. Studies — plenty of them. Tired, of course she is, and weak, too. Does not eat enough, and digests far less than enough. This condition is so frequent, but how seldom noticed, even by fond parents. Give her Ferrozone, then watch her appetite improve, her cheeks and lips grow ruddy, her step elastic, her spirits buoyant. All this simply the result of eating and digesting enough, making blood, and thereby strengthening the nerve and brain power. Ferrozone gives a woman's strength to weak girls. Your daughter or wife needs Ferrozone. Get it to-day.

MAY COME TO PETERBOROUGH

The Deering Brothers of Chicago, May Build Factory Here

The Times is in receipt of a letter from Messrs. Deering Brothers, Chicago, the most extensive manufacturers of agricultural implements in the world, regarding the factory which the firm propose to build in Ontario.

The matter is now, we understand, in the hands of Mr. Stuart, President of the Quaker Oats Company, who will endeavor to persuade the company to locate in Peterborough.

A few facts about the Deering Bros. of Chicago as regards their Canadian trade may be of passing interest. Last year the firm paid in duty during 1901 on manufactured goods sold in Canada the sum of $240,000. To evade this they are going to establish a branch in Canada likely to start with 300 or 400 men and soon to keep 1,500 busy.

This branch industry will go either to Peterborough, Kingston, Montreal, or Toronto. The company is not bonus-hunting. All that is looked for is a site, exemption, and good shipping facilities. With its present connections with both the G.T.R. and the C.P.R. Peterborough should by judicious management stand a fair chance of getting this industry.

An agent of the company claims that forty per cent. of all the agricultural implements sold in Canada during last year were disposed of by the Deering Bros. firm, so the Canadian city that gets this proposed branch industry will be catering to a large proportion of the agricultural and farm implement trade of the Dominion.

THE IRISH TROUBLES WILL FOLLOW WAR

May End in Open Rebellion If Vigorous Action is Not Taken

ENGLAND SEES TROUBLE AHEAD

Army in Ireland to be Largely Increased—The United Irish League is to be Bitterly Fought by Loyalists.

London, Feb. 18—The Post says: After the Boers the Irish, said Lord Salisbury in his London address a few days ago. The premier took occasion in referring to the refusal of the government to accept the Dutch plans for peace in South Africa to state that England was not only willing but anxious to welcome and peace that would realise fully the rights of his sovereign. While there could scarcely be found objection to the rejection of the proposals from Holland since the Dutch effort at peacemaking was repudiated from the start by Boer leaders, this statement of Salisbury indicates that a permanent truce can be purchased only on Britain's terms. If credence be placed in Kitchener's report that the last gun of the redoubtable De Wet had been captured, the end of the war seems not far distant. But England herself will find the price of peace heavy enough when the war bills are paid and she sets up government over tenantless farms rich in nothing now but the memory of the brave deeds and the bones of sturdy patriots, who died for love of country, or those many others who lost their lives in Britannia's service.

But Salisbury takes a further look ahead and sees a question that looms more menacing than the subjugation of the Boers. He openly acknowledges that the Irish people are more hostile to the government than when the eloquence of Parnell and O'Connell stirred them to dreams of liberty.

"Home Rule for Ireland," is likely soon again to furnish the fighting ground of British politics. The Liberals have not forgotten that cry, and Salisbury sniffs trouble from afar when he asserts that an "Irish government with power to accumulate arms and ammunition would constitute a more serious threat to United Britain than did the Boers." A straw that developed while he was talking showed the wind when the first contest for a seat in parliament since T. W. Russell, the former government official, began his compulsory land-purchase campaign, resulting in a defeat of the Unionist candidate, and that in a district of Ireland that in 1895 had elected a Conservative without opposition.

The Mail says, in view of the condition of affairs, the government has decided to increase the forces in Ireland. That a state bordering on open rebellion exists, there can be no doubt. The Irish League will have to be put down at once, or civil war will come.

SOUTHERN REPUBLICS AFRAID OF UNCLE SAM

Imperialistic Tendencies of the United States Regarded With Suspicion

MAY FORM A COMBINATION FOR DEFENCE

Eighteen of the Countries of South America, Headed by Mexico, Are Alarmed—Monroe Doctrine Not Popular

Chicago, Feb. 19—Emilio Nocetti and Antonio Bermejo, two of the Argentine delegates to the pan-American congress at the city of Mexico, passed through Chicago Saturday in company with two other South American delegates on their way to consult the diplomatic representatives of the South American nations at Washington.

Eighteen of the countries of Central America and South America, headed by Mexico, the most important, now look upon the United States with suspicion, according to these delegates, because the representatives of this country at the pan-American congress voted and worked against compulsory arbitration. This made the congress practically a failure.

It is asserted that President Roosevelt, because of his imperialistic tendencies, instructed the delegates of the United States to take the course they did. The South American republics now apprehend that upon the slightest pretext the mailed hand of Roosevelt will reach across the Carribean and seize first one country and then another and annex them to the United States. It is considered probable there will be some earnest discussion of the situation among the South American diplomatic corps at Washington.

City of Mexico, Feb. 19—The attitude of the United States in regard to the nations of South America, is causing great uneasiness. The Monroe doctrine is objectionable, as it means a suzerainty over the whole southern continent. That a combination will be formed for mutual protection against the northern republic is practically assured. Under no circumstances will the United States be permitted to annex territory belonging to any of the combining nations.

AN IMPORTANT MATTER

Ably Presented by Mr. D. W. Dumble in Letter to the Town

Mr. D. W. Dumble, police magistrate has addressed his views on the question of a House of Refuge in a very concise manner. Mr. Dumble plainly states what his duty is and what his intentions are as regards cases in the future. He has lost no time in stating his views to the public, and no time should be lost in making preparations for the care of afflicted persons who cannot earn their own living. The position held by the magistrate enables him to see much more plainly than most citizens, the great need of a House of Refuge in this county.

The letter is as follows:

February 17, 1902.

To the Mayor and Council, Peterborough:

Gentlemen,—I have been in the habit of sending to the county gaol as vagrants persons who were without visible means of support, and who by reason of physical and mental disability were unable to support themselves. I have thus continued to send to the gaol continuously the same persons at intervals of six months, which was the limit of my power, so that some men have been in gaol for over ten years, not as criminals in prison, but as infirm persons in an infirmary. Now the prison was never intended for an infirmary, nor was it intended to impose on the gaoler or matron of the gaol duties which of necessity had to be performed in case of infirm persons. This morning I sent to the gaol one Evans, who by reason of paralysis and other infirmities is unable to help himself in any degree. This man was formerly in the gaol for about a year and a half and was taken out by a charitable person who thought to cure him of his ailments. That gentleman has left the country, and the man, having neither home or means of support, must either be left to perish, or be cared for by some charitable institution. In the absence of such I was compelled to send him to gaol.

By amendment of the Criminal Code made in 1900, it is provided "that no "aged or infirm person shall be committed as a loose, idle or disorderly "person or vagrant, for not having "any visible means of maintaining "himself, and who lives without employment, in the County of which he "has for two years immediately preceding been a resident."

Under this law I am forbidden to send persons coming within its purview to the county gaol, and hereafter will not do so. It will rest with the town and county to make proper provisions for such cases, as humanity will not suffer you to let them perish, and I am helpless to afford them the desired relief.

I am, Gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,
D. W. DUMBLE.

BRITISHERS FELL INTO A BOER TRAP

Infantrymen, Fresh in S. Africa Were Not Used to War Tactics

THEY MET WITH A HEAVY LOSS

Gallant Effort of Eight Officers—Constabulary Met a Superior Force

Pretoria, Feb. 17.—One hundred and fifty mounted infantrymen, while patrolling the Klip River, south of Johannesburg, February 12, surrounded a farmhouse where they suspected Boers were in hiding. A single Boer broke away from the house and the British started to pursue him. The Boer climbed a kopje, the British following, and immediately a heavy fire was opened upon them from three sides. The British found themselves in a trap, and in a position where they were unable to make any defence. Eight of the British officers made a gallant effort and defended the ridge with carbines and revolvers until they were overpowered.

The British had two officers and ten men killed, and seven officers and forty men wounded, before the force was able to fall back under cover of a blockhouse. The infantrymen were all fresh from home and unused to Boer tactics. The bulk of the casualties occurred during the retreat of the British. The killed included Major Dowell, the commander of the force.

Lord Kitchener, in addition to reporting the Klip River affair, says: "A party from South African Constabulary line, on the Waterval River, encountered, February 12, a superior force of the enemy, near Vandersbank, and was driven back with loss."

CORONER'S INQUEST

Mr. J. Fred Perrin's Death to be Investigated—Jury Empanelled—Post-Mortem Examination to be Made To-Day.

The Coroner's jury to inquire into the circumstances connected with the death of J. Fred Perrin who died from injuries received while at work at the Cereal Co's works last night at 7.30 in the Council Chamber, County Coroner, Dr. Grey presiding.

The following jury was chosen,—G. K. Martin, Thos Ellis, Wm. Fowler, R F Kidd F M Vanderwater, D F Drummond, Geo. Hall, W R Johnston, J. H Connell, Jas. Graham, J C Barnard, Patrick Davis, Robt. Stenton, Andrew Brown.

Mr. G. K. Martin was selected as foreman.

The oath being taken by the jury they proceeded to Comstocks undertaking establishment for the purpose of viewing the remains.

After an absence of nearly one half hour the jury returned to the Council Chamber, where they were addressed for a few minutes by the Coroner. He said it was his opinion, and also the opinion of Mr. R. E. Wood, County Crown Attorney, that a post-mortem examination of the body be made. It was necessary to know the cause of death in case there should be any litigation. After some deliberation the jury decided to recommend that a post-mortem examination be held. The Coroner then directed that this be performed to-day.

Several lawyers were in attendance, Mr. R. M. Dennistoun, appearing on behalf of the company, Mr. Stratton on behalf of relatives of the deceased and Mr. R. E. Wood, County Crown Attorney.

The jury adjourned to meet to-night in the Council Chamber at 7.30 sharp, when the evidence of several witnesses will be taken.

CIVIC OWNERSHIP

Brockville's Experience in the Matter Has Been Highly Satisfactory

A practical example of the beneficient and satisfactory effect of the municipalization of lighting plants or other civic utilities is afforded by the experience of the city of Brockville. From Mayor Harrison and Messrs. R. H. Comstock and R. Bowie, light commissioners of that city, who are now in Ottawa, a few interesting facts respecting the operation by the municipality of the lighting plant have been obtained.

It was just a year ago that Brockville people decided to give municipal ownership of lighting a trial. At that time there was a gas and an electric plant owned by one company. The town bought a [illegible] and [illegible] both plants. The [illegible] was slightly increased, substantial improvements were made, and at the end of the first year after the payment of all operating expenses as well as the liquidation of the annual amount of interest and sinking fund on the purchase price, the municipality came out about [illegible] to the good. Now, the people are going in for improvements in the service. At present the power is taxed to the limit, and a by-law submitted to the people a couple of weeks ago authorizing the expenditure of [illegible] for the lighting service was carried by an overwhelming majority. The new plant which it is proposed to add consists of a water gas apparatus and two new dynamos for the electric lighting station. That gas will not be required just yet. It is for getting pointers on the operation of gas and electrical outfits that the deputation is now in the city inspecting the works of the Ottawa companies. It is proposed to considerably increase the street lighting.

The waterworks system in Brockville has been for several years owned and operated by the municipality and the excellent results, financially and otherwise, which characterized civic ownership in that regard proved a great incentive for the people to acquire their lighting plant. Both systems are, or will soon be, thoroughly up to date in every particular. The best and most satisfactory service is furnished and yet the investments yield handsome surpluses.

Mayor Harrison and Messrs. Comstock and Bowie all state that the people of the Island City are more than satisfied with their experiment in the municipalization of public utilities and are convinced of the economic value of the system.

A
Lady's
Lunch

Has been rudely defined by some cynic as "slops and sweets." And after all there's more truth than poetry in the definition. Ice cream and cake may satisfy the palate, but they are far from satisfying to the stomach, which requires that food be nutritious first and nice afterward. By careless eating women pave the way for stomach "trouble," and its kindred miseries.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is confidently commended as a cure for diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. By curing diseases which prevent the assimilation of food it enables the body to be built up and strengthened in the only way known to nature—by food digested and assimilated.

"For twelve long months I suffered untold misery," writes Mrs. Mattie [illegible], of [illegible], Charlotte Co., Va. "No tongue could express the pain that I endured before I commenced taking Dr. Pierce's medicine. I was not able to do anything at all. Could not eat anything except bread and tea—or if I did the top of my head hurt so it seemed it would kill me with all that I could do it would burn like fire. But now, since using your 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Favorite Prescription,' I can eat a little of almost anything I want, and can do a good day's work as well as anybody can. Am better than I have been for years."

Anecdotal.

It is related that once, when a captain in the army was cornered by the enemy, he addressed his men as follows: "My men, fight like demons until your powder gives out, then run. I'm a little lame, I'll start now."

An English rector on coming into a new parish, asked the clerk if there were any Puseyites (followers of Dr. Pusey, a high churchman) in the community. "No, sir," replied the clerk; "there used to be some, but for the last two years the boys have took all their eggs."

Mark Twain was recently chaffing Sir Wemyss Reid on the vagaries of English pronunciation. "You spell a name B-e-a-u-c-h-a-m-p, and pronounce it Marchbanks," he said. "And you do precisely the same thing," replied Sir Wemyss. "What do you mean?" asked Mark Twain. "Well, you spell your name C-l-e-m-e-n-s, and you pronounce it Twain."

An error of a new clerk in the mailing department of an English publishing house was responsible the other day for the mailing of a prospectus to a world-famous statesman, who had been dead for some years. The letter was returned a few days later, with the following endorsement: "In Heaven, ——, 1901. Gentlemen: As your publications are not permitted to circulate here, I believe it would be useless for me to subscribe for them. Yours respectfully," and here followed the name of the famous statesman.

When asked what he thought of a certain captain who frequented the Essex links, a Scotch caddie said: "Weel, sir, he's a verra nice gentleman an' a good gaufer, but he's awfu' nerra—awfu' nerra." "Narrow! What do you mean, Donald?" "Weel, sir, it wis this way. Efter the game was ower, and I had carried his clubs up tae the house, he says: 'Donald, will ye hae a draw?' and I said: 'I do be verra pleased.' so he gets the bottle, an' he pourin' awa' intae a glass, an' I wantin' tae be genteel, says: 'Stop! stop'—an' he stopped."

What to do with Jefferson Davis should he be captured, was a problem that puzzled Lincoln's Cabinet not a little. In speaking of it to General Grant one day, the President remarked. "There was once an Irishman who had signed the Father Mathew temperance pledge. Going into a saloon to get a glass of lemonade to quench his thirst, he leaned over and whispered to the barkeeper: 'And couldn't you put a little brandy in it unbeknownst to meself?' So," continued Mr. Lincoln, "let Davis escape all unbeknown to yourself if you can."

L. R. Stockwell, the popular actor, says that some years ago in San Francisco, when Peter Jackson, the colored pugilist, was a feature in a revival of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," "Bill" Nye was to have lectured at the Baldwin Theater, but was greeted by so small an audience that he excused himself and went over to hear Jackson talking of the pearly gates to Little Eva. After the performance Stockwell met Nye in the lobby of the theater, and he exclaimed: "Hello, Nye! What did you think of Peter?" "Well," responded the humorist, dryly, "anatomically he was great, but Uncle Tomically he is the worst I ever saw."

Dr. Varnadoe, a noted professor of Greek, is very fond of flowers, and some days ago, on returning from his college duties, he found in his front yard a pestiferous calf belonging to a neighbor. The doctor gave chase, and the animal plunged toward the flower-pit, and in another instant crashed through the glass cover and mixed at random with the pots and plants below. When another professor passed a few minutes later, he said, gravely, "I do not understand, Dr. Varnadoe, why you should object so seriously to having a modest cowslip added to your fine collection of plants." The doctor's frowning face relaxed. "Ah, Sanders," he retorted, "you see, this was only a worthless bull-calf."

Mr. Dooley on the Weather Bureau.

"I'M goin' to make me apologies to Clancy's leg," said Mr. Dooley.

"Why's that?" asked Mr. Hennessy.

"Well," said Mr. Dooley. "I've done it an injustice. I've spoke ill iv it as a weather prophet. F'r years that rheumatic prop has been indicatin' th' weather. If Clancy was seen walkin' briskly down th' sthreet ivrybody up an' down th' road made plans f'r a buggy ride. If Clancy come along leanin' on a shtick, they begun to keep their eye on their umbrellas. Iver since I was a young man, Clancy's leg has tipped off rainstorms before they got as far as th' Rocky Mountains, an' manny a bark has it previnted fr'm goin' out on th' canal whin th' sky was clear overhead, but a twinge in th' knee told Clancy a hurricane was brewin' down below Lemont. That leg dealt in anny kind iv weather, hot or cold, wet or dhry. Clancy used to make a verse about it. 'What,' says he, 'is th' use iv raypinin'?' he says. 'Dhrive care an' sorrow away. To-morrah,' he says, 'th' leg may be aisy, although it is,' he says, 'achin' to-day.' People bought their coal an' ice be Clancy's leg, arranged their parties an' mended their roofs. It predicted th' hard frost iv siventy-nine an' th' hot spell iv eighty-eight. Th' night before th' big wind come that blew down th' steeple iv th' church, ye cud hear Clancy howlin' like a wolf, an' before th' heavy floods two years ago he had to be wheeled around in a chair f'r a week. I used to laugh at th' people that watched that ol' peg; but mind ye, if I was Mack, I'd have the weather bureau take observations on Clancy's leg an' issue bulletins: 'Clancy in gr-reat ag'ny. Look out f'r storms on th' lakes.' Or: 'Clancy wint to a dance last night. Continyued fair an' clear, with light southwesterly breeze.' I wud so.

"Las' Foorth iv March, Mack sint f'r th' head that r-runs th' weather bureau an' says he, 'Pro-fissor,' says he, 'what kind iv weather ar-re ye goin' to give us to-morrah?' he says. 'Can I wear me plug hat?' says he. 'Ye cud go in th' ne-pa-aper,' says th' pro-fissor. 'Since th' Lord sint you an' me to bless this gran' counthry,' he says, 'there niver was seen such a fine day as to-morrah will be,' he says. 'Th' sun will shine in th' boochus sky,' he says, 'an' th' bur-rds will carrol fr'm th' three,' he says. ''Twill be a glory-ous day, an' ye'll be glad,' he says, 'that ye give me th' job,' he says. Well, sir, Clancy come in to see me that night, groanin' with pain. 'What ails ye?' says I. 'Me leg,' says he. 'Th' weather's got into it,' he says. ''Tis goin' to rain a diluge,' he says. 'But,' says I, 'th' arya iv low barometer is station'ry over Texas an' th' arya iv high barometer is tearin' around in th' neighborhood iv Goshen, Injianny,' I says. 'How can it rain?' says I. 'I don't care,' says he. ''Tis goin' to rain,' he says. Well, sir, d'ye raymimber, Mack had to put on a life-presarver before he got half-way through tellin' what he'd done f'r us. 'Twas a gr-reat victhry f'r Clancy's leg. I don't know what th' pro-fissor said about it. Maybe he blamed it onto th' Popylists. But annyhow, he wint back to his wurruk an' I began to believe in him again, f'r th' weather got good.

"I've been thinkin' it over, Hinnissy, an' I come to th' con-clusion that there's two kinds iv weather, human weather an' weather-bureau weather. No wan knows what causes human weather. Hogan says th' seasons is caused be th' sun movin' fr'm th' thropic iv Cancer to th' thropic iv Capricorn, an' whin 'tis in wan place we suffer fr'm th' cold, an' that's winter, an' whin 'tis in th' other place we suffer fr'm th' heat, an' that's summer. Hogan says it, but Hogan can't tell ye why, if that's so, th' days don't get hotter fr'm March straight through to October. Some people says th' summer's caused be fires in th' bow'ls iv th' earth, where hell used to be whin I was a boy; but if ye believe that, why don't we cook th' year around? Father Kelly thinks 'tis th' spots on th' sun does it, an' Father Fitzmeister thinks 'tis th' brewer's agent. Ivrybody has a guess, an' wan man's guess is as good as another. That's our weather. Th' weather bureau ought to lave it alone an' shtick to its own, that rains whin they's a high pressure in Maine, an' snows whin they's a low pressure in Texas. Th' weather bureau weather is good parlor weather, but th' kind we have to dhrive sthreet cars in is out-iv-dure weather, subject to all th' rigors iv th' climate. Th' weather bureau's weather is on a map, an' our weather is in th' air. That's why th' pro-fissor fails an' Clancy's leg is a gr-reat success. 'Tis an out-iv-dure leg."

"I don't believe in anny kind iv weather prognostications," said Mr. Hennessy.

"Well," said Mr. Dooley, "if I was goin' into th' business, I niver wud prophesy till th' day afther."

A Dog Story.

A dog story is told by the traveler, Mr. Herbert Vivian, in his book called "Abyssinia." The dog belonged to Colonel Sadler of Berbera. Among his accomplishments was drinking whiskey. "One very thirsty evening a guest was reclining in one of Colonel Sadler's long cane lounges on the verandah. He placed a tumbler of whiskey and soda by his side and proceeded to converse. Presently he stretched out his hand for his glass, and gave a great start on finding it was empty. He was convinced that he had put it down full a few minutes before, equally positive that he had not touched it; yet how could this liquid have disappeared without disturbing the glass? It was all explained when the dog emerged, wagging his tail, and reeking indecently of spirits."

Ate His Bonnet.

An English driver for a Market street business house persuaded his employer to buy a straw hat for the horse during the recent hot spell, and on Tuesday the horse appeared without the new headgear.

"What has become of the horse's bonnet, Harry?" asked one of the firm. "Don't you think it is hot enough this morning?"

"Ot enough. That it is, sir, but the bloomin' 'oss ate the 'at afore I could put it on 'im this morning," said 'Arry. —Newark "Sunday Call."

A Mummy as Hostess.

M. Guimet, the celebrated Orientalist, who has founded in Paris a museum which bears his name, gave the other day a five o'clock tea, "to meet the beautiful Thais," relates a correspondent in Paris. Thais, as one knows, was the famous courtesan who lived in the third century, and was so blonde and lovely that all the gentlemen of Alexandria lost their appetites and sleep on her account. The smartest people were invited, and, to begin with, an excellent luncheon was served. This was a wise precaution, for—who knows?—they might not have been able to enjoy the rare Oriental sweets of M. Guimet after they had paid their visit to Thais, in her—sarcophagus, for Thais was a mummy.

The once beautiful lady received her visitors lying down on her narrow couch of white marble. A gossamer veil of gold was on her face, which is somewhat damaged, while in her dainty slippers of scarlet cloth embroidered with real pearls very little feet were to be seen. But she still wore her superb hair, once like liquid copper, now somewhat faded and of a vague color, though abundant and silky. Round her neck was a necklace formed by two rows of unpolished pearls. Her woollen yellowish gown is of a texture so fine that nothing of the kind could be found nowadays, and she wears a bodice of orange striped silk, which is tied round her waist by a sash of the most delicate salmon-pink hue.

Beside her were many pretty things, such as a bread-basket in silver filigree, two mugs of chiselled gold, two bronze crosses—for Thais became a Christian while she was still young and lovely—and a sort of prayer-book in light laths of pale wood. A few other mummies keep her company, most of them being also surrounded by quaint and curious things very interesting to look at. One of the most clever lady writers was so struck by them that she is going to write a series of articles on the subject, beseeching the friends and relations of our modern dead to imitate the people of antiquity and fill their tombs with articles that were once beloved by them, so that some 2,000 years hence scholars and artists may form an idea of the Parisian civilization in the twentieth century.

Some Scotch Examination Papers.

London "Chronicle."

A correspondent proposes the following questions for the next matriculation examination at the Scotch universities: First—Geography—Draw a map of the United States, marking London, Glasgow and Birmingham. Second — Rule of Three—If a man does a piece of work in four days, how much quicker will an American do it at half the salary? Third—Political Economy — The Yankee millionaires over here state they "feel as if this were their own country." The German Emperor, when last visiting us, declared he felt "perfectly at home." Account for this. Fourth—History—Write a note on the invasions of Great Britain and the rebellion and subsequent subjugation of the Angles. Give dates of the accessions of Yerkes I., Sloan, Morgan the Contractor, and the other conquerors; also of the beatification of St. Carnegie. Say what you know of any of these. Fifth —Trade Problem—You are an English manufacturer. An extensive order is received for locomotives for a trans-African railway. Which would you do —demand an entire alteration of the railway to fit the six locomotives you have in stock, or recommend an American rival? Le Gallienne as Satirist.

IN the "Rambler," Numb. 210, Richard Le Gallienne, Esquire, has what he himself would no doubt call a "little paper" on "The Desire of the Star for the Moth." We help ourselves to the following excerpts:

"Of course, there are very big successful Stars who affect that the Hero-worshipper Moth is a Nuisance, and build themselves about with Bastions of Privacy, through which no Ray of their Shining can reach the most persevering Moth—but then, you see, they are so sure of their Moths. I wonder if the Time should come when the Flocks of little Pilgrims up to their dizzy Radiance begin to slacken, and the Roar of Moth-Wings outside their guarded Country-seats to grow fainter—and it has happened so with some very great Stars indeed!—if they would not become a little insecure in their Feeling of Starriness, and perhaps even at last unshutter a Window, and let slip a Beam of their celestial Selves; lest the Moths should grow discouraged, and perhaps cease coming at all.

"I have heard that some Stars of this Magnitude charge the Moth Half a Guinea for their Autographs—strictly, of course, for the Benefit of the Hospitals. Such Stars are, you can imagine, very sure of themselves. But there is another Kind of big Star that makes quite as fine a Blaze as those of which I have been speaking, yet is by no means so unsocial; on the Contrary is smilingly, even eagerly, accessible to every Moth that is so kind and appreciative as to take the Trouble to call with its Homage. It often indeed asks the Moth to stay for Lunch, and makes it promise to be sure to come again."

It is somewhat unusual to find Mr. Le Gallienne playing literary satirist in this rather obvious manner. But at the moment he is living in New York, which possibly accounts for it. Possibly, too, suggests the "Outlook," the falling-off in the stream of moths which formerly drifted in a certain direction has filled his soul with revolt.

Curious Bit of News.

Dr. G. L. Johnson, whose studies of the eyes of mammals have recently been published, calls attention to the fact that men and monkeys alone possess parallel and convergent vision of the two eyes. On the other hand, the lower mammals possess divergent and consequently very widely extended vision. Squirrels, for instance, and probably hares and rabbits as well, are able to see an enemy approaching directly from behind without turning the head.

Giant Tortoises.

FOUR giant tortoises have recently been added to the reptile collection of the Zoological Gardens in Bronx Park, New York. They are from the Galapagos Islands, in the Southern Pacific Ocean, and differ from any tortoises native to Europe, Asia, Africa, or America.

These enormous tortoises are living reminders of the age of giant reptiles. They represent the sole survivors of the gigantic cold-blooded creatures whose massive bones in the different scientific museums illustrate the wonders of the Pliocene Age. In that age lizards attained a length of forty feet and more, and possessed strength enough to tear down small trees in order to browse upon their leaves. All reptilian life was gigantic in proportion, and a comparison of an ordinary tortoise of the present day with one of the giant tortoises shows the decadence of the reptile race. The average land tortoise of Europe or America, for instance, weighs five pounds, while the largest tortoise at Bronx Park weighs 310 pounds.

There are fourteen distinct species of the giant tortoise. Of these, six inhabit the Galapagos Islands, four the Aldabra Islands and four the Mauritius-Rodrigues group. All the species are rapidly becoming extinct, and reputable scientific authorities have declared several species to be entirely extinct for some time. On the continents of Europe, Asia and Africa these creatures are represented only by fossil remains; the living individuals are confined entirely to the islands mentioned.

To procure these reptiles a number of expeditions have been planned. The first of these resulting in the arrival of specimens in this country was made by the United States ship "Albatross." The specimens procured were placed in the National Museum at Washington. In 1812, long before the visit of the "Albatross," the United States ship "Essex" had explored the islands of the Galapagos group, and two large tortoises were captured and presented to a South Sea Island chief. In 1889 these same reptiles were obtained by Walter Rothschild, and were shipped by him to London.

In 1897 Mr. Rothschild despatched his expedition for giant tortoises to the Galapagos Islands. The total expenses of this expedition were $16,500. Fifty-nine tortoises were procured, but none exceeded two hundred pounds in weight. All the islands were visited. On Duncan Island twenty-seven specimens were captured, representing a species scientifically known as Testudo ephippium. The tortoises collected in this expedition were taken to London in 1898 by Frank B. Webster of Boston. As a special exhibit in a zoological conference then in progress they excited great interest, and their owner finally distributed them among the zoological gardens of Europe.

In 1900 twenty tortoises from the Galapagos, Islands were landed in San Francisco by a Captain Noyes. Mr. Webster, acting as special agent for Mr. Rothschild, purchased all the reptiles. A number were lost in shipment from San Francisco to Boston, but six reached Boston alive. These comprised specimens of Testudo vicina and Mycrophyes. The specimens were then shipped to London, where they arrived in good condition.

The third and by far the largest lot of these reptiles arrived in San Francisco early this summer. This lot consisted of twenty-four specimens. They had been brought in a schooner from the Galapagos Islands by Captain William Johnson of San Francisco. Three of the tortoises in this lot are the largest ever captured, weighing more than three hundred pounds each.

F. B. Webster purchased this lot of tortoises, and shipped them to his place in Hyde Park. On the way three of them died. One of the three largest specimens was purchased by the New York Zoological Society, together with four smaller ones. Six specimens have been purchased by Mr. Rothschild, two go to Count Peracca, in Italy, and the remainder will probably be disposed of among zoological institutions.

The five giant tortoises at the New York Zoological Gardens now occupy a plot of long grass opposite the reptile house. In the mornings they are often let out of their enclosure to browse about at will. In the heat of the day they sleep in the shadow of a piece of tarpaulin that has been spread to shelter them from the sun.

The principal article of diet with these strange creatures is the cactus, but they feed on all sorts of vegetation, and seem to thrive.

These tortoises live to a great age. There is one in captivity known to be 127 years old, and it was full grown when caught. The largest of the collection at Fordham is supposed to have attained the great age of two hundred years.

The dimensions of this enormous tortoise are: Length of shell, on curve, 4 feet 3 inches; width of shell, on curve, 4 feet 7 inches; height, 20 inches; weight, 310 pounds. This giant was caught in the crater of an extinct volcano. To carry it thence to the shore were required the efforts of fourteen men for twelve days. A stretcherlike carrier was improvised, and the reptile placed upon it.

Next winter a special tortoise house will be ready at the east end of the present reptile house. There the giant tortoises will be housed from the cold, and a glass roof will give them the full benefit of the sun.

Shuffle and Cut.

Perceiving now that the block was inevitable, the noble prisoner bethought him of suicide.

"Shall I shuffle off this mortal coil?" mused he.

But the executioner, being a man of some wit withal, divined his thought.

"You shuffle after I cut!" quoth this functionary, briefly.

The duke was silent at this. It was not his grace's wont to bandy words with one from the commonalty.—Detroit "Journal."

"Harry," she said, thoughtfully. "What is it?" responded the worried business man, rather shortly. "I wish you could rearrange your business a little bit." "How?" "So as to be a bear on the Stock Exchange instead of at home."—Exchange.

Unraveling a Mystery.

RICHARD WATSON GILDER is an enthusiastic lover of the delightful Berkshire region of Western Massachusetts, says the Philadelphia "Post," and has a summer home there. He loves to climb the hills, to drive about the charming roads, to fish in the waters.

With a close friend, a well-known New York artist, he set out one day for an all-day drive. Both were entranced by the scenery and delighted by the succession of fine homes, old and new, that they passed.

Suddenly the artist and Mr. Gilder uttered an involuntary cry of pleasure, for there right in front of them, as they rounded a bend, was a delightful old home. Its pillared doorway, its fan-shaped window, its gambrel roof, its picturesque gables, its quaint old-fashioned air, were very charming, and upon it was a sign, "For rent."

The two men left the buggy and stepped toward the house. It was empty, but through the narrow slitted windows at either side of the door the author and artist glanced. They saw a big grandfather's clock at the turn of the broad stairway; they saw an antique chair in the hall.

"What a delightful find!" cried the artist.

"What a charming mystery!" exclaimed Mr. Gilder.

A man sauntered up from the field. He was the caretaker.

"Would you like to look through the house?" he asked.

Nothing would please the two men better, and the door was forthwith unlocked.

Through room after room they walked. In one place stood an ample corner cupboard; in another an antique sideboard; here was a great carved clawfoot sofa; there was a table with claw-and-ball legs; upstairs was a huge canopied four-post bed with other old-fashioned furniture. In short, the entire house was furnished in colonial style.

"A dream of beauty," said the artist.

How strange it seemed. What mystery, what romance, perhaps even what tragedy, lay beyond it all! Here in this ancient house were all the ancient furnishings untouched, in spite of the keen search for such things by the myriad lovers of old-fashioned furniture and the dealers whose agents go everywhere. Undoubtedly there must be some strange and striking story to explain it all.

They sought out the caretaker.

"What old family has lived here for all these generations? How does it happen that everything has remained untouched? Why is the old house at last without a tenant, and why is it offered to strangers?"

The questions of the two men came eager and swift. The caretaker was puzzled for a few moments, and then said:

"Oh, I see what you mean. Why, this house was bought by Mr. Z., a second-hand furniture dealer of New York, and he has fixed it up here, just to rent it, with things he sent up from his shop."

The author and the artist slowly retreated to their vehicle and drove away without a word.

Expenses of English Coronations.

EDWARD VII.'S coronation expenses are likely to be extremely lavish, the precedent of George IV. being followed rather than that of Victoria. When George III. passed away the people had experienced no coronation solemnities for more than sixty years, and it was, perhaps excusably, felt that the occasion called for some larger display than when that long-lived monarch came to the throne. The sum, accordingly, which the Chancellor of the Exchequer of the day fixed in his own mind as a working maximum was £100,000. When the bill came to be presented it was discovered that the total expenditure ran to £238,000.

Now, when Victoria was crowned, it is to be remembered that there was a coronation only seven years before, and another barely ten years before that, so that most men of middle age had already tasted the sweets and borne the expense of two great festivals of pageantry. It is not to be wondered at, therefore, that when the Duchess of Kent came to discuss matters with her daughter's ministers of state, it was felt that sheer lavish display would be out of place, and the consequence was that the whole cost was brought well within the estimate.

The cost of arranging the Abbey ran into £20,000. The Lord Chamberlain's Department absorbed £14,000, the Master of the Horse and the Mistress of the Robes got £12,000 between them, the Earl Marshal and the heralds put in a bill for £1,800, the cost of the commemorative medals was £5,000, and £5,500 was spent on fireworks, illuminations and free theaters. The lot came to £69,421.

Now, one reason why the coronation of George IV. cost so much more, and, indeed, surpassed the expenditure upon any event of the kind before or since, was because there was a banquet provided for about two thousand hungry and thirsty souls who had eaten nothing all day because of their duties in the Abbey. It was a royal feed. The turtle alone filled eighty tureens, the turbot lay upon the same number of dishes, and there were eighty dishes also of salmon and trout.

The butcher's and game bills came to a respectable total, as the following toothsome details will show: Beef, 7,442 pounds; veal, 7,033 pounds; mutton, 20,474 pounds; lamb, 20 quarters, 20 legs and 5 saddles; 55 quarters of grass lamb; sweetbreads, 160; cow heels, 389; calves' feet, 400; geese, 170; capons, 730; chickens, 1,610; bacon, 1,730 pounds; butter, 912 pounds; and 8,400 eggs. Nor was the flushing of the necks of the two thousand forgotten, as witness the wine bill: 100 dozen champagne, 200 dozen claret, 50 dozen each hock, Moselle and Madeira; 350 dozen sherry and port, 20 dozen Burgundy and 100 gallons iced punch.

Advantageous Terms.

"I hear that you have compromised your suit for damages against the P. D. and Q. Railroad Company." "Yes." "Advantageously?" "Very." "What were the terms?" "They paid my lawyer's bill."—"Town Topics."

The newest floral wonder is the "Shasta daisy," originated by a flower-grower of California. It measures a foot in circumference, and, when one was exhibited recently in a florist's window in San Francisco, people literally flocked to see it. It is really a new kind of flower, and has been produced by several years of crossing and selection, three different kinds of daisies being used—the common American species, the larger and coarser European sort, and the Japanese daisy. There are three rows of petals of the purest white, and each blossom is upheld by a single strong and wiry stem which is nearly two feet long.

Don't Allow Operation for Cancer

There is a simpler, safer and more effective Method of Treatment.

Dr. J. C. Oliver, of Cincinnati, Ohio, U.S.A., in a paper he read before the Ohio State Medical Society, May 1896, said: "I have operated in a considerable number of cases of Cancer recently, and with one exception all have died within fourteen months after the operation."

This statement of a prominent Surgeon, should make any one suffering from cancer, hesitate before submitting to operation and consider carefully the evidence offered on behalf of the new Constitutional remedy, which cures Cancers, Tumors and all malignant growths, without the necessity of operation. It is a simple vegetable medicine that searches out and destroys the cancer growths, completely eradicates the disease, and at the same time, builds up and invigorates the system.

Stott & Jury, Bowmanville, Ont., will be pleased to send full particulars of this treatment, in a plain, sealed wrapper.

A COFFEE SWORD

The Old Things Would "Bob Up."

Coffee puts its sword into people first one place and then another. You may depend upon it, if you are a coffee drinker, and have ailments in some of the organs of the body, that coffee is doing its work. You may prove whether it is or not by leaving it off for ten days or two weeks, although it often takes from nine months to two years to recover from its effects.

Mr. J. W. Ashby, Mt. Airy, N.C. says. "I was a coffee drinker for 25 years. About three years ago I suffered greatly with pains in the region of my heart and the pit of my stomach. These pains appeared about the same time each day.

I wondered if coffee might not be the fault, so began the test of leaving off coffee. The pains ceased, but when I began to use coffee again the same old pains would 'bob up.' I have now been using Postum for some time in place of coffee and am entirely cured of the old neuralgia of the stomach and heart. Respectfully."

A SAD STATE OF AFFAIRS

John Evans, a Helpless Paralytic Was Sent to Gaol

An Old Peterborough Boy, Who Has Become a Helpless Invalid. A House of Refuge is Badly Needed For Such Cases.

At the Police Court on Monday an old man named John Evans, a native of the county, a poor unfortunate, who is so afflicted with paralysis, that he cannot walk, or do anything to help himself, although not otherwise sick, came up before Magistrate Dumble who had no alternative but to send him to gaol. The Magistrate strongly pointed out the necessity of a Home or House of Refuge for such cases as this, as the gaol was not the proper place for them, in fact it is doubtful if such a case could be sent to the common gaol. Besides not being a proper place for the man, it is not fair to expect the gaol officials to be burdened by the care of such a case. This is not the first nor only case of this kind. A few weeks ago we had a somewhat similar case, that of Bertha Fenstern, and many others, too numerous to give the details.

It is a pity that some of the charitable people of the town were not in attendance at the court on Monday, when this pitiable case came up, had they been present they would have become personally acquainted with the particulars of a case, which would have made them ashamed of their Christianity and so-called charity. We have many fine churches, thriving associations and charitable institutions, still the same sad tale is repeated over and over, and we do not see any attempt made to alter the deplorable condition of things as they are at present, and have been for years. It is not right, that because the Town and County Council, have not taken up the matter, that it should be allowed to drop. There are many monied men in town, who are very liberal in bringing institutions along, and we believe if these men were approached that they would gladly assist.

A couple of years ago we thought this matter was to be taken up at once, but a mistaken report was handed in by the jury at a session of the High Court when they stated that "investigations showed that there was no need for such an institution, refering to a House of Refuge. With this much mistaken report the matter was allowed to drop, but in all probability it will be brought before the Town and County Councils again at an early time, and some action should be taken without delay. There should be a House of Refuge, and as stated before, citizens would certainly feel guilty when worshipping in their handsome, comfortable churches, if they could but see one of those pitiable cases such as the two we have so recently had brought before us."

The Magistrate will probably bring this matter before the authorities at once, and it is imperative that some action should be taken in the matter.

Prof. Pull's Ride

A large number of persons lined George st. at noon, yesterday, to witness the performance of Prof. Theo. Pull in his blind ride.

Starting from the Opera House a committee composed of Messrs. W. D. Cahill J. Harvey, D. Davidson, W. H. Armstrong and J. J. McPherson drove via Simcoe, Aylmer, Hunter, George, Brock and Water Sts. to the post office. Here a note written and addressed to Robert Fair, Esq., was placed in drawer "A" and the key secreted under a ledge at the stamp wicket. Returning to the opera house via Hunter, Chambers, Brock and George Sts., the horses were given in charge of Prof. Pull, blindfolded.

Holding the hand of Mr. McPherson, he preceded him to the sleigh, and turned the team up George St. The same route was covered as before, the ground being covered at a brisk trot. Reaching the post office, the driver halted the team, entered the building and in a short time secured the key. Proceeding to drawer "A" he got the note and returned to the sleigh. At George St. he seemed to hesitate a short time, but regained the route and proceeding via Hunter, Chambers, Brock and George Sts. he halted immediately in front of Mr. R. Fair's store. Again leading Mr. McPherson, he entered the store and handed the not to Mr. Fair. He then drove straight to the opera house, and the great feat was ended. That all doubts as to the genuine powers of Prof. Pull as a hypnotist vanish before this supreme act is certain, and all that remains is to wonder at the amazing power of mind over matter.

When you feel old, whether you are twenty or eighty, use Paine's Celery Compound, as it will assuredly strengthen and build you up. The great medicine has added years of peace, free from the infirmities of old age, to thousands of lives.

Old people should bear in mind that Paine's Celery Compound purifies the blood when it moves slowly and sluggishly, removing rheumatism and neuralgia, heart palpitation, nervous weakness, sleeplessness, and troubles with liver, kidneys and stomach. In a word, Paine's Celery Compound makes the old feel young and vigorous.

Municipal Ownership

It will be interesting for the people of Peterborough to learn that municipal ownership is proving a success in almost every case. Two years ago Brockville decided in favor of municipal ownership of lighting and bought out the existing plants at $85,000. This year a by-law was voted on to raise $50,000 to improve the service and bring it up to date in every sense. So satisfied were the people with their two years' trial of purveying their own light that the by-law went through by an overwhelming majority, in fact only sixty or seventy votes were registered against it. To those who know how difficult it is to get the ratepayers out to vote in favor of a money by-law this is eloquent testimony to the satisfaction with which the trial of municipal ownership has been received in Brockville.

NORTH AMERICAN OIL & REFINING COMPANY'S

Stock and It Will Make You Rich

The company owns 2,080 acres of land located in the Newhall-Acton White Oil Fields of Los Angeles County, California. Our manager, Mr. J. H. Parker, writes us under date of Jan. 15th that they have opened up two oil wells near our property, one being a gusher of white oil just as clear as alcohol, and of 52 degrees gravity. This oil is worth and is selling at $4.00 per barrel at the well, and producing better than 50 barrels per day. Our derrick is up and the machinery purchased; we expect to be drilling in a very short time. We now offer to the public 100,000 shares of this meritorious company's stock at the low price of 10 cents per share, and it is worth a great deal more money at the present time with the showing we have in the property. The demand for this oil is far greater than the supply, which is not so of the black oils of Lower California and Beaumont, Texas, that are a drug upon the market.

Regarding the officers of the company, they are all men of honor and means. There are no salaries paid to any of the officers, not even our General Manager, until our company is put on a paying basis.

INCORPORATION.

The company is capitalized for 1,500,000 shares, the incorporation having been effected under the laws of Wyoming, stock being all common stock, issued absolutely fully paid and forever non-assessable. The incorporation laws of Wyoming are peculiarly favorable to oil enterprises, and the par value of the stock has been fixed at One Cent per share in order to avoid the excessive revenue tax paid on stocks of a high par value.

LIABILITIES.

The company has no debts; all stock is fully paid and non-assessable, there are no stockholders' liabilities, and we have no royalties to pay for any purpose.

OUR LANDS.

The company's lands have been carefully selected by their engineer, Mr. J. H. Parker, who is also Vice President and General Manager, in conjunction with four of the best oil experts, who are well known throughout the state. These experts each unbeknown to the other went over our vast territory to locate a site to sink our first well; their reports are on file in the Company's office, and we will be pleased to mail a copy of the same upon application, also maps of the oil fields with our property showing in the red. The directors call special attention to the maps, which have been drawn from actual surveys and personal inspection of the land and is accurate. The company's lands are distinctly shown as well as their relation to other oil lands and the location of oil wells, oil seepages and oil springs. A careful inspection of the map will aid prospective investors to judge of the oil under the company's lands.

The geological formation is perfect, the Anticlinal passing through the entire property, and being unbroken by granite formations.

GUARANTEE.

The officers and directors of the company have such great faith in the proposition that they will redeem all stock sold for cash, providing they do not strike oil as designated.

TREASURY STOCK.

The company holds in the treasury over 500,000 shares of treasury stock and some money. The proceeds of sale from the 100,000 shares now offered to the public will be used for the purpose of sinking wells.

REGISTRATION.

The stock is registered with the Colorado Title & Trust Company of Colorado Springs, Colorado, which guarantees any over-issue of stock.

The company would like to employ a few good Fiscal Agents to handle any part of this 100,000 shares of stock, giving them a very liberal commission. We take pleasure in recommending this stock to the good people of Peterborough and vicinity at the very low price of 10 cents per share; considering the condition of the property the stock is worth more money than what we are asking for it.

KITCHENER COOPS UP THE BOERS SLOWLY

Blockhouse Line is Extended to Bank Kop, Which Is Easily Provisioned

GOOD ADVICE FOR KRUGER FROM ITALIANS

Lord Kitchener's Gradual Extension of Blockhouses is Overcoming the Difficulties of Distance

London, Feb. 20.—A despatch to The Times from Bank Kop, in the Eastern Transvaal, says the Boers are very timid, keeping on the alert and beyond striking distance of the British. The condition of the prisoners indicates great distress among the burghers. Lord Kitchener's gradual extension of the system of blockhouses is overcoming the difficulties of distance. The Boers are not yet cooped up, but their movements are restricted. The line is now extended to Bank Kop, twenty miles nearer the Swaziland border than the Ermelo Depot, from which the columns formerly operated. Bank Kop is easily provisioned and secure.

GOOD ADVICE FOR MR. KRUGER.

London, Feb. 20.—A despatch to The Times from Rome says The Tribune publishes an open letter to Mr. Kruger, and urges him to borrow from history an indication of his duty toward his country. The paper advises Kruger to sue for peace, since it is evident that the Transvaal no longer exists except as a geographical term.

THE WAR SITUATION AS IT REALLY EXISTS

An End to the Struggle in South Africa Fairly in Sight

8,000 BOERS IN THE FIELD

The Mines Again Resuming Work, and Everything Points to a Period of Prosperity for South Africa.

London, Feb. 20.

Lord Milner is responsible for the statement that upon his return from England to the Cape there were 100,000 men, women and children being fed and clothed in the concentration camps, and not more than 8,000 still in arms. These armed men are split up into small bodies widely separated, and now harmless for serious injury in that railway area recently enclosed by blockhouses; an area "more important economically, politically and strategetically than all the rest of the country."

Of these still in arms, Lord Milner says the majority are of the best fighting quality, as has been clearly shown by the desperate encounters of the last few weeks. "To wear out the resistance of the Boers still in the field—not more than one-eighth, I think of the total number of burghers who have, first and last, been engaged in the war—may take a considerable time yet, and will almost certainly involve further losses. I will not attempt to forecast either the time or the cost. What seems evident is that the concentration of the Boers, and the substitution of several fairly well defined small campaigns for that sort of running fight all over the country which preceded them, is on the whole, an advantage to us, and tends to bring the end of the struggle within a more measurable distance. Our great object, it seems to me, should be to keep the Boers within the areas of their main strength, even if such concentration makes the commandoes individually more dangerous and involves more desperate fighting, and meanwhile to push on with might and main the settlement of those parts of the country out of which they have been driven. No doubt this is a difficult, and must be a gradual, process."

Six hundred of the six thousand stamps which mark the normal activity of the mines, were at work. Ten thousand of the refugees, formerly known as Outlanders, had returned, which is about one-sixth of the number who were "registered" prior to the war. The improvement in the situation in Natal is best shown by the official figures of imports and exports. In 1901 the former amounted to £9,789,104, against £5,876,227 in 1900, while the exports, which were £4,782,090 last year, were only £1,136,322 the first year of the war.

As the principal outcry of the pro-Boers is now limited to the "inhumanity of the concentration camps," it is interesting to note that Lord Milner considers the hardships of the Boer women and children would have been infinitely greater had they been left unprotected upon their farms. "To decide between the competing demand upon the still very limited amount of truck available for civil purposes, after the paramount requirements of the army have been satisfied, is indeed a most difficult and delicate task. Whether we have done all for the best, it is not for me to say. That any amount of conscientious thought and labor has been devoted, on all hands, to grappling with the problem, I can confidently assert. And I am equally confident that whatever has been done, and whatever may yet be done, the amount of hardship must have been and must still be very great. It would be amusing, if amusement were possible in the presence of so much sadness and suffering, to put side by side the absolutely contradictory criticisms, all equally vehement, to which our action is subjected. On the one hand is the outcry against the cruelty and heartlessness manifested in not making better provision for the people in the concentration camps; on the other, the equally loud outcry against our injustice in leaving the British refugees in idleness and poverty at the coast, in order to keep the people in the concentration camps supplied with every luxury and comfort. I have even frequently heard the expression that we are 'spoiling' the people in the Boer camps."

Upon the question of conditions of peace we must remember that not only Lord Milner and Lord Kitchener, the representatives of the Mother country in South Africa, but also the Colonial Cabinets of Cape Colony and Natal are at one with Lord Salisbury in declining to treat with any of the former civil administrators of the late republics, either in Holland, Paris or South Africa. The struggle will continue until the commandoes in the field express a desire to surrender or are rendered harmless to that majority which ardently wishes to resume once more the more profitable arts of peace.

AN AMERICAN GIRL NOW A MARCHIONESS

Daughter of a New York Banker Is Marquis Dufferin's Wife

A HIGH PLACE AMONG NOBILITY

Demise of Lord Dufferin Raises Her on Her Husband's Rank—Stork is Expected in Beautiful Residence in London—Late Statesman Left Pathetic Letter on Globe Concern's Smash.

London, Feb. 20 — She who before marriage was Flora Davis of New York City, has become, through the death of the first marquis of Dufferin and Ava, the only American marchioness in the British peerage.

Her father is John H. Davis, a banker, who resides at 24 Washington square, New York.

When she married nine years ago Lord Dufferin's second son she became Lady Terence Blackwood. Two years ago Lord Dufferin's eldest son, the earl of Ava, was killed in battle while defending Ladysmith and as he was unmarried Lord Terence Blackwood became the heir and took the title of Viscount Clandeboye.

The new marquis and marchioness of Dufferin and Ava have a beautiful house in London at 76 Cadogan square, where they are now staying. The new marchioness is expecting a visit from the stork and has to be kept very quiet.

The marquis has been trying to let this house for the coronation season, since on account of being in mourning they will not be able to go out or to entertain. The coronation probably will be the only festivity they will attend.

Their house is entered by a very large, square hall, an uncommon thing in a London house. All the rooms are beautifully decorated and upholstered. When they first went into it the drawing room was done in a shade of rose red, but when everything was finished she decided that the color was unbecoming, so she had the whole thing altered at a cost of $2,500, all of which was paid by her father, who also gave the decorations and furniture for the house.

The late marquis of Dufferin, after a long and brilliant career as governor general of Canada and British ambassador to several of the most important courts of Europe, died last Wednesday in his seventy-sixth year, respected by all, yet ruined in purse and broken in heart by a perfectly innocent but too trustful connection with unfortunate speculative enterprises.

A pathetic letter written by him at the time of the Whitaker Wright smash has been published here, in which he moans:

"It is really heartbreaking. I am nearly ruined and many others are involved in the same calamity. The one bright spot in the whole business is the way my shareholders have behaved. And what do you think that good fellow C—— did? He asked leave to place £1,000 at Lady Dufferin's disposal, and yet he himself is a poor man.

The late Lord Dufferin courteously assented to more than one request of representatives of the press for his opinion on important international questions. In November of 1899 he was asked to write an article on the old and the new diplomacy, he being the most distinguished living exponent of the former. He sent this interesting letter, hitherto unpublished:

"I hasten to acknowledge the receipt of your very flattering proposal, but, in the first place, I am far too busy to be able to embark on any literary task, and in the second place, I do not know that I have any distinct conception of what is meant by the 'new' and 'old' diplomacy.

"The telegraph and rapid means of communication by letter between the foreign offices and its dependent chanceries have, of course, modified the position of the representatives of the various courts of Europe to a very considerable extent. I imagine that is what you mean by the expression 'new diplomacy,' a term which I have frequently seen used in the newspapers without, however, being able to comprehend exactly to what it applies."

The "new diplomacy" was McKinley's, which was copied by Chamberlain, while Dufferin's letter was an admirable example of the "old diplomacy."

Argue it out
Why did YOU quit Coffee?

It probably comes to every thoughtful person at times that there are plenty of common, mediocre people, and that if one determines to, he or she can press to the front, pass the crowd, and win position, fame and gold. It is largely a matter of determination and health. Many a determined character with brilliant possibilities, is held back by ill-health. Some find that bright, keen thoughts refuse to come to their brains, and wonder why.

The kind of brain work that makes successful professional men makes heavy draughts on the filling of the minute nerve cells of the body, said filling being composed of a grayish sort of material which must be replaced day by day, or the brain and other parts of the body will not act properly.

Coffee is a hidden but powerful enemy to one's progress in life. Its subtle, narcotic poison weakens heart, interferes with digestion, and has a definite and destructive effect on the nervous system. People who are content to load themselves with impediments to progress, who refuse to supply body with food and drink of the kind needed to make up for the daily disintegration of nerve and tissue, must stand aside in the race for preeminence.

The ones who are properly fed, will surely win the laurels.

Postum Food Coffee furnishes the gluten and phosphates of grain needed by nature to nourish brain and nerves with food. It does not narcotize and tear down. It is frequently misjudged on first trial, because of improper preparation, but it will be found to be a most delicious beverage if, after boiling commences, it be allowed to continue boiling for 15 minutes. This is necessary to extract the food value and flavor.

There are those who are entirely careless as to what goes into the stomach, but the one who would make all his movements tend towards health and possible greatness, cannot afford to risk adulterated food or drink or even coffee.

WHAT CAN RUSSIA DO? IS NOW THE QUESTION

The New Treaty Has Made the Crafty Miscovite Exceedingly Angry, and Reprisals May Naturally be Expected

New York, Feb. 19 — The Sun's St. Petersburg correspondent says: The more carefully the treaty between England and Japan is considered the more clearly must the world recognise the magnitude of its actual and prospective significance. It is no exaggeration to say that this international compact has revolutionised the situation in the Far East. This is true, whether we look at its effect on the contracting parties themselves, on Russia, which suffers by it, on China, its beneficiary, or on Powers less directly interested.

At a stroke the treaty relieves England from the isolation which, coupled with the absorption of her military resources in South Africa, has, for some time past, paralysed her influence in China. Should her interests in that country now be threatened, she would be strong in the very particular where hitherto she has been weak, for through her alliance with Japan she would have at her disposal a land force superior in numbers, discipline, equipment, and efficiency to any that a European opponent could array against her in the Far East. Equally patent is it that, through the alliance just concluded, Japan becomes mighty where she was but feeble, and no longer has anything to fear from the combined naval armaments of Russia and France. In a word, the land power of Japan and the sea power of Great Britain complement each other, and, together, constitute a whole which is locally irresistible.

Upon Russia's plan to acquire a monopoly of Manchuria, which, ultimately, must have led to dominance throughout Northern China, the treaty between Japan and Great Britain falls as an extinguisher. If Manchuria is to remain Chinese, the already partly constructed branch of the Siberian Railway will become valueless, as, traversing foreign territory, it could be obstructed at any hour. The hope, too, must be renounced of securing a naval station on the southeastern coast of Corea, and of thus controlling the direct maritime route between Vladivostock and Port Arthur, which, being thus condemned to segregation from each other will be comparatively useless. In fine, the secret purpose which has impelled Russia to expend vast sums of money upon the Siberian trunk line—the purpose of gaining preponderance on the west coast of the Pacific—is now nipped in the bud. So far as any forecast can be drawn from the new situation, Russia's dream of the conquest of Pekin is now as far from fulfilment as her dream of the conquest of Constantinople. So long as the present treaty between Japan and England shall hold good, it will seemingly be the destiny of China either to remain intact and independent, or become Japanese.

That the prestige of France and Germany has been relatively dimmed at Pekin by the treaty between Japan and England is too obvious to need demonstration. Of late each of those Powers has had great influence with the Chinese Court, because each was feared. Henceforth neither French nor German diplomacy will be able to exert any pressure upon China, backed as that country will feel herself to be in the last resort by the Japanese army and the British fleet. No doubt, France and Germany will be permitted, temporarily, at all events, to keep the small territorial accessions which they have won respectively in southwestern China and in Shantung; but not a step further can they now hope to go.

What counter-move can Russia make? Even if she could secure the cooperation of Germany as well as France, the combined naval strength of those three Powers would be inadequate to cope with that of their opponents in the waters of the Far East, because the Anglo-Japanese fleet, besides being at least equal in magnitude, would possess incomparably superior naval bases in the Japanese and Chinese harbors. To enter upon such a contest with any prospect of success Russia would need the help, not only of Germany and France, but also that of the United States, which would carry with it the invaluable naval bases in the Philippines. No help from the United States will be forthcoming for the purpose of disturbing a situation, which, as shaped by the new treaty, assures the "open door," and the preservation of China's territory from dismemberment.

Checkmated in the Far East, Russia can only seek elsewhere for a retrieval of her prestige, and she may now be strongly tempted to enter on a policy of revenge. England, which has blocked the czar's progress in Manchuria, as she has blocked it on the Bosphorus, is herself by no means proof against attack. She is vulnerable in India, in Egypt and in South Africa. It is by no means impossible that French and Russian fleets combined might contrive to disembark an army in Cape Colony; and, if this enterprise miscarried, it is atleast conceivable that a Russian land army might reach the Indus or the Nile. It may yet turn out that the Russian Bear cannot be worried with impunity, and that, if shut out from a coveted field, he may show his prowess in another direction. 'Tis an ill wind that blows nobody good, and it is possible that some of England's victims may profit by the stroke that has blasted Russian hopes in the Far East.

INDIANS BURY A BOY ALIVE IN ALASKA FOR DENOUNCING RIGHTS OF PAGANISM

Was Rescued but Afterwards Died—Lived Several Hours After Being Disinterred, but Finally Died

Seattle, Wash., Feb. 20. — The steamer Dirigo, which arrived from Alaska yesterday, brings news that Chilkoot Indians near Hine Mission, Alaska, on Feb. 5, buried alive one of their tribe, a boy 15 year of age.

The boy had been converted to Christianity by Mile A. Sulon, a Methodist missionary, and in a burst of religious zeal denounced the incantations of the tribal Icht, or medicine man. This act aroused the anger of the superstitious old men of the tribe. Recently fourteen native residents of the village of Klukwan died of consumption, and Icht spread the belief that the boy, in league with the Evil One through his knowledge of the white man's religion, caused the deaths. The disappearance of the boy from school aroused the suspicions of Mr. Sulon, and he started in search of him. At the outskirts of the village he found tracks leading to a fresh grave. Digging down he found the boy still alive, his blood-shot eyes rolling in insane agony, his hair torn in handfuls from his head. His finger nails were torn off in his efforts to escape from his terrible prison. The boy was lifted from the grave and carried to the village, where he lived several hours, howling and crying out like a maniac, finally dying from the effects of suffering and fright. Icht, who is responsible for the crime, is Skun Doo, an old offender, who spent a term in San Quentin penitentiary for causing an old woman to be starved to death in 1894.

LONGS TO LIVE IN CANADA

Ex-Queen of Madagascar Tires of Gilded Captivity in Algeria.

Paris, Feb. 19.—Ranavalo, formerly queen of Madagascar, having tired of her gilded captivity in Algeria, has petitioned the government to allow her to settle in the United States or in Canada. She offers to take an oath never to attempt to return to her native island or to communicate with her former subjects in any manner. The French government has not yet replied to her.

The Strike Settled

The strike at the Cereal works has not been a serious or long-lived matter, and the working men can regard the settlement as a victory. A committee of the union waited on the employers and the matter fully discussed and a satisfactory adjustment arrived at. In an interview with a labor man yesterday we learned that the strike was off and that the men had got what they asked for and have returned to work.

CORONER' INQUEST ON DEATH OF J.F. PERRIN

Was Held Last Night in the Council Chamber—Three Witnesses Examined

REPORT OF THE POST MORTEM EXAMINATION.

Adjourned Until Monday Evening Next When More Witnesses Will be Examined.

The coroner's inquest to inquire into the facts surrounding the death of Mr. J. Fred Perrin, was resumed last night at 7.30. The jurymen were in their places, and after calling the court to order, the coroner called on Dr. Carmichael for the report of the post-mortem examination which is as follows:

Dr. Carmichael, sworn, said,—I am a practising physician in Peterborough, and with the assistance of Dr. McFaul, made a post-mortem examination on the body of the late James F. Perrin.

We, the undersigned formed a post-mortem on Mr. J. F. Perrin this morning, and found the following conditions:

Body well developed; Left temporal and malar region contused. Ecchymosis in left upper eyelid; contusion mark on dorsal surface of left hand and left lumbar region; blood in right ear and nostrils. On removing scalp, found extravasation of blood over the frontal bone and left occipital bone; left temporal muscle contused; also contusion over frontal bone. On removing skull cap, found fracture in left temporal bone, which impinged on the brain substance, with considerable extravasation of blood between membranes covering brain; otherwise brain appeared healthy. On examination of chest, found 3rd and 4th ribs fractured. Also found left lung contused on outer and lower border. Heart and right lung appeared normal. On examination of the abdomen, found a large quantity of blood in the lower and left portion, which appeared to come from left kidney, which was found lacerated. Liver, stomach, and other organs appeared normal. On examining back over lumbar and lower part of the dorsal, found muscles greatly contused, with a large amount of extravasated blood, but found no fracture of the spine. On turning the body over, a large amount of blood flowed from mouth and nose.

W. A. McFAUL, M.D.
D. N. CARMICHAEL, M.D.

The fracture on the temple bone was enough to cause death. The lacerated kidney, and the blood lost, was enough to cause death. We are of the opinion that the brain and extravasation of the kidney was sufficient to cause death. The fall was the cause of death.

Dr. McFaul, sworn, said,—I assisted at the post-mortem, and have heard the reading of the report. I fully coincide with his statements.

Mr. William Redfern, sworn, said,—I am employed by the American Cereal Co. My duties are bell-signaller. I have to give notice on the bell to call engineer's attention to the raising and lowering of the hoist. I stand on the top of the building. I communicate with the engineer by means of a bell. The bell is within ten or twelve feet of the engineer. The hoist is attached to a pulley at top of building. One hoist raises as the other descends. They are run by a reversible engine. When a barrow is on the hoist and to be lowered, one ring starts engine. When one barrow is down the other is up. A ring of the bell signalls the engineer. I was at work when the accident happened. Duties of deceased were to take loaded barrow from hoist, and put on an empty barrow. Several men are employed in attending to hoist. Deceased took his barrow to its destination, and emptied it and returned to the hoist. When accident occurred, deceased was taking a loaded barrow from hoist. He stood on scaffold, and reached out to take a barrow from hoist. The elevator started to go down. The elevator goes down very quickly at times. When hoist went down deceased overbalanced and fell forward. I did not ring the bell. I have heard it stated that the bell did ring. The bell is rung by a wire which passes down the frame of the hoist to the bottom of the hoist. There is a wooden handle on the wire. There is a spring on the bell down below, but none above. I did not go down to see deceased after he fell. I could not see him from the time he fell until he was carried out to the ambulance. The elevator going down caused him to fall by being overbalanced. The man on the lower floor had no way of signalling engineer to raise hoist. I generally stood at post near top of hoist. The bell could be rung without my knowledge. The wire could be pulled from below without my knowledge. No person could have pulled wire from top of building without my knowledge. This could have been done from below. The hoist came up level with the floor. There was no adjustment to hold the hoist except the engine from below. The hoist was constructed without a lock, and the accident would not have happened had there been a lock. The hoist lowered suddenly without any notice. I saw hoist start and told deceased to keep back, and rang for hoist to be stopped. I went down and made enquiries. The first time I got no reply. The second time I was told that the bell had rung. On other occasions I had done this. This has occurred more than once. The bell was not protected and might be struck. Have pulled bell and it did not sound. Called to the men below to draw their attention. Spring of bell might have caught, or something caught wire, and that stopped the bell. I was working on the sixth storey. The floors are not in. No stairways are in position. As storey after storey is built, the bell rope is extended, and the handle moved up. The bell could be rung in many ways. Have noticed deceased at his work. He was a steady man. He was not as active on his feet as some men are. He had his feet on the floor and hands on the barrow when hoist went down. I do not know whether he had started to lift or not. He lost his balance. I have been on the works as bell-man about two months. Deceased worked there about the same time and was quite familiar with the work. Have acted as signal-man at a number of other places. The hoist is the kind usually used by builders. It was constructed in the usual manner as hoists are built for buildings. Hoist had descended about five or six feet when I signalled to stop. Deceased had not arrived with his barrow when the hoist arrived at top of building. I have complained a number of times about the hoist dropping without signal. The time of the accident, engineer said bell had rung. If I left hoist for any reason I would leave a man in charge. Deceased may have had his foot on hoist. The hoist is the usual style of hoist used. The signal is not the same as used in some places. A pipe and whistle is sometimes used. The lowest floor is laid with plank. The bell is protected from anything falling from above, and striking it. Bell is on under side of floor. A hole is bored through each floor, and wire passed down. The wire is not boxed in. Any person might pull the wire. There are occasions when men have saved themselves by stepping quickly back. This has occurred on four occasions. The men were John Fox, twice on Saturday; George Carr and Fred Lynch. One of the cases occurred on Monday last. I never notified the superintendent. Have complained to engineer. Have asked men below why hoist had started without bell being rung. Hoist went down on the day after the accident. Spoke to several of the bricklayers' helpers. Several men saw hoist go down on Saturday. Majority of the men knew that hoist would go down. I had warned all the men, including Perrin, to be careful in case hoist should go down. I could not swear to any particular time when I warned deceased. Have warned the men as a body. Warned them when an accident occurred. The men were under my control in so much as I could stop them taking a barrow from the hoist. I am not a foreman. I am just an employee. The foreman is Mr. Gaylor.

Charles Adams sworn said,—I am in charge of engine which runs hoist on building since about last week in December, about two months. Was in charge on Monday last. Heard of accident. The first I heard was a noise which I thought was a wheelbarrow falling. Hoist stopped near floor on which Mr. Perrin fell. The building is four stories high above this. Had got signal to start hoist but not to stop it. I stopped hoist when I heard the noise. The first I knew of it was when deceased struck floor above, saw him through a small space in the floor. I went to see him as soon as I could. Had to look [illegible]. Reached the floor by going up a ladder. Was not first one there. I believe Mr. John Murphy was the first man there. When I reached him he was insensible as far as I could see. He was bleeding some. Engine is about 18 to 20 feet from where hoist lands. Can see cage when it is down. After it passes below first floor it is in my sight. Lower cage was loaded when I got signal to start. Could see it being loaded. Do not know who loaded it at that time. Did not receive any signal to stop hoist. One bell starts the hoist, also stops the hoist when in motion. Three bells signal the cellar. Four bells denote that men are on the hoist. The men are safe then. Hoist is stopped by shutting off steam and tightening brake. When the cage is up and other down they are held by a brake. When I am doing anything around engine I fasten brake with a latch. I cannot account for the difference of opinion between Mr. Redfern and myself. I got signal to start hoist but not to stop. He complained to me before that I had started hoist without signal. I never start hoist without a signal. Could not see if any one interfered with wire above first floor. No one could pull wire below first floor without being seen by me. Above first floor they would have to walk on beams. Have discovered wrong signals before. Do not know where they came from. On one occasion I received first three bells then two bells then one. I done nothing. On another occasion I got a signal one bell followed by another a few seconds later. I held engine still. Do not know who was at signal. Mr. Redfern and myself are on good terms. Mr. Gaylord is foreman over me. The top of building can be reached by going up run ways. There are ladders also. Do not know if there were any men working between me and top of building. The only connection would be when men were working at scaffolding. A boy was in engine room when bell rang. A young man George Foster sitting on coal box heard bell ring. Do not know if boy heard bell.

There is one drum on the engine. The engine is reversible. Bell is about 6 feet above the ground floor. The bell wire is not protected. There are no warning notices. There are no watchmen on first and second floor. The wire is small, it is stove pipe wire. There is no protection. Bell is situated about 20 feet from me. There is some noise in the building. Mr. Redfern never complained that he rang when I had not heard it. There were no complaints. The only complaints he made to me was that I started hoist before getting signal. I never spoke to Mr. Gaylor about it. Thought the man should look out for himself. Warned the men to be careful about the signal. He never complained to me that he signalled without getting a reply. I knew there was some danger in the hoist moving unexpectedly. I went on operating engine. Ice got in the holes in the floors where the wire came through. This occurred once. The bell would not ring when pulled. The wire was not enclosed. There was no danger of not hearing the bell. I would not move machine until I received the signal. Do not

Blockhouse Line is Extended to Bank Kop, Which Is Easily Provisioned

GOOD ADVICE FOR KRUGER FROM ITALIANS

Lord Kitchener's Gradual Extension of Blockhouses is Overcoming the Difficulties of Distance

London, Feb. 20.—A despatch to The Times from Bank Kop, in the Eastern Transvaal, says the Boers are very timid, keeping on the alert and beyong striking distance of the British. The condition of the prisoners indicates great distress among the burghers. Lord Kitchener's gradual extension of the system of blockhouses is overcoming the difficulties of distance. The Boers are not yet cooped up, but their movements are restricted. The line is now extended to Bank Kop, twenty miles nearer the Swaziland border than the Ermelo Depot, from which the columns formerly operated. Bank Kop is easily provisioned and secure.

GOOD ADVICE FOR MR. KRUGER.

London, Feb. 20.—A despatch to The Times from Rome says The Tribune publishes an open letter to Mr. Kruger, and urges him to borrow from history an indication of his duty toward his country. The paper advises Kruger to sue for peace, since it is evident that the Transvaal no longer exists except as a geographical term.

THE WAR SITUATION AS IT REALLY EXISTS

An End to the Struggle in South Africa Fairly in Sight

8,000 BOERS IN THE FIELD

The Mines Again Resuming Work, and Everything Points to a Period of Prosperity for South Africa.

London, Feb. 20.

Lord Milner is responsible for the statement that upon his return from England to the Cape there were 100,000 men, women and children being fed and clothed in the concentration camps, and not more than 8,000 still in arms. These armed men are split up into small bodies widely separated, and now harmless for serious injury in that railway area recently enclosed by blockhouses; an area "more important economically, politically and strategetically than all the rest of the country."

Of those still in arms, Lord Milner says the majority are of the best fighting quality, as has been clearly shown by the desperate encounters of the last few weeks. "To wear out the resistance of the Boers still in the field—not more than one-eighth, I think of the total number of burghers who have, first and last, been engaged in the war—may take a considerable time yet, and will almost certainly involve further losses. I will not attempt to forecast either the time or the cost. What seems evident is that the concentration of the Boers, and the substitution of several fairly well defined small campaigns for that sort of running fight all over the country which preceded them, is on the whole, an advantage to us, and tends to bring the end of the struggle within a more measurable distance. Our great object, it seems to me, should be to keep the Boers within the areas of their main strength, even if such concentration makes the commandoes individually more dangerous and involves more desperate fighting, and meanwhile to push on with might and main the settlement of those parts of the country out of which they have been driven. No doubt this is a difficult, and must be a gradual, process."

Six hundred of the six thousand stamps which mark the normal activity of the mines, were at work. Ten thousand of the refugees, formerly known as Outlanders, had returned, which is about one-sixth of the number who were "registered" prior to the war. The improvement in the situation in Natal is best shown by the official figures of imports and exports. In 1901 the former amounted to £9,789,104, against £8,676,227 in 1900, while the exports, which were £4,792,000 last year, were only £1,126,322 the first year of the war.

As the principal outcry of the pro-Boers is now limited to the "inhumanity of the concentration camps," it is interesting to note that Lord Milner considers the hardships of the Boer women and children would have been infinitely greater had they been left unprotected upon their farms. "To decide between the competing demand upon the still very limited amount of track available for civil purposes, after the paramount requirements of the army have been satisfied, is indeed a most difficult and delicate task. Whether we have done all for the best, it is not for me to say. That any amount of conscientious thought and labor has been devoted, on all hands, to grappling with the problem, I can confidently assert. And I am equally confident that whatever has been done, and whatever may yet be done, the amount of hardship must have been and must still be very great. It would be amusing, if amusement were possible in the presence of so much sadness and suffering, to put side by side the absolutely contradictory criticisms, all equally vehement, to which our action is subjected. On the one hand is the outcry against the cruelty and heartlessness manifested in not making better provision for the people in the concentration camps; on the other, the equally loud outcry against our injustice in leaving the British refugees in idleness and poverty at the coast, in order to keep the people in the concentration camps supplied with every luxury and comfort. I have even frequently heard the expression that we are 'spoiling' the people in the Boer camps."

Upon the question of conditions of peace we must remember that not only Lord Milner and Lord Kitchener, the representatives of the Mother country in South Africa, but also the Colonial Cabinets of Cape Colony and Natal are at one with Lord Salisbury in declining to treat with any of the former civil administrators of the late republics, either in Holland, Paris or South Africa. The struggle will continue until the commandoes in the field express a desire to surrender or are rendered harmless to that majority which ardently wishes to resume once more the more profitable arts of peace.

AN AMERICAN GIRL NOW A MARCHIONESS

Daughter of a New York Banker Is Marquis Dufferin's Wife

A HIGH PLACE AMONG NOBILITY

Demise of Lord Dufferin Raises Her on Her Husband's Rank—Stork is Expected in Beautiful Residence in London—Late Statesman Left Pathetic Letter on Globe Concern's Smash.

London, Feb. 20 — She who before marriage was Flora Davis of New York City, has become, through the death of the first marquis of Dufferin and Ava, the only American marchioness in the British peerage.

Her father is John H. Davis, a banker, who resides at 24 Washington square, New York.

When she married nine years ago Lord Dufferin's second son she became Lady Terence Blackwood. Two years ago Lord Dufferin's eldest son, the earl of Ava, was killed in battle while defending Ladysmith and as he was unmarried Lord Terence Blackwood became the heir and took the title of Viscount Clandeboye.

The new marquis and marchioness of Dufferin and Ava, have a beautiful house in London at 75 Cadogan square, where they are, now staying. The new marchioness is expecting a visit from the stork and has to be kept very quiet.

The marquis has been trying to let this house for the coronation season, since on account of being in mourning they will not be able to go out or to entertain. The coronation probably will be the only festivity they will attend.

Their house is entered by a very large, square hall, an uncommon thing in a London house. All the rooms are beautifully decorated and upholstered. When they first went into it the drawing room was done in a shade of rose red, but when everything was finished she decided that the color was unbecoming, so she had the whole thing altered at a cost of $2,500, all of which was paid by her father, who also gave the decorations and furniture for the house.

The late marquis of Dufferin, after a long and brilliant career as governor general of Canada and British ambassador to several of the most important courts of Europe, died last Wednesday in his seventy-sixth year, respected by all, yet ruined in purse and broken in heart by a perfectly innocent but too trustful connection with unfortunate speculative enterprises.

A pathetic letter written by him at the time of the Whitaker Wright smash has been published here, in which he moans:

"It is really heartbreaking. I am nearly ruined and many others are involved in the same calamity. The one bright spot in the whole business is the way my shareholders have behaved. And what do you think that good fellow C—— did? He asked leave to place £1,000 at Lady Dufferin's disposal, and yet he himself is a poor man.

The late Lord Dufferin courteously assented to more than one request of representatives of the press for his opinion on important international questions. In November of 1899 he was asked to write an article on the old and the new diplomacy, he being the most distinguished living exponent of the former. He sent this interesting letter, hitherto unpublished:

"I hasten to acknowledge the receipt of your very flattering proposal, but, in the first place, I am far too busy to be able to embark on any literary task, and in the second place, I do not know that I have any distinct conception of what is meant by the 'new' and 'old' diplomacy.

"The telegraph and rapid means of communication by letter between the foreign officers and its dependent chanceries have, of course, modified the position of the representatives of the various courts of Europe to a very considerable extent. I imagine that is what you mean by the expression 'new diplomacy,' a term which I have frequently seen used in the newspapers without, however, being able to comprehend exactly to what it applies."

The "new diplomacy" was McKinley's, which was copied by Chamberlain, while Dufferin's letter was an admirable example of the "old diplomacy."

Argue it out
Why did YOU quit Coffee?

It probably comes to every thoughtful person at times that there are plenty of common, mediocre people, and that if one determines to, he or she can press to the front, pass the crowd, and win position, fame and gold. It is largely a matter of determination and health. Many a determined character with brilliant possibilities, is held back by ill-health. Some find that bright, keen thoughts refuse to come to their brains, and wonder why.

The kind of brain work that makes successful professional men makes heavy draughts on the filling of the minute nerve cells of the body, said filling being composed of a grayish sort of material which must be replaced day by day, or the brain and other parts of the body will not act properly.

Coffee is a hidden but powerful enemy to one's progress in life. Its subtle, narcotic poison weakens heart, interferes with digestion, and has a definite and destructive effect on the nervous system. People who are content to load themselves with impediments to progress, who refuse to supply body with food and drink of the kind needed to make up for the daily disintegration of nerve and tissue, must stand aside in the race for preeminence.

The ones who are properly fed, will surely win the laurels.

Postum Food Coffee furnishes the gluten and phosphates of grain needed by nature to nourish brain and nerves with food. It does not narcotise and tear down. It is frequently misjudged on first trial, because of improper preparation, but it will be found to be a most delicious beverage if, after boiling commences, it be allowed to continue boiling for 15 minutes. This is necessary to extract the food value and flavor.

There are those who are entirely careless as to what goes into the stomach, but the one who would make all his movements tend towards health and possible greatness, cannot afford to risk adulterated food or drink or even coffee.

WHAT CAN RUSSIA DO? IS NOW THE QUESTION

The New Treaty Has Made the Crafty Miscovite Exceedingly Angry, and Reprisals May Naturally be Expected

New York, Feb. 19 — The Sun's St. Petersburg correspondent says: The more carefully the treaty between England and Japan is considered the more clearly must the world recognise the magnitude of its actual and prospective significance. It is no exaggeration to say that this international compact has revolutionized the situation in the Far East. This is true, whether we look at its effect on the contracting parties themselves, on Russia, which suffers by it, on China, its beneficiary, or on Powers less directly interested.

At a stroke the treaty relieves England from the isolation which, coupled with the absorption of her military resources in South Africa, has, for some time past, paralyzed her influence in China. Should her interests in that country now be threatened, she would be strong in the very particular where hitherto she has been weak, for through her alliance with Japan she would have at her disposal a land force superior in numbers, discipline, equipment and efficiency to any that a European opponent could array against her in the Far East. Equally patent is it that, through the alliance just concluded, Japan becomes mighty where she was but feeble, and no longer has anything to fear from the combined naval armaments of Russia and France. In a word, the land power of Japan and the sea power of Great Britain complement each other, and, together, constitute a whole which is locally irresistible.

Upon Russia's plan to acquire a monopoly of Manchuria, which, ultimately, must have led to dominance throughout Northern China, the treaty between Japan and Great Britain falls as an extinguisher. If Manchuria is to remain Chinese, the already partly constructed branch of the Siberian Railway will become valueless, as, traversing foreign territory, it could be obstructed at any hour. The hope, too, must be renounced of securing a naval station on the southeastern coast of Corea, and of thus controlling the direct maritime route between Vladivostock and Port Arthur, which, being thus condemned to segregation from each other will be comparatively useless. In fine, the secret purpose which has impelled Russia to expend vast sums of money upon the Siberian trunk line—the purpose of gaining preponderance on the west coast of the Pacific—is now nipped in the bud. So far as any forecast can be drawn from the new situation, Russia's dream of the conquest of Pekin is now as far from fulfilment as her dream of the conquest of Constantinople. So long as the present treaty between Japan and England shall hold good, it will seemingly be the destiny of China either to remain intact and independent, or become Japanese.

That the prestige of France and Germany has been relatively dimmed at Pekin by the treaty between Japan and England is too obvious to need demonstration. Of late each of those Powers has had great influence with the Chinese Court, because each was feared. Henceforth neither French nor German diplomacy will be able to exert any pressure upon China, backed as that country will feel herself to be in the last resort by the Japanese army and the British fleet. No doubt, France and Germany will be permitted, temporarily, at all events, to keep the small territorial accessions which they have won respectively in southwestern China and in Shantung; but not a step further can they now hope to go.

What counter-move can Russia make? Even if she could secure the co-operation of Germany as well as France, the combined naval strength of those three Powers would be inadequate to cope with that of their opponents in the waters of the Far East, because the Anglo-Japanese fleet, besides being at least equal in magnitude, would possess incomparably superior naval bases in the Japanese and Chinese harbors. To enter upon such a contest with any prospect of success Russia would need the help, not only of Germany and France, but also that of the United States, which would carry with it the invaluable naval bases in the Philippines. No help from the United States will be forthcoming for the purpose of disturbing a situation, which, as shaped by the new treaty, assures the "open door," and the preservation of China's territory from dismemberment.

Checkmated in the Far East, Russia can only seek elsewhere for a retrieval of her prestige, and she may now be strongly tempted to enter on a policy of revenge. England, which has blocked the czar's progress in Manchuria, as she has blocked it on the Bosphorus, is herself by no means proof against attack. She is vulnerable in India, in Egypt and in South Africa. It is by no means impossible that French and Russian fleets combined might contrive to disembark an army in Cape Colony; and, if this enterprise miscarried, it is atleast conceivable that a Russian land army might reach the Indus or the Nile. It may yet turn out that the Russian Bear cannot be worried with impunity, and that, if shut out from a coveted field, he may show his prowess in another direction. 'Tis an ill wind that blows nobody good, and it is possible that some of England's victims may profit by the stroke that has blasted Russian hopes in the Far East.

INDIANS BURY A BOY ALIVE IN ALASKA FOR DENOUNCING RIGHTS OF PAGANISM

Was Rescued but Afterwards Died—Lived Several Hours After Being Disinterred, but Finally Died

Seattle, Wash., Feb. 20. — The steamer Dirigo, which arrived from Alaska yesterday, brings news that Chilkoot Indians near Hina Mission, Alaska, on Feb. 6, buried alive one of their tribe, a boy 15 year of age.

The boy had been converted to Christianity by Milo A. Sellon, a Methodist missionary, and in a burst of religious zeal denounced the mummeries of the tribal icht, or medicine man. This act aroused the anger of the superstitious old men of the tribe. Recently fourteen native residents of the village of Klukwan died of consumption, and icht spread the belief that the boy, in league with the Evil One through his knowledge of the white man's religion, caused the deaths. The disappearance of the boy from school aroused the suspicions of Mr. Sellon, and he started in search of him. At the outskirts of the village he found tracks leading to a fresh grave. Digging down he found the boy still alive, his bloodshot eyes rolling in insane agony, his hair torn in handfuls from his head. His finger nails were torn off in his efforts to escape from his horrible prison. The boy was lifted from the grave and carried to the village, where he lived several hours, howling and crying out like a maniac, finally dying from the effects of suffering and fright. Icht, who is responsible for the crime, is Skun Doo, an old offender, who spent a term in San Quentin penitentiary for causing an old woman to be starved to death in 1894.

LONGS TO LIVE IN CANADA

Ex-Queen of Madagascar Tires of Gilded Captivity in Algeria.

Paris, Feb. 19.—Ranavalo, formerly queen of Madagascar, having tired of her gilded captivity in Algeria, has petitioned the government to allow her to settle in the United States or in Canada. She offers to take an oath never to attempt to return to her native island or to communicate with her former subjects in any manner. The French government has not yet replied to her.

The Strike Settled

The strike at the Cereal works has not been a serious or long-lived matter, and the working men can regard the settlement as a victory. A committee of the union waited on the employers and the matter fully discussed and a satisfactory adjustment arrived at. In an interview with a labor man yesterday we learned that the strike was off and that the men had got what they asked for and have returned to work.

CORONER' INQUEST ON DEATH OF J.F. PERRIN

Was Held Last Night in the Council Chamber---Three Witnesses Examined

REPORT OF THE POST MORTEM EXAMINATION.

Adjourned Until Monday Evening Next When More Witnesses Will be Examined.

The coroner's inquest to inquire into the facts surrounding the death of Mr. J. Fred Perrin, was resumed last night at 7.30. The jurymen were in their places, and after calling the court to order, the coroner called on Dr. Carmichael for the report of the post-mortem examination which is as follows:

Dr. Carmichael, sworn, said,—I am a practising physician in Peterborough, and with the assistance of Dr. McFaul, made a post-mortem examination on the body of the late James F. Perrin.

We, the undersigned formed a post-mortem on Mr. J. F. Perrin this morning, and found the following conditions:

Body well developed; left temporal and malar region contused. Ecchymosis in left upper eyelid; contusion mark on dorsal surface of left hand and left lumbar region; blood in right ear and nostrils. On removing scalp, found extravasation of blood over the frontal bone and left occipital bone; left temporal muscle contused; also contusion over frontal bone. On removing skull cap, found fracture in left temporal bone, which impinged on the brain substance, with considerable extravasation of blood between membranes covering brain; otherwise brain appeared healthy. On examination of chest, found 3rd and 4th ribs fractured. Also found left lung contused on outer and lower border. Heart and right lung appeared normal. On examination of the abdomen, found a large quantity of blood in the lower and left portion, which appeared to come from left kidney, which was found lacerated. Liver, stomach, and other organs appeared normal. On examining back over lumbar and lower part of the dorsal, found muscles greatly contused, with a large amount of extravasated blood, but found no fracture of the spine. On turning the body over, a large amount of blood flowed from mouth and nose.

W. A. McFAUL, M.D.
D. N. CARMICHAEL, M.D.

The fracture on the temple bone was enough to cause death. The lacerated kidney, and the blood lost, was enough to cause death. We are of the opinion that the brain and extravasation of the kidney was sufficient to cause death. The fall was the cause of death.

Dr. McFaul, sworn, said,—I assisted at the post-mortem, and have heard the reading of the report. I fully coincide with his statements.

Mr. William Redfern, sworn, said,—I am employed by the American Cereal Co. My duties are bell-signaller. I have to give notice on the bell to call engineer's attention to the raising and lowering of the hoist. I stand on the top of the building. I communicate with the engineer by means of a bell. The bell is within ten or twelve feet of the engineer. The hoist is attached to a pulley at top of building. One hoist raises as the other descends. They are run by a reversible engine. When a barrow is on the hoist and to be lowered, one ring starts engine. When one barrow is down the other is up. A ring of the bell signalls the engineer. I was at work when the accident happened. Duties of deceased were to take loaded barrow from hoist, and put on an empty barrow. Several men are employed in attending to hoist. Deceased took his barrow to its destination, and emptied it and returned to the hoist. When accident occurred, deceased was taking a loaded barrow from hoist. He stood on scaffold, and reached out to take a barrow from hoist. The elevator started to go down. The elevator goes down very quickly at times. When hoist went down deceased overbalanced and fell forward. I did not ring the bell. I have heard it stated that the bell did ring. The bell is rung by a wire which passes down the frame of the hoist to the bottom of the hoist. There is a wooden handle on the wire. There is a spring on the bell down below, but none above. I did not go down to see deceased after he fell. I could not see him from the time he fell until he was carried out to the ambulance. The elevator going down caused him to fall by being overbalanced. The men on the lower floor had no way of signalling engineer to raise hoist. I generally stood at post near top of hoist. The bell could be rung without my knowledge. The wire could be pulled from below without my knowledge. No person could have pulled wire from top of building without my knowledge. This could have been done from below. The hoist came up level with the floor. There was no adjustment to hold the hoist except the engine from below. The hoist was constructed without a lock, and the accident would not have happened had there been a lock. The hoist lowered suddenly without any notice. I saw hoist start and told deceased to keep back, and rang for hoist to be stopped. I went down and made enquiries. The first time I got no reply. The second time I was told that the bell had rung. On other occasions I had done this. This has occurred more than once. The bell was not protected and might be struck. Have pulled bell and it did not sound. Called to the men below to draw their attention. Spring of bell might have caught, or something caught wire, and that stopped the bell. I was working on the sixth storey. The floors are not in. No stairways are in position. As storey after storey is built, the bell rope is extended, and the handle moved up. The bell could be rung in many ways. Have noticed deceased at his work. He was a steady man. He was not as active on his feet as some men are. He had his feet on the floor and hands on the barrow when hoist went down. I do not know whether he had started to lift or not. He lost his balance. I have been on the works as bell-man about two months. Deceased worked there about the same time and was quite familiar with the work. Have acted as signal-man at a number of other places. The hoist is the kind usually used by builders. It was constructed in the usual manner as hoists are built for buildings. Hoist had descended about five or six feet when I signalled to stop. Deceased had not arrived with his barrow when the hoist arrived at top of building. I have complained a number of times about the hoist dropping without signal. The time of the accident, engineer said bell had rung. If I left hoist for any reason I would leave a man in charge. Deceased may have had his foot on hoist. The hoist is the usual style of hoist used. The signal is not the same as used in some places. A pipe and whistle is sometimes used. The lowest floor is laid with plank. The bell is protected from anything falling from above, and striking it. Bell is on under side of floor. A hole is bored through each floor, and wire passed down. The wire is not boxed in. Any person might pull the wire. There are occasions when men have saved themselves by stepping quickly back. This has occurred on four occasions. The men were John Fox, twice on Saturday; George Carr and Fred Lynch. One of the cases occurred on Monday last. I never notified the superintendent. Have complained to engineer. Have asked men below why hoist had started without bell being rung. Hoist went down on the day after the accident. Spoke to several of the bricklayers' helpers. Several men saw hoist go down on Saturday. Majority of the men knew that hoist would go down. I had warned all the men, including Perrin, to be careful in case hoist should go down. I could not swear to any particular time when I warned deceased. Have warned the men as a body. Warned them when an accident occurred. The men were under my control in so much as I could stop them taking a barrow from the hoist. I am not a foreman. I am just an employee. The foreman is Mr. Gaylor.

Charles Adams sworn said,—I am in charge of engine which runs hoist on building since about last week in December, about two months. Was in charge on Monday last. Heard of accident. The first I heard was a noise which I thought was a wheelbarrow falling. Hoist stopped near floor on which Mr. Perrin fell. The building is four stories high above this. Had got signal to start hoist but not to stop it. I stopped hoist when I heard the noise. The first I knew of it was when deceased struck floor above, saw him through a small space in the floor. I went to see him as soon as I could. Had to lock brake. Reached the floor by going up a ladder. Was not first one there. I believe Mr. John Murphy was the first man there. When I reached him he was insensible as far as I could see. He was bleeding some. Engine is about 12 to 15 feet from where hoist lands. Can see cage when it is down. After it passes below first floor it is in my sight. Lower cage was loaded when I got signal to start. Could see it being loaded. Do not know who loaded it at that time. Did not receive any signal to stop hoist. One bell starts the hoist, also stops the hoist when in motion. Three bells signal the cellar. Four bells denote that men are on the hoist. The men are safe then. Hoist is stopped by shutting off steam and tightening brake. When the cage is up and other down they are held by a brake. When I am doing anything around engine I fasten brake with a latch. I cannot account for the difference of opinion between Mr. Redfern and myself. I got signal to start hoist but not to stop. He complained to me before that I had started hoist without signal. I never start hoist without a signal. Could not see if any one interfered with wire above first floor. No one could pull wire below first floor without being seen by me. Above first floor they would have to walk on beams. Have discovered wrong signals before. Do not know where they came from. On one occasion I received first three bells then two bells then one, I done nothing. On another occasion I got a signal one bell followed by another a few seconds later. I held engine still. Do not know who was at signal. Mr. Redfern and myself are on good terms. Mr. Gaylord is foreman over me. The top of building can be reached by going up run ways. There are ladders also. Do not know if there were any men working between me and top of building. The only connection would be when men were working at scaffolding. A boy was in engine room when bell rang. A young man George Foster sitting on coal box heard bell ring. Do not know if boy heard bell.

There is one drum on the engine. The engine is reversible. Bell is about 6 feet above the ground floor. The bell wire is not protected. There are no warning notices. There are no watchmen on first and second floor. The wire is small, it is stove pipe wire. There is no protection. Bell is situated about 30 feet from me. There is some noise in the building. Mr. Redfern never complained that he rang when I had not heard it. There were no complaints. The only complaints he laid to me was that I started hoist before getting signal. I never spoke to Mr. Gaylor about it. Thought the man should look out for himself. Warned the man to be careful about his signal. He never complained to me that he signalled without getting a reply. I knew there was some danger in the hoist moving unexpectedly. I went on operating engine. Ice got in bit holes in the floors where the wire came through. This occurred once. The bell would not ring when pulled. The wire was not enclosed. There was no danger of not hearing the bell. I would not move machine until I received the signal. Do not Wealth's Millstones.

"Spring has came," mused Mr. Gotrichkwick, as he stood before the window with his hands thrust deep into his pockets.

"Aw, now, how kind you tell, pap?" gurgled his diamond-bedecked daughter.

"Because——," said the father, as he clinked the coins in his pocket, "because the snow has went."

"Stop that noise, Jimmie, or we will send you to bed." "Pa, you don't act like I was your real child at all; you act like I was jes' somebody else's of' orphan."

Hamlet's Island.

William E. Curtis has been visiting the island of Elsinore, the scene of the tragedy of Hamlet, which stands off the northern point of the Danish peninsula. He says that although the present castle of Kronberg was not built for five hundred years after the time of Hamlet, the numerous guides will point out the platform where Hamlet played before the king, and the rampart upon which the ghost walked. The fact that Ophelia does not appear in the account of the monk named Saxo-Grammaticus, who first told the story of Hamlet and from which Shakespeare took his plot, does not interfere with the imagination of the poets and guide-book writers. They point out the place in the moat of the old castle where she was drowned, and in the park there is a spring which is christened in her honor. Near by is another spring that bears the name of Hamlet, and in a beautiful sequestered dale is his burial place, marked by a cairn of stones, partially moss-covered, and a rude shaft of granite which bears the inscription, "Hamlet's Grav." It is the favorite joke of scoffers to ask the guides "where the grave used to be," because, according to traditions that are said to be well founded, it has occupied its present site less than a century, and was originally in the private grounds of a merchant at the other end of the town. This gentleman became so annoyed by the pilgrims who came to the place that he told the town council he would pay the entire expense of fixing up a more appropriate grave for Hamlet if they would designate a proper location in one of the parks. He did as he promised. The result has been satisfactory all around. He is not annoyed by sight-seers, and the present location is much more convenient to the public; but, upon the payment of an extra fee the guides will point out the original grave. However, Hamlet's tomb, Ophelia's drowning-place, the rampart where the ghost walked, and the grassy plain which Hamlet used as a stage for his celebrated outdoor performance, are a great attraction to tourists and support several hotels. They have brought much money to Elsinore, and public interest in them still continues. Notwithstanding the doubt that has been cast upon their authenticity, all of the great tragedians have been there, including Bernhardt, Irving, Forrest and Booth, and largely through contributions from the dramatic profession a statue has been erected by Nielsine Petersen, a Danish artist. Everything about the town is named after Hamlet or Ophelia, just as everything at Stratford-on-Avon is named after Shakespeare. There is a Hamlet bicycle and a Hamlet hotel, a Hamlet biscuit and a Hamlet cigar, Hamlet perfumery and Hamlet hams, Hamlet butter and Hamlet dressing-cases and traveling-bags. Ophelia does not fare so well, although there are several places named in her honor. The ghost has his promenade, but the king and queen are entirely ignored. They have a very bad reputation.

Dr. Varnedoe, a noted professor of Greek, is very fond of flowers, and some days ago, on returning from his college duties, he found in his front yard a pestiferous calf belonging to a neighbor. The doctor gave chase, and the animal plunged toward the flower-pit, and in another instant crashed through the glass cover and mixed at random with the pots and plants below. When another professor passed a few minutes later, he said, gravely: "I do not understand, Dr. Varnedoe, why you should object so seriously to having a modest cowslip added to your fine collection of plants." The doctor's frowning face relaxed. "Ah, Sanborn," he retorted, "you see, this was only a [illegible] bulrush."

Australia's Governor-General.

It is feared in some quarters that the Earl of Hopetoun will not be able to complete his term as Governor-General of Australia. His Lordship has never entirely shaken off the effects of the illness which prostrated him in India on his way out to Australia, and though he was really prominent as the host of the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall, he has since, owing to his unsatisfactory health, been unable to fulfil many of his public engagements.

The Historic Black Hole of Calcutta.

The historic site of the Calcutta Black Hole is being worthily dealt with by Lord Curzon. The ugly brick and plaster gate leading from Dalhousie Square into the Post-office precincts is, it is understood, being demolished. Immediately in front of the historical spot. A gate of light and elegant ironwork is being erected in its place. Immediately behind this gate, through which even when shut anyone can see, His Excellency has had the square site of the Black Hole paved with polished black marble, specially ordered from Italy. This space is surrounded by a low iron railing on a slight stone plinth. On the red brick wall of the Post-office building above there is an inscription, in gilt letters on black marble, visible from the street, describing the site and its restoration. Lord Curzon has had the entire outlines of the old Fort William—the bastions, the curtain, the gate, and the ravelin—marked out by brass lines let into a hard stone. At intervals white marble tablets affixed into the walls above inform the public what is commemorated, also to the building containing the still surviving brick arches of the famous old fort. Next winter, moreover, a new monument of white marble will be erected on the site of the old obelisk raised by Holwell, the survivor and historian of the Black Hole tragedy. Lord Curzon will rewrite the inscriptions upon it, inserting the many names of the victims that have recently been recovered, and omitting the somewhat truculent reference to the Nawab Surajud Dowlah, the author of the atrocity. Excavations have been made to see if there were any remains of the sufferers, but nothing has been discovered. By all this, by his magnificent scheme of the Victoria Memorial Hall at the base of the Ochterlony, and by his purchase of the Metcalfe Hall and its fine library, to which an imperial library is being added under an expert from the British Museum, the present Viceroy is doing a work too long neglected, and worthy of our Indian Empire. A special journal of the Victoria Memorial is to be brought out during the three or four years while it is being built, to bring in suggestions and help.

Domestic Ethics.

Fully realising how difficult it is for the ordinary man to manage even an ordinary wife, Max O'Rell comes forward with some carefully-considered advice. "If your wife loses her temper, keep cool as a cucumber and enjoy the scene. If you are jealous, do not let her see it, for it will make her proud. If she is late don't scold. Tell her it is much better to have her late than not at all. Next time go without her. The cure is infallible." On the virtue of industry M. Blouet is equally emphatic. His advice practically is to assume this virtue if you have it not. "If you have nothing to do," he writes, "tell her you have to be very busy all the morning, and 'will she be kind enough to see you are not disturbed?' Then lock the door, light a cigar, and take a paper or a book, and be fearfully busy all the time." Next in this charming code of ethics comes the advice to never remind your wife of a favor done, for gratitude, like love, is not to be had for the asking. Never ask your wife for the return of a loan. She would think it shabby of you. If she should return it (there are some extraordinary women), give it back to her in the shape of a jewel. This will cost you nothing, as you had made up your mind to the loss of that loan." A hint to notice a woman's new clothes, and to treat her with the same respect and politeness everywhere as accorded to any other lady acquaintance, is followed by a few emphatic remarks on the "ethics of deshabille." "Shame her by the irreproachableness of your own appearance" is the prescription for dealing with the woman who appears in curlers. "If she is intelligent she will take the hint at once. Let your neglige at home be as carefully put on as your best dress coat. Love feeds on even such trifles as these in the case of people of a refined and artistic temperament."

Oriental Compliments.

An amusing trait in human nature is the mutual contempt with which nations regard each other. It is a trait which can be traced back as far as history extends. The Greeks called the outside world barbarians; the Romans scoffed at the Greeks, and the Egyptians regarded other people as no better than slaves.

In our days the contempt we exhibit for Oriental nations is mild compared with their contempt for us. The Turks are but little behind the Chinese in this respect, their ordinary designation of a Christian being a "dog."

When the first Dutch ambassador was sent to the Porte, he visited the Sultan.

"What does the dog want?" asked the Sultan.

This was translated in a speech full of ornate Oriental compliments, and the ambassador replied in the same strain.

"Let the dog feed," answered the Sultan; "and when the dog is fed, kick the dog out."

The ambassador was delighted with the Sultan's compliments. The Sultan felt that he had held his own, and the treaty was signed next day.

Words Coined in Boston.

When Boston was three years old, the word "coasting," in the sense of sliding down an inclined plane, was used for the first time by the Court of Assistance. The term "lumber" appeared first in the town records in 1663, being employed to designate the embarrassment caused by the "lumbering" up of the streets at a time when the settlers were doing a great business in forest products. Schooner, sleigh, harness, phaeton, carry-all, barge, currency, tender, sinking-fund, depreciation, appreciation, caucus (1760), labor trust (1741), unconstitutionality, gerrymander, warden, unconstitutional, immigrant, and chrome, are all Yankee words that have been imitated.

Good Health

is doubtless the highest human good. It is especially so to women, to whom it means the preservation of beauty, happiness in the home, and the enjoyment of social duties. There can be no good health for any woman who suffers from womanly diseases. Her complexion fails. Her flesh loses its firmness. Her eyes are dull. She has no home happiness, no social enjoyment.

Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription cures the diseases which destroy the health. It establishes regularity, dries disagreeable drains, heals inflammation and ulceration, and cures female weakness. It gives good health to women, which means tranquil nerves, a good appetite and sound sleep.

"I was a great sufferer two years ago with female trouble and I wrote to you for advice," says Mrs. Mattie Hays, of Tribulation, McDonald Co., Missouri. "You outlined a course of treatment for me. I followed your directions, and now feel like a different person. I never expected to hear from you when I wrote to you. In three days after I commenced taking your medicines I began to feel better. I took twenty dollars' worth of the 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I bought it five dollars' worth at a time, and also four vials of Dr. Pierce's Pellets. I would not take one thousand dollars for the good the medicine has done me. I can't praise it enough. I wish all who suffer with such troubles would give Dr. Pierce's medicines a fair trial. I can work all day—doing anything, walk where I please, and feel good. Many thanks to you for your kind advice."

Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser, in paper covers, is sent free on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps to pay expense of customs and mailing only. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Not long ago a tourist in New Orleans went to see the statue of Andrew Jackson in that city, on the pedestal of which is inscribed, "United We Stand; Divided We Fall." Seeing an old colored man standing by, he asked, "Uncle, did that inscription stay there all during the Civil War?" "No, sah," responded the old uncle, "hit didn't stay dar endurin' de wah. In de fust place, dem letters was standin' out laik dey was plastered on. Den de wah bust loose, and de Confed'rate gin'ral down yere, he tuk a chisel and cut dem letters off smooth. The Origin of Whist.

THE following statement, culled from the current number of a magazine, is an egregious blunder:

"The originator of the game of whist is (sic) Edmond Hoyle (1672-1769)." Cotton writing in 1674 tells us that Whist was so well known at that time that "every Child almost of Eight Years old, hath a Competent Knowledge of the recreation." Hoyle was then not two years of age. But we must go a great deal farther back for the origin of the game, which is indeed lost in the obscurity of the centuries. Previous to 1526 the game of Triumph (whence trump), which embraced the essential features of Whist, had considerable vogue in England. It furnished Bishop Latimer with an illustration for a sermon preached at Christmas, 1529. Shakespeare's familiarity with the game is evident from Antony's address to Eros ("Antony and Cleopatra," Act IV., Scene XIV.)

The game acquired the name of Whist, or Whisk, in the forepart of the seventeenth century. Butler uses the present appellation in Hudibras (1663).

About 1728 a little circle of players, presided over by the then Lord Folkestone, was wont to meet in the Crown Coffee House. This was the inception of scientific Whist. Hoyle was probably a member of the coterie in question.

The publication of his treatise (1742-3) and his efforts as a professional teacher did much to establish the game in the favor of the upper classes of English society.

"What do you think of the movement for shorter honeymoons?" I asked my fellow-traveler, an experienced gentleman from Chicago. "That's right," he declared, without a pause. "Short honeymoons and more of them. That's my platform."—Ex.

It is related that once, when a captain in the army was cornered by the enemy, he addressed his men as follows: "My men, fight like demons until your powder gives out, then run. I'm a little lame, I'll start now."

An English rector on coming into a new parish, asked the clerk if there were any Puseyites (followers of Dr. Pusey, a high churchman) in the community. "No, sir," replied the clerk; "there used to be some, but for the last two years the boys have took all their eggs."

Mark Twain was recently chaffing Sir Wemyss Reid on the vagaries of English pronunciation. "You spell a name B-e-a-u-c-h-a-m-p, and pronounce it Marchbanks," he said. "And you do precisely the same thing," replied Sir Wemyss. "What do you mean?" asked Mark Twain. "Well, you spell your name C-l-e-m-e-n-s, and you pronounce it Twain."

An error of a new clerk in the mailing department of an English publishing house was responsible the other day for the mailing of a prospectus to a world-famous statesman, who had been dead for some years. The letter was returned a few days later, with the following endorsement: "In Heaven, ——, 1901. Gentlemen: As your publications are not permitted to circulate here, I believe it would be useless for me to subscribe for them. Yours respectfully," and here followed the name of the famous statesman.

When asked what he thought of a certain captain who frequented the Essex links, a Scotch caddie said: "Weel, sir, he's a verra nice gentleman an' a good gaufer, but he's awfu' nerra—awfu' nerra." "Narrow! What do you mean, Donald?" "Weel, sir, it wis this way. Efter the game was ower, and I had carried his clubs up tae the house, he says: 'Donald, will ye hae a draw?' and I said: 'I do be verra pleased,' so he gets the bottle, an' he pourin' awa' intae a glass, an' I wantin' tae be genteel, says: 'Stop! stop'—an' he stopped."

What to do with Jefferson Davis should he be captured, was a problem that puzzled Lincoln's Cabinet not a little. In speaking of it to General Grant one day, the President remarked: "There was once an Irishman who had signed the Father Mathew temperance pledge. Going into a saloon to get a glass of lemonade to quench his thirst, he leaned over and whispered to the barkeeper: 'And couldn't you put a little brandy in it unbeknownst to meself?' So," continued Mr. Lincoln, "let Davis escape all unbeknown to yourself if you can."

L. R. Stockwell, the popular actor, says that some years ago in San Francisco, when Peter Jackson, the colored pugilist, was a feature in a revival of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," "Bill" Nye was to have lectured at the Baldwin Theater, but was greeted by so small an audience that he excused himself and went over to hear Jackson talking of the pearly gates to Little Eva. After the performance Stockwell met Nye in the lobby of the theater, and he exclaimed: "Hello, Nye! What did you think of Peter?" "Well," responded the humorist, dryly, "anatomically he was great, but Uncle Tomically he is the worst I ever saw."

Anecdotal.

According to "Harper's Magazine," a certain teacher of English in a school of high rank in her native State, Mississippi, who, in spite of her vivacity in conversation, is perhaps, if anything, too fastidious in her choice of words, was spending the summer at the New York Chautauqua. Her flow of spirits made her the delight of the dining-table at which she was first seated, but at the end of a fortnight she was moved by her landlady to another place. A lady from Boston who had been sitting opposite the Southerner expressed her regret at the change. "I am so sorry you are going to leave us," she said, with warmth; "we have all enjoyed your dialect so much."

Mr. Baring Gould tells a story about the Vicar of Helland, Cornwall, and his neighbor, the Vicar of Blisland. The former was going to London, and hoped that the Archdeacon of Cornwall could be induced to take his service on the Sunday following so that he might stay away a few extra days. He left it to his neighbor at Blisland to negotiate the little arrangement, and asked to be informed how things went by telegram. All went well; and the Vicar of Blisland gave in a telegram at the nearest office: "The Archdeacon of Cornwall is going to Helland. You need not return." But when delivered in London the words were thus divided: "The Archdeacon of Cornwall is going to Hell; and you need not return."

A story of a "joke" played in Vienna on Mascagni, the composer, who is soon to visit the United States, is going the round of the newspapers in Italy, where it has created an extremely bad impression. The distinguished Italian was the guest of honor at a soiree given by the theatrical artists of the Austrian capital, and expressed regret that he was unable either to speak or understand German, whereupon an actor of comic parts arose and addressed him very solemnly, saying: "Most illustrious maestro, you have given to the world 'Cavalleria Rusticana,' which is a musical freak." At this point Mascagni also rose, and warmly shook the orator's hand. "You have no other talent than that of self-advertisement." Another effusion on the part of the composer. "In a word, you are merely a genial usage." Prolonged applause, at which Mascagni could scarcely master his emotion.

Adelina Patti is, as all the world knows, one of the most charitable women in the world, and nothing pleases her more than to do a good turn "on the quiet," as she herself laughingly puts it. Last winter she was staying for a few days in an isolated village at the extreme end of Yorkshire. To kill the monotony of the place, the great singer went one night to a concert got up in aid of a certain village institution. Not half the performers turned up. Seeing the difficulty in which the chairman and committee were placed, Madame Patti (incognito, of course) offered to oblige them with a song or two if they cared about it. After she had rendered, in her own glorious way, three of her sweetest ballads, the chairman approached her, and, in solemn tones, thanked her: "Well, Miss, you've done uncommon well; and, although 'Arry 'Ock, the juggler, who thinks nowt of takin' 'old of 'ot pokers and a-swallowin' needles, couldn't turn up, yet you've pleased us very considerable, Miss!"

Colonel Osio was the present King of Italy's "governor" for very many years, when, as Prince of Naples, his charge was a delicate lad. Colonel Osio's strict regime has been very severely criticised, but that the King remembers him with respect, if not with affection, is proved by his having conferred the hereditary title of count upon him on the occasion of the birth of the Princess Yolanda. One day a request came from a well-known personage for the young prince's autograph, to be added to a collection containing that of his grandfather and his father. The prince was about to comply, when the colonel said, sharply: "Certainly not; what value has the signature of an insignificant boy who does not even know how to write properly?" For some act of disobedience a little later the prince was brought before his "governor," who exclaimed: "If I were the King I would cut off your head." "And I will cut off yours when I am king," defiantly replied the lad. His punishment is unrecorded, but, instead of cutting off his tyrant's head when that day came, he has ennobled him.

During the famous Douglas and Lincoln debate and subsequent campaigns the point was frequently brought out by the supporters of "the Little Giant" that Mr. Lincoln had served only a single term in Congress, but that Senator Douglas had enjoyed for years a national reputation. This point, says a writer in "Lippincott's," was urged in a heated discussion between an ardent supporter of Douglas and a German voter who favored Lincoln. Finally the former, thinking to overwhelm his opponent, said: "Who is this Lincoln, anyhow? Nobody ever heard of him until Senator Douglas brought him into notice by holding a joint debate with him. Senator Douglas, on the other hand, is a great statesman. Why, he has had his eye on the Presidential chair for the last ten years!" "Vot is dot you say?" was the reply. "You say Meester Douglas have hat his eye on der resident chair for ten years?" "Yes, that is just what I said." "Vell, you shoost tell Meester Douglas if he vill keep his eye on dot chair shoost a leedle vile longer he vill see old Abe Lincoln sitting down in it." This closed the debate, amid a roar of laughter from the bystanders.

His Impression.

"Do you believe that college-bred women make good wives?"

"I don't think going to college makes the slightest difference," answered Mr. Meekton. "You couldn't keep a woman from assuming a position of superior knowledge by merely not sending her to school."—Washington "Star."

The Definition.

Teacher—Johnny, can you tell me what is meant by "steward?" Johnny—A steward is a man who doesn't mind his own business. Teacher—Where did you get that idea? Johnny—Well, I looked it up in the dictionary, and it said, "A man who attends to the affairs of others."—Cape "Register."

The newest floral wonder is the "Shasta daisy," originated by a flower-grower of California. It measures a foot in circumference, and, when one was exhibited recently in a florist's window in San Francisco, people literally flocked to see it. It is really a new kind of flower, and has been produced by several years of crossing and selection, three different kinds of daisies being used—the common American species, the larger and coarser European sort, and the Japanese daisy. There are three rows of petals of the purest white, and each blossom is upheld by a single strong and wiry stem which is nearly two feet long.

A Great Whispering Gallery.

With the increase of cable, telegraph and telephone communication, and especially with the introduction of the marvels of wireless telegraphy, the world has been converted into a huge whispering gallery.—"Herald," Sydney.

Artist—I guess I'll make it a half-nude. Model—Which shall I put on—my ball dress or my bathing suit?—"Town Topics."

A Pathetic Appeal.

THE following plea for judicial mercy, sent to "Law Notes" by a correspondent, will be found brimful of pathos: Ex parte Samuel Rice.

To the Hon. H. A. Sharpe, Judge of the City Court of Birmingham, in Equity: Your petitioner, Samuel Rice, of Mobile, Ala., would deferentially represent that on January 16, in the year of grace 1891, your honor dissolved the connubial ties theretofore existing between petitioner and his consort, Annie Rice, granting her a divorce a vinculo et matrimonii, with the beatific privilege thereunto annexed of marrying again, a privilege, it goes without saying, she availed herself of with an alacrity of spirit and a fastidious levity disdaining pursuit; but on this vital point your honor extended to petitioner only the charity of your silence.

Petitioner has found in his own experience a truthful exemplification of Holy Scripture, "that it is not well for man to be alone," and seeing an inviting opportunity to superbly ameliorate his forlorn condition, by a second nuptial venture, he finds himself circumvallated by an Ossa Pelion obstacle, which your honor alone has power to remove.

His days rapidly verging on the sere and yellow leaf, the fruits and flowers of love all going; the worm, the canker, and the grief in sight, with no one to love and none to caress him, petitioner feels an indescribable yearning, longing and heaving to plunge his adventurous prow once more into the vexed waters of the sea of Connubiality: Wherefore, other refuge having none, and wholly trusting to the tender benignity and sovereign discretion of your honor, petitioner humbly prays that in view of the accompanying fiats of a great cloud of reputable citizens, giving him a phenomenally good name and fair fame, you will have compassion on him, and relieve him of the hymeneal disability under which his existence has become a burden, by awarding him the like privilege of marrying again; thus granting him a happy issue out of the Red Sea of troubles into which a pitiless fate has whelmed him. For, comforting as the velvety touch of an angel's palm to the fever-racked brow, and soothing as the strains of an Aeolian harp when swept by the fingers of the nightwind, and dear as those ruddy drops that visit these sad hearts of ours, and sweet as sacramental wine to dying lips, it is when life's fitful fever is ebbing to its close to pillow one's aching head on some fond wifely bosom and breathe his life out gently there.

And in duty bound to attain the possibility of compassing such a measureless benediction, petitioner will pray without ceasing, in accents as loud and earnest as ever issued from celibatarian lips.

SAMUEL RICE, Petitioner.

A Familiar Odor.

Senator William E. Mason of Illinois is a good campaigner and a great stump speaker, relates the New York "Times." His wit and eloquence are not of the most refined order, but they are just the thing to catch a crowd. Mason is never at a loss for a retort, and enjoys being interrupted in a speech. During one of his campaigns he was getting his usual share of interruptions in a speech he was delivering. Mason was enjoying himself, and was making a great hit with the majority of the crowd. There was one man, however, who tangled Mason up somewhat. This man had imbibed more alcohol than was good for him. He was on the outskirts of the crowd, and he was asking Mason questions in a thick voice. The Senator could not catch the questions, and as he did not at first know what was the matter with the fellow, he stopped and attempted to catch the question each time. He always failed, and this led to several awkward pauses. At last Mason became irritated. The next time an interruption came from the intoxicated one, Mason asked:

"Who are you?"

"Don't you know me, Billy?" came the answer, in maudlin and swaying tones.

Mason paused. "My friend," said he, in a measured and metallic voice, "I don't recognize your face, but your breath is familiar."

An All-Around Hit.

A certain government officer was noted for being a hard taskmaster to those who were under him, the servants in his own establishment being no exception. His valet was expected to be on duty three hundred and sixty-five full days in the year.

Being detailed to accompany a scientific expedition on an extended cruise, the officer unbent a little in communicating the news to his personal attendant.

"Well, James," he said, "how would you like to go with me around the world?"

"Do we go from east to west, sir?" asked the valet.

"Yes."

"We lose a day in going that way, don't we?"

"We do."

"Well, sir, I'd like it first-rate. It would give me one day off."

Returned For the Pan.

Only the experienced and methodical housekeeper knows the agony of the woman whose maid forgets her tray while performing the ceremonious obligations of the house. That the importance of the tray is recognized in Milwaukee is evidenced by the relation, by the "Sentinel," of the horror which seized upon a fashionable mistress while listening to conversation in the hall.

The maid had just arrived, and had been solemnly instructed as to the necessity of carrying the silver card-tray when answering the door-bell. It was an "At Home" day, and the domestic, in immaculate cap and apron, rushed to the door at the first tinkle. The caller proved to be the most imposing representative of the very upper set.

"Sure, an' she's in," said Mary, affably, in answer to the usual enquiry, and started upstairs. Halfway up she turned and rushed madly back, snatched the card-tray from the table, and holding it out to the astonished visitor, exclaimed:

"And [illegible] I after forgettin' me [illegible]"

Schoolboy Humor.

Not the Less Sidesplitting From the Fact That it is Unconscious.

TO the majority of people, perhaps, a schoolmaster's life appears monotonous and uneventful, remarks "Chambers' Journal," but to one who is apt to look upon the humorous side of things this is far from being the fact. Most boys are careless, irresponsible creatures, certainly; but there is a fund of genuine, unadulterated humor in the average boy. A schoolmaster of fifteen years' standing writes: "I have corrected, I might say, a few thousand examination papers in my time. Some of the answers to questions set are wonderfully funny and original—unconsciously funny." The following are specimens:

A boy, aged ten, thus answers a question as to the cause of the Transvaal disturbances: "Krugger and Kannerbulism is one. He is a man of blud. Mr. Chamberling has wrote to him sayin' come out and fite or else give up the blud of the English you have took. he is a boardutchman and wickid heethin. lord Kitchener has sent for his goary blud and to bring back his scanderious hed ded or alive."

An essay on Gladstone by a boy of eleven states: "Mr. Gladstone lovd everybody. he lovd publicans and cinners and irishmen. he wanted the irish to come to England and have home rool, but Mr. Chamberlin says, no, no. so alars he got his blud up and killd Mr. Parnel. Mr. Gladstone died with great rispect and is buried in Westminster with pieceful ashes."

Rather ambiguous is this description of Queen Elizabeth by another boy: "Queen Elizabeth was a vurgin queen and she was never marrid. she was so fond of dresses that she was never seen without one on. she was beautefull and clever with a red hed and freckles."

The boy writer of the following is decidedly backward in his Tennyson. Concerning the late poet laureate he writes: "Tenyson wrote buteifull poims with long hair and studid so much that he sed mother will you call me airly dear? his most graitist poim is called the idle king. he was made a lord but he was a good man and wrote many hoods. he luvd our dear Queen so much that he made a poim to her called the fairy Queen."

Another boy wishes to become an editor. In an essay on "The Choice of a Profession," he gives his reasons in these words: "A editur is always a happy man because he can read luvly tales and artikels all day and pages of sweet luv poems. A good editur has branes, but it must be very sad for him having to read melankolie stories of luv so as to make him allmost weep with tears from his eyes. a editur is a rich man because he never pays for artikels and so has all this interiect for nothing."

One could hardly put the following ideas of a certain youth on "Honesty" to a practical use: "It is a nobel thing to be a honist man. If you are a honist man you can look the world in its face and never be ashamed of the devill. It is good to be honist when sum one is looking becaws you may get a reeward. I know a churchwarding who is a honist man who collects money on Sunday in his black clothes. if you are honist when you are young you may grow to be rich and the lord mare and then of caws it duan't matter."

This is from an essay on "My Hero:" "My hero is my father because he is a Christyun clergyman. my father says o my son gro up like your father and rispect yourself because nobody else will rispect you. I am goin' to be a clergyman because my father says I am a ass in school and have no branes to get a livin' in bisniss."

Shakespeare is hardly appreciated by the young hopeful who writes:—"Shakespeare was a famus poit and poachur. he wrote luvly plase called the tame shrew, hamblet and a scotch piece called Macdoogul. In Shakespeares time some of the plase were very rude but now everything is so polite that a innercent father can take his baby and it wont disgust it. Shakespeare was so ill when he died that he cried out oh my cursid bones."

One youth, who is a poet in embryo, is a great admirer of Longfellow. "Longfellow," he says, "wrote a grate poem called 'The brik.' he butefully poemises in this way—I stood on a brik at midnight and gazed at the clock for an hour."

A boy, mourning the loss of an uncle, writes the following letter to his master: "Dear Reverend Sir, I am injoying my holidays and have only been ill twice. my unkel died with being old in three days larst week, and we have had a plesant fewneral. I want to work in my arithmetic sir as you sed but it would be wicked if I did it with a ded unkel. my father says if I dont get a prise next term sumthing will happen—I am Your rispectabul pupil

"JOHN."

New Stories Are Scarce.

Tim Murphy, the actor, and Henry Watterson, the editor, met in the corridor of a Washington hotel the other day.

"What is your latest story?" the actor asked.

"No such thing as a new story now," growled Watterson. "It is impossible to keep a story good for two days. What's the use of thinking up new stories when they get spread all over the country between daylight and dawn? Why, sir, do you know that it is impossible to keep a good story as your own property. It's these blank telegraph operators who like good stories better than anybody. Suppose Chauncey Depew has a good story in New York. He tells it. Some telegraph operator hears it, and that night when things are quiet on the wire he asks the fellow at San Francisco or Denver or Timbuctoo if he has heard the latest, and then he ticks it off. Every man along the line hears it and ticks it off to the fellow he is working with, and by daylight the new story is the property of the wide, wide world. New story? Faugh!"

"William," said the lady of the house, "will you mail these invitations for me the first thing this morning?" "Going to give a party?" "I have engaged a new kitchen girl for the first of next week, and I thought I would show her that we start with no ill-feeling by giving a pink tea for her Monday afternoon."—Indianapolis "News."

Caressing in Public.

"THE woman who bestows her caresses in public," says Ella Wheeler Wilcox, in dealing with a letter from a husband who considers his wife too demonstrative, "is like the woman who wears diamonds at breakfast, or goes shopping in an evening gown. A demonstrative nature, coupled with loyalty, is a jewel of rarest price for a man to possess in a wife, but he wants it set in the gold of good sense, and clasped with good taste. I do not believe in a love which hides itself from all observers, nor do I approve of a love which displays itself to crowds in public places.

"I think when the heart is full of genuine emotion it must express itself at times in a look, a word, an act, irrespective of place or surroundings, which indicates the source from which it came. The man or woman who is always cold or indifferent to another before people cannot be an ardent or genuine lover in private. Something is lacking in the nature that never reveals itself in the least degree in the presence of a third party. But men are exceedingly sensitive to public opinion, in these matters particularly, and the wife who continually offends good taste and her husband in such a case must lack tact and refinement. It is a peculiar difference in the masculine and feminine mentality that a man resents having the public share in the least his domestic happiness, while a woman glories in it. The moment outsiders say, 'How in love with you she is!' a man's affection for a woman lessens; while a woman's increases when the world says, 'How he adores you!'"

Some Unique Advice.

In these nervous modern days, when "depression," "prostration," "melancholia," "rest-cure," and "Weir Mitchell" are household words in so many families, this concise bit of advice concerning depression and low spirits will interest many. It is from the letters of Sydney Smith, clergyman, social philosopher and wit:

"Foston, February 16, 1820.

"Dear Lady Georgiana—Nobody has suffered from low spirits more than I have done—so I feel for you.

"1st—Live as well as you dare.

"2nd—Go into the shower-bath with a small quantity of water at a temperature low enough to give you a slight sensation of cold, 75 degrees or 80 degrees.

"3rd—Amusing books.

"4th—Short views of human life—not further than dinner or tea.

"5th—Be as busy as you can.

"6th—See as much as you can of those friends who respect and like you.

"7th—And of those acquaintances who amuse you.

"8th—Make no secret of low spirits to your friends, but talk of them freely—they are always worse for dignified concealment.

"9th—Attend to the effects tea and coffee produce upon you.

"10th—Compare your lot with that of other people.

"11th—Don't expect too much from human life—a sorry business at the best.

"12th—Avoid poetry, dramatic representations (except comedy), music, serious novels, melancholy, sentimental people, and everything likely to excite feeling or emotion not ending in active benevolence.

"13th—Do good, and endeavor to please everybody of every degree.

"14th—Be as much as you can in the open air without fatigue.

"15th—Make the room where you commonly sit gay and pleasant.

"16th—Struggle by little and little against idleness.

"17th—Don't be too severe upon yourself, or underrate yourself, but do yourself justice.

"18th—Keep good blazing fires.

This mixture of gastric, psychic, social, hygienic, philosophic and religious advice is most striking.

Slips of Authors.

Even experienced writers sometimes make their characters do astounding things. When Anthony Trollope pictured Andy Scott as "coming whistling up the street with a cigar in his mouth" he proved that he had never made personal experiment of the double feat of smoking a cigar and whistling a tune. Robinson Crusoe also performed a most wonderful feat. When he decided to abandon the wreck and try to swim ashore he took the precaution to remove all his clothes, and yet by some strange magic, of which the secret has been lost, the author makes him, when in this condition of Nature, fill his pockets with biscuits.

The great Shakespeare had a trick of introducing the most glaring anachronisms. For instance, he makes a clock strike in ancient Rome at a time, more than a thousand years before clocks were invented, when such an event would certainly have been the eighth wonder of the world.

Quite regardless of the evidence of geography, he transports Bohemia to the seaside; and he introduces a printing-press long before the days of Gutenberg. He calmly introduces a billiard table into Cleopatra's palace, and makes cannon familiar to King John and his Barons.

Thackeray was no mean rival to Shakespeare in vagaries of this kind; but in his case they appear to have been the result of pure carelessness and forgetfulness. The most flagrant case, perhaps, is where, after burying Lady Kew and effectively dismissing her from the story, he brings her to life again to help him out with his plot; and in other cases his capacity for mixing up the names of his characters is confusing, considering the number he introduces.

Emile Zola, in spite of his carefulness, makes the astonishing statement in one of his novels ("Lourdes") that the deaf and dumb recovered their hearing and sight, an event which savors very much of the miraculous.

Teacher—If you can get a bun for a halfpenny, what can you get for a penny? Johnny (eagerly)—A tea-cake?—"Pick-Me-Up."

Curious Bit of News.

Dr. G. L. Johnson, whose studies of the eyes of mammals have recently been published, calls attention to the fact that men and monkeys alone possess parallel and convergent vision of the two eyes. On the other hand, the lower mammals possess divergent and consequently very widely extended vision. Squirrels, for instance, and probably hares and rabbits as well, are able to see an enemy approaching directly from behind without turning the head.

Don't Allow Operation for Cancer

There is a simpler, safer and more effective Method of Treatment.

Dr. J. C. Oliver, of Cincinnati, Ohio, U.S.A., in a paper he read before the Ohio State Medical Society, May 1896, said: "I have operated in a considerable number of cases of Cancer recently, and with one exception all have died within fourteen months after the operation."

This statement of a prominent Surgeon, should make any one suffering from cancer, hesitate before submitting to operation and consider carefully the evidence offered on behalf of the new Constitutional remedy, which cures Cancers, Tumors and all malignant growths, without the necessity of operation. It is a simple vegetable medicine that searches out and destroys the cancer growths, completely eradicates the disease, and at the same time, builds up and invigorates the system.

Stott & Jury, Bowmanville, Ont., will be pleased to send full particulars of this treatment, in a plain, sealed wrapper.

"The Something Just as Good"

Paine's Celery Compound

BEWARE OF DRUGGISTS WHO SELL IMITATIONS KNOWING THEM TO BE SUCH

The "Something Just As Good," which is a poor and worthless imitation of life-saving Paine's Celery Compound is foisted on many an unsuspecting buyer by dishonest and greedy druggists and dealers who have not the slightest interest in the welfare of the sick and afflicted. Their thoughts are wholly centred on extra large profits; it is a matter of indifference to them whether you or your friends live or die. We have recently come into possession of one of the imitations referred to; we have had it chemically examined, and find it unfit for human use.

The large majority of our druggists are honest and sympathetic men, and will never condescend to substitution or deception. You should, however, when anyone suggests the "Something Just As Good," or offers you a vile imitation for the Paine's Celery Compound which alone can meet your case, at once resent his impertinence and leave his store. All honest and straightforward druggists gladly recommend Paine's Celery Compound to their customers and speak with pleasure about the wonderful cures it has effected.

Beware of the "Something Just As Good," and all imitations. See that the name PAINE'S is on wrapper and bottle.

NEW DRILL SHED.

The Officers of the Regiment Here Have Made a Strong Application to Ottawa

The officers of the different corps comprising the Peterborough garrison have made a very strong application to the authorities at Ottawa, for a new drill shed and armouries to be built here.

There is nothing in the estimates already furnished to allow of the work being done but we understand the matter is receiving the attention of the government and it is possible that money will be voted at the present session of the house.

A new shed is very badly needed here as the one we have is very old and much too small for proper accommodation of the different regiments. A very strong effort is being put forth to have a new shed at once.

VACCINATION IN ENGLAND

Copy of a Proclamation Sent Here by Mr. J. J. Turner Sr.

Mr. J. J. Turner, sr. who is at present in England has sent us a copy of a small-pox proclamation, issued in the "Metropolitan Borough of Stepney." This paper states that nearly 400 cases of small-pox had occurred in that borough, and strongly urges people to be vaccinated. The following facts were quoted in support of the proclamation.

"Of the first 200 cases notified in this district, 43 of these were persons under 30 years of age, and though vaccinated in infancy, none of them had been re-vaccinated. Not one of them died. 77 were cases under 30 years of age and had never been vaccinated. 20 of these died—that is, at the rate of nearly 30 deaths for every 100 persons attacked.

"No one in this district has contracted smallpox that had been re-vaccinated during the previous ten years.

"All the bedding and clothes worn by persons that have had smallpox have to be handled and afterwards disinfected by men in the Council's employ. Though thousands of infected articles have passed through their hands, not one of them has had smallpox. They were all re-vaccinated at the outset of the epidemic."

"NIBBLERS."

Not the Proper Way To Take Food

Clerks in grocery stores are apt to nibble at this and that article of food, and if they are not careful acquire a "case of stomach." This was the case with L. Shoemaker, Artic, Ind.

"While I was clerking in a grocery store it was difficult to resist the temptation to eat a little of this and that; a bit of candy, some fruit and crackers, and one thing and another. After about a year I had serious stomach trouble and had run down to 91 pounds, was pale and sallow and poor as a snake. I could sleep but little at night and my distress was terrible.

Finally I was compelled to give up my position and take treatment for my health. I heard of Grape-Nuts Breakfast Food and began to use it regularly. I soon began to recover both health and strength, until at the end of about three months' steady use I was so fat and well that I was weighed and found I weighed 160 lbs., which was a gain of 69 pounds in that time. This may sound a little fishy but it is the plain truth and can be verified by anyone who cares to inquire of my friends who know the facts."

think it would be any advantage to have bell nearer. I heard bell ring once only at time of accident. After bell rang I started hoist. Fall would be almost instantaneous. Could not stop hoist instantaneously but can stop it in about four feet. Through a hole in first floor I saw man fall. He was injured before hoist stopped. Have been on this work about two months. Mr. Ulton was there before I came. The bell and wire are new. Engine is about fourteen horse power. The brake at the top would be merely to stop cage from falling should tackle break. It would have been of no use in this case as nothing broke. There is no brake put on to hold back on machinery. The brake would not be used to hold hoist back against engine. Could not say whether I saw body or cage first. The cage goes up about every 20 seconds. The time taken to reach top of building is about 10 seconds. Do not know how long a falling body would be in reaching floor. Cannot say when body started to fall. A barrow of mortar was on hoist. There was a shovel in it. The barrow had swung. He might have over balanced and came part way down with hoist and then fell from hoist. Can not say whether body or hoist reached the floor first. Have not been accustomed to running an elevator, but have been accustomed to running an engine. Have worked hoist before but not this kind. I have no engineers certificate. Have been at the work about two months. Applied for this job sometime before and did not get it. Cannot say I asked for a job running elevator. Can see bell from where I stand. No person can touch bell without being seen by me. Never reported to foreman that hoist was dangerous. Knew hoist had started when signaller said he had given no signal. A certificate is not necessary to a stationery engineer, to my knowledge.

George Carr, sworn said,—I am employed by Cereal Co. was working on top of building with barrow men taking off and putting on barrows. Was about four feet from Perrin when he fell. Deceased was wheeling brick and mortar same as the other men. Went to take off barrow when hoist dropped. Stooped over to take hold of barrow. Could not say whether he had hold of barrow or not. Hoist dropped and he went head first down well-hole. I saw Mr. Redfern. I did not hear bell. I often hear bell when I am at top of hoist. Did not hear it on that occasion. Hoist may have descended two or three feet before he fell. Was impossible for him to save himself. I saw him as he went down well-hole. Did not touch cage till it was near bottom. Am not sure if he struck cage. It went about as fast as he did. Do not think cage could travel as fast as falling body. I did not go down stairs to see body, some others went down. Could not say if I was nearest to well-hole or not. Bell man was close to hole. George Armour was also near. Well hole is about four or five feet across. I did not hear bell ring after Perrin fell. I was standing near hoist when it came to top floor. Mr. Perrin had just came back with barrow when hoist came up. Hoist stopped even with floor. Could not say how far deceased was from barrow. Hoist did not stay long at top. Deceased took two or three steps up to take barrow off after hoist stopped. Did not see him catch barrow. Hoist had just stopped when Perrin stepped up. Mr. Redfern was near hoist. He could not make any mistake. The well-hole is about four or five feet wide. Deceased did not make any attempt to catch cable when falling. Made no effort to save himself. Never thought it strange that he made no attempt to save himself. It seems strange to me now that he made no attempt to grasp cable. Hoist went down in front of me sometime ago when we were working about two stories below where we are at present. Men all knew hoist was dangerous. Mr. Redfern warned me. He warned all the men. He also warned Perrin. Did not hear any signal given to stop hoist. Hoist was only at top floor an instant when it went down again. Mr. Perrin brought an empty barrow which he left on the platform. He was stooping forward to take a loaded barrow. I told Redfern that hoist was not safe. I nearly fell but saved myself by falling back. I never spoke to Mr. Gaylor. I never tried to find out why hoist was lowered at that time. A man has to be smart to take off a barrow. The hoist runs every 20 seconds. If a man is not smart he might meet with a dozen accidents in a day.

Charles Adams recalled said,—The loaded barrow at foot of hoist would be put on before the hoist went up. All the usual work was done at foot of hoist before the machine was put in motion. The brake on the drum is held by the foot lever. It never slips. A little oil would not affect the grip as there is such a leverage.

The Court adjourned to meet again on Monday evening in the Council Chamber at 7.30, sharp.

Just a Cold in the Head!

But if followed by another cold, or some extra exposure, is liable to result in Nasal Catarrh. Unless a radical cure is obtained, the throat, bronchial tubes and finally the lungs become affected. Nothing cures colds so quickly and pleasantly as Catarrhozone. The Inspector of Mines for Nova Scotia, Mr. Neville, says, "Catarrhozone is the best remedy I have ever used. It cured me of catarrh of the head and throat, and I am pleased to recommend such a satisfactory remedy." Catarrhozone is a safeguard against colds, coughs, and catarrh. It can be used while at work, in the church, theatre, or street cars. Simply inhale Catarrhozone and it cures. Price, $1, small size 25c. Druggists or Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

THE WATER COMMISSIONERS

Water Rates will not be Changed—By-Law Fixing Regulations Etc. Adopted

At the last meeting of the Water Commissioners by-laws fixing rates and regulations were adopted. There will be practically no change in the rates, but the regulations have some new features.

The chairman was authorized to purchase the necessary books for the use of the collector. He was further authorized to obtain a bond from the Guarantee Co. for the collector.

Arrangements have been made whereby the town have the use of the yard and premises of the Water Works Co. on Hunter Street, for the present year. The Board also recommended that the map of the town prepared by Mr. C. H. Innes be purchased for the use of the town and the Board.

The meeting adjourned.

MAY EAT MEAT IN LENT

Catholic Workingmen's Cause Pleaded by Archbishop Ireland

New York, Feb. 19.—The United States now shares the privilege heretofore enjoyed only by Spain of being the only country where Catholics are accorded a special dispensation from Lenten abstinence. It is Archbishop Ireland who obtained this notable concession from the pope.

The archbishop relates that when walking to his home one day at the noon hour he observed a party of laborers who had been working at an excavation sitting on the sunny side of a fence eating their midday meal. They were Catholics; it was a fasting season and their repast was bread, with a little condiment.

Within an hour he had written to the pope petitioning him to relieve American workingmen of the Catholic faith from the law of the abstinence from meat during Lent and suggested that they might, as a compensation, abstain from intoxicating drinks during the same period.

In an autograph letter in reply Leo XIII congratulated Archbishop Ireland on his zealous interest in the working classes and granted the requested dispensation.

The Work is Better Done By DIAMOND DYES And at a Much Smaller Cost

Some people still cling to the old but now exploded idea that garments and wool and cotton fabrics can only be well dyed when they are sent to the regular dye-house in the city. Such people should at once give the Diamond Dyes a trial, and they will quickly find that these great home coloring agents give brighter and more enduring colors at one-fourth the cost charged by the dye-house.

Many letters have come from ladies testifying to the fact that Diamond Dyes have done work that the professional dyer failed to do in proper manner. Try one package of Diamond Dyes, observing the simple directions, and you will be surprised with the happy results.

Send your address to the Wells & Richardson Co., Limited, 200 Mountain St., Montreal, P.Q., and you will receive free of cost this season's new designs for the making up of handsome mats and rugs.

AFTER DUTCH EAST INDIES

Rumor That We Have Sounded Holland on the Subject

Birmingham, Feb. 19.—The London correspondent of the Birmingham Post says the belief is expressed in certain diplomatic quarters that the United States, through Stanford Newel, the American Minister at The Hague, recently sounded Holland as to her willingness to dispose of the Dutch East Indies.

ITEMS OF INTEREST

London, Feb. 19.—Lord Kitchener cables the War Office that Major Colenbrander met a party of natives under Chief Linchwe, 2,000 strong, marching in an endeavor to recapture stock that had been stolen the previous month by Commandant Kemp. As there were Boer women and children in the neighborhood, deplorable results might have occurred. Major Colenbrander ordered the natives to return, and they obeyed, much to the relief of the Boer families scattered in the district.

THE REMOUNT SCANDAL.

London, Feb. 19.— The War Secretary, Mr. Brodrick, replying to a question in the House of Commons to-day regarding the remount scandals, announced that Major-General Truman, Inspector-General of the Remount Establishment, had sent in his provisional resignation, but he would be allowed to retain his position pending the decision of the Court of Enquiry appointed to enquire into the charges brought against his department.

TELEGRAMS TO SEAT OF WAR.

Ottawa, Feb. 19.— The arrangement made with his Majesty's Government for the transmission of telegrams between troops in the field in South Africa, and their relatives in Canada, is still in force. The present rate is 40 cents per word.

CAPE COLONY FLOODED

Cape Town, Feb. 19. — Unprecedented floods have occurred in the south-western portion of Cape Colony, resulting in great destruction of houses, bridges, and railroad property. Twenty-five persons have been drowned.

TRYING TO SAVE KRITZINGER

London, Wednesday, Feb. 20.—The Brussels correspondent of the Chronicle telegraphs that the Belgian League of the Rights of Man has sent a message to President Roosevelt, referring to the executions in South Africa by the British of Commandants Lotter and Scheepers. The league expresses its fears that Commandant Kritzinger and other Boer leaders will be similarly executed, and prays that Mr. Roosevelt "in memory of Washington, intervene in a friendly manner to prevent their execution." The message concludes:—"For the love of God take this message into consideration!"

GENERAL KITCHENER'S DETAILS.

London, Feb. 19.— General Kitchener's details of the operations in South Africa during January are published today in the Official Gazette. Referring to the Zweifontein mishap, he says a Court of Enquiry was held on the affair, which, "in my opinion, was not satisfactorily covered by the explanations put forward. Considering the warnings this force received directing them to be on the alert, the preparations made by them to meet a night attack seem, so far as I can judge at present, to have been most defective."

De Wet rushed Col. Firman's camp at Zweifontein on the morning of Christmas, "climbing an almost perpendicular cliff," as the despatch put it. The losses to the British were over 200 in killed and wounded.

Berlin, Feb. 19.—Some new details of the fearful balloon journey which Captain Tarisch Von Siegfield recently made from Berlin to Antwerp, ending in his death, have been made known by his companion, Dr. Linke.

The distance, 400 miles, was made in five hours and thirteen minutes. It takes an express train fifteen hours to make the run by rail between the two cities.

The balloon attained the most terrific speed between Hildesheim and Wesel, going at the rate of 125 miles an hour.

The 165 miles after passing Wesel was covered in seventy-eight minutes. At one time the balloon was flying at the rate of sixty yards a second, about two miles a minute.

NORTH AMERICAN OIL & REFINING COMPANY'S

Stock and It Will Make You Rich

The company owns 2,080 acres of land located in the Newhall-Acton White Oil Fields of Los Angeles County, California. Our manager, Mr. J. H. Parker, writes us under date of Jan. 15th that they have opened up two oil wells near our property, one being a gusher of white oil just as clear as alcohol, and of 52 degrees gravity. This oil is worth and is selling at $4.00 per barrel at the well, and producing better than 50 barrels per day. Our derrick is up and the machinery purchased; we expect to be drilling in a very short time. We now offer to the public 100,000 shares of this meritorious company's stock at the low price of 10 cents per share, and it is worth a great deal more money at the present time with the showing we have in the property. The demand for this oil is far greater than the supply, which is not so of the black oils of Lower California and Beaumont, Texas, that are a drug upon the market.

Regarding the officers of the company, they are all men of honor and means. There are no salaries paid to any of the officers, not even our General Manager, until our company is put on a paying basis.

INCORPORATION.

The company is capitalized for 1,500,000 shares, the incorporation having been effected under the laws of Wyoming, stock being all common stock, issued absolutely fully paid and forever non-assessable. The incorporation laws of Wyoming are peculiarly favorable to oil enterprises, and the par value of the stock has been fixed at One Cent per share in order to avoid the excessive revenue tax paid on stocks of a high par value.

LIABILITIES.

The company has no debts; all stock is fully paid and non-assessable, there are no stockholders' liabilities, and we have no royalties to pay for any purpose.

OUR LANDS.

The company's lands have been carefully selected by their engineer, Mr. J. H. Parker, who is also Vice President and General Manager, in conjunction with four of the best oil experts, who are well known throughout the state. These experts each unbeknown to the other went over our vast territory to locate a site to sink our first well; their reports are on file in the Company's office, and we will be pleased to mail a copy of the same upon application, also maps of the oil lands with our property showing in the red. The directors call special attention to the maps, which have been drawn from actual surveys and personal inspection of the land and is accurate. The company's lands are distinctly shown as well as their relation to other oil lands and the location of oil wells, oil seepages and oil springs. A careful inspection of the map will aid prospective investors to judge of the oil under the company's lands.

The geological formation is perfect, the Anticlinal passing through the entire property and being unbroken by granite formations.

GUARANTEE.

The officers and directors of the company have such great faith in the proposition that they will redeem all stock sold for cash, providing they do not strike oil as designated.

TREASURY STOCK.

The company holds in the treasury over 500,000 shares of treasury stock and some money. The proceeds of sale from the 100,000 shares now offered to the public will be used for the purpose of sinking wells.

REGISTRATION.

The stock is registered with the Colorado Title & Trust Company of Colorado Springs, Colorado, which guarantees any over-issue of stock.

The company would like to employ a few good Fiscal Agents to handle any part of this 100,000 shares of stock, giving them a very liberal commission. We take pleasure in recommending this stock to the good people of Peterborough and vicinity at the very low price of 10 cents per share; considering the condition of the property the stock is worth more money than what we are asking for it.

RUSSIA IS DEFIANT WILL HOLD MANCHURIA

Is Prepared to Maintain Her Position in the East Ever at the Cost of War

WILL TAKE STEPS TO UPHOLD HER INTERESTS

Antagonism With England May Develop a Conflict—Foreign Office Makes Statement Regarding Veiled Threat

St. Petersburg, Feb. 20—Russia will not retreat from Manchuria nor hesitate to maintain her position in the orient because of the alliance of Great Britain with Japan. The leading officials in the czar's government discuss this sensational movement with an air of indifference and their language is diplomatic, but there is a veiled threat in their open assertions that Russia will not fail to take all the measures necessary to uphold her interests. Many well informed persons here hold the view that the antagonism between Russia and Great Britain may easily develop into a serious clash if not an open conflict.

An official of the foreign office has given out a statement regarding the Anglo-Japanese treaty that is likely to be accepted as the clever production of a sarcastic writer rather than the studied declaration of the czar's advisers and may be interpreted as a note of defiance.

This statement reads: "The English-Japanese say their convention has only essentially pacific aims. This makes it all the more astonishing when they speak of war and coalitions. What power they have in view we cannot say. But, in any case, if peace is menaced in the extreme orient Russia for her part will not fail to take all the measures necessary to safeguard her interests. All Russia's conventions with Japan have aimed at the preservation of the integrity of China and the independence of Corea, and it is true that Minister Kurino came to us immediately to communicate the text of the agreement and give the most amicable assurances.

"We have reason to believe it is not true that America, with which we remain in perfect accord, is a silent partner in the affair. We have given America positive assurances that Russia will do nothing which will disturb the interests of America in China. We do not believe America is anxious about the situation. Furthermore, we have received satisfactory assurance that America is not taking any steps against us in China."

Paris, Feb. 20—The Anglo-Japanese alliance continues to be the topic for considerable discussion in the French press. The concensus of opinion is that it is directed against Russia and that, therefore, it may lead to tension in the far east.

The Temps this evening says: "It accentuates the antagonism between Russia and England and almost converts it into a latent conflict. All those who had conceived a seductive idea of a closer understanding between Russia and Great Britain and the formation of a triple Anglo-Franco-Russia alliance deplore this result and ask if Japan's friendship was worth such a sacrifice of diplomatic system as was evoked by the Anglo-Japanese alliance. It calls for a complement, and that is the entry of the United States into the alliance. If the sympathies of the official world alone are necessary this will be quickly done. But it is necessary to reckon with the persistence and strength of the anti-British sentiment of the masses and also in spite of the progress of aggressive, conquering imperialism in the United States with the strength of the tradition of non-intervention, to which Washington, Jefferson, Monroe, Jackson, and Lincoln attached their names. Between a positive alliance and a benevolent, very benevolent, neutrality, there is as wide a gap as has separated for a century England's insular policy, from her contrasting policy of today."

THOUSANDS OF EMIGRANTS COMING TO CANADA.

These will Sail from Liverpool and Glasgow at the Rate of 4,000 a Month in April, May and June

London, Feb. 20.The Times outlines the details of a new plan to promote emigration in Western Canada, and three thousand people will leave Liverpool and Glasgow to settle in the Dominion next month, while more will follow in April, May and June, at the rate of four thousand a month. The Times explains that the plan was conceived four years ago. The Times estimates that it induced fifty thousand people to emigrate from the States. The English emigrants are to be personally conducted to the Dominion at a cost of forty dollars per head, and are to receive one hundred and sixty acres of land, and to be aided by a grant for expenses until properly settled. The Times dwells upon the benefits offered by the Dominion to settlers.

MUST PREPARE FOR AN ATTACK.

London, Feb. 20.—Referring to the United States Ship Subsidy bill, The Times editorially says: What our ship-owners have to do is to look carefully into our methods, and make the best defence they can against what would undoubtedly be a very serious attack. They may find some consolation in reflecting that should the attack come, it will not be directed against them alone, but will equally, perhaps even more severely, be felt by the subsidized mercantile marines of continental nations.

Able and progressive physicians and scientific food experts have tested Malt Breakfast Food in a variety of ways, and placed it far above all other preparations for the breakfast table. Users of oatmeal and starchy grain foods should reflect upon these truths. Your grocer sells Malt Breakfast

OPPOSES BOER OR ANY WAR

George Cadbury, Having Bought the London Daily News will Make It a Peace Paper

London, Feb 21.— George Cadbury, an extensive manufacturer of cocoa, having absorbed the whole proprietary interest in the Daily News for $375,000, purposes to continue to conduct it on anti-war lines.

Mr. Cadbury, as a Quaker, is opposed to all wars. He showed recently the consistency of his convictions in remarkable way by refusing to accept an order to manufacture chocolate for the troops.

He intends to exclude from his paper all accounts of horse racing and betting, but will report athletic contests.

He has established a model village in connection with his manufactory, run on entirely new and philanthropic lines. It has proved a great success, and undoubtedly his public courage in attempting to stem the war fever will be repaid by equal success before long.

Rich Gold Finds on African Coast

SCOTS GREYS CUT OFF AND SEVERELY MAULED.

Two Men Killed, Six Men and Two Officers Wounded, and 46 Troopers Captured

PRISONERS WERE SUBSEQUENTLY RELEASED.

General Gilbert Hamilton, Unable to Dislodge the Enemy from Their Position, Continued His March

London, Feb. 20.—A detachment of the Scots Greys, one of Great Britain's crack dragoon regiments, has been cut up by the Boers at Klipdam. Major C. W. M. Feilden and Captain E. Usher, were severely wounded, two men were killed, six were wounded and 46 captured. The news was received to-day from Lord Kitchener in a despatch dated from Pretoria February 19. The Scots Greys formed part of General Gilbert Hamilton's column. The latter, while moving on Nigel February 18, engaged a force of Boers at Klipdam. The Scots Greys became detached, were surrounded, and were cut off. Gen. Hamilton was unable to dislodge the Boers from their position, so he continued his march towards Nigel. The Boers released the Scots Greys, who had been made prisoners.

A SPLENDID SHEWING

Result of the Year's Operations of the Western Assurance Co

The statement presented at the annual meeting of the Western Assurance Company, is one that reflects the greatest credit on the management of that popular and progressive Company, Hon. George A. Cox, President of the Company, in his remarks, made it clear that the general trend of fire insurance rates was upward. While the advances which have generally been adopted by the companies have placed the business on a more satisfactory basis, the President is of the opinion that the rates are still inadequate for many classes of risk. The directors' report shows that while the Western Assurance Company suffered severely in common with other companies last year owing to the exceptionally heavy fire losses, still a handsome profit remains for the stockholders. The net premium income amounted to $2,281,639, an increase of 12 per cent, over 1900. This is due, however, to the higher rates obtained on risks rather than to any increase in the business assumed. The income of the Marine branch, although falling below 1900, shows a fair margin of profit. After providing for losses and expenses the revenue account shows a profit balance of $128,948. Two half-yearly dividends at the rate of 8 per cent, and 6 per cent, respectively, amounting to $120,812.34, were paid, and after meeting other expenses the sum of $47,760.00 has been added to the reserve fund.

The security which the company affords its policy-holders totals $3,656,653.16, made up of capital paid up, $1,940,270; calls in course of payment, $60,630; and reserve fund, $1,656,553.16. The financial summary shows that the fire and marine premiums amounted to $3,286,620.13; interest, $86,537.34, making a total of $3,370,157.27. The fire and marine losses amounted to $2,107,007.43, and general expenses $1,032,181.47, making a total of $3,139,188.90 leaving a balance of $130,968.37.

We congratulate the directors and Mr. J. J. Kenny, Managing Director, on the splendid results of the year's operations. The Company is so well and favorably known in Peterborough and throughout Eastern Ontario, where it does an enormous business, that the report will be read with much interest and satisfaction.

ITEMS OF INTEREST

London, Feb. 21.—The Admiralty naval estimates for 1902-3 show a total of $34,275,000, as compared with $34,875,000 last year.

There will be under construction April of this year thirteen new battleships, twenty-two armored cruisers, two second-class cruisers, ten torpedoboat destroyers, five torpedo boats, and eight minor craft, a total of 62 new vessels, or an additional navy as large as if not larger than Italy's present navy.

Lord Selborne, First Lord of the Admiralty, announces that a new type of torpedo-boat destroyer is contemplated, and that important developments are planned in the Executive and Works Departments. A committee will be appointed to consider the establishment of a Volunteer Naval Reserve.

London, Feb. 19.—The leaders of the Zionist movement anticipate important developments as a result of the visit of Dr. Theodore Herzl, of Vienna, founder of the Zionist movement and president of the Zionist Congress recently held at Basle, Switzerland, to Constantinople. Dr. Herzl was summoned to the Yildiz Palace by a special telegram from the Sultan, and the Zionist leader is now negotiating with the Sultan for the acquisition of concessions in Palestine permitting of the unimpeded immigration and settlement of Jews there. Dr. Herzl's demands include a charter granting some simple form of home-rule, and opening the Sultan's Crown lands to Jewish colonization. A representative of the Jewish Colonization Association, which was endowed by the late Baron Hirsch with a large sum of money, is also at Constantinople, which is taken to signify that the trustees of the Baron Hirsch fund are about to concentrate their resources upon Palestine.

BARCELONA BRISTLES WITH BAYONETS.

Barcelona, Feb. 19.—Two additional regiments of infantry arrived here to-day, and the city now bristles with bayonets. Troops are incessantly patrolling the streets, occasionally charging and dispersing mobs. Shots were exchanged in the Grand Via. The rioters erected barricades in one of the suburbs, and the troops carried them at the point of the bayonet. The casualty list is lengthened by every conflict. Industrial and commercial life in Barcelona is paralysed. No goods arrived here yesterday, and there is great scarcity of meat, bread, and other foodstuffs.

HARMSWORTH LEADS.

Paris, Feb. 17.—Alfred Harmsworth now holds the automobile tourist road record between Paris and Monte Carlo. He covered the distance in four days last week, never travelling more than seven hours in a day. He arrived at Monte Carlo in time to attend a prearranged big banquet, the London Daily Mail was giving to M. Santos-Dumont. It is rumored that M. Santos-Dumont has accepted Mr. Harmsworth's terms, and will appear in London in April under the auspices of The Daily Mail.

of this town, has received the following letter from his son, Alex. S. Inglis, of the Canadian South African Constabulary, dated Witpoortje, Jan. 1. He says:

"You will be surprised when you get this, but I suppose you will have seen an account of the affair in the papers ere now. I went out yesterday about a mile and a half from camp, with Corporal Sloan and a trooper named Midway. We saw four Boers approaching and we lay down and let them come up, when we fired and shot one dead. Then in less time than I can tell it we were surrounded by about 300 Boers. They shouted 'hands up,' but we said that we would die game. It was a foolish thing for us to do, as we had only 50 rounds of cartridges. We fired at them at about fifty yards distance, and had no cover at that. They had Mauser pistols, and Midway received a bullet in the face and another in the leg. Corporal Sloan was shot in the breast and in the neck. The Boers never quit firing, and we kept right on also. I had made up my mind not to quit or hold up my hands, when Sloan exclaimed, 'My God, Inglis, look at this right behind us!' They were coming on the full gallop. We turned on the newcomers and they retreated about 200 yards, but came up again and fought. By this time I had the fun of seeing three killed, and, as I thought, one wounded, but we were left without a shot or cartridge, so I laid my rifle down at my head and lay flat on the ground. The other two were shot all over by this time. My foot was touching Midway's head. I was so close to some of the Boers that I could almost have shaken hands with them and they could not hit me somehow.

"Well, after we stopped firing they kept at it for about five minutes. I felt lots of the bullets entering the ground under me; they would throw up the ground against my ribs. I began to think of my mother, and the next moment one of the Boers hit me on the head with his rifle. I got up and he grabbed my rifle, hat and shirt. When my shirt came off a lad about 16 years of age, not more than ten feet away, fired at me, the bullet entering my shoulder. It did not strike the bone, but tore all the flesh off. Then they took off my boots; my socks were knitted ones and in trying to pull them off they became fast on my heels and they dragged me over the rocks until they came off. They also took my pants, in the pockets of which I had twelve shillings. I stood in the hot sun for twenty minutes, the Boers in the meantime hitting me with their whips and butt ends of their rifles Growing weak from the loss of blood, I had to lie down, but they hit me over and over again until I was obliged to get up. By this time Corporal Sloan was dying, and to the last he kept crying 'Inglis, Inglis, Inglis!' My blood turned cold when a big fellow came up to me and told me they were going to shoot me. I saw them loading their rifles; two lads about 16 years of age were going to put an end to me. Just as I thought my last moment had come some men with long whiskers came up and told me to go to camp and send a doctor and ambulance. My feet were bleeding and my legs blistered and I could not run, do my very best. When I got a little piece away, they started to shoot at me, but did not hit me, though I would not have cared if they had, I was so far gone.

"We buried poor Sloan to-day. Midway is in the hospital, shot all to pieces; but I am here, thank God, with but one severe wound. Such was the ending of the year for me. I expect to be up again in about two weeks. I have to go to Pretoria to tell how the Boers ill-used Corporal Sloan before he died, both he and Midway being stripped and left naked in the hot sun.

"It surprises me how I have been cheered over and over again by other troops for not surrendering.

"'Canada for Ever,' was painted on my hat. I saw my pants go over the hill, tied by the braces to a Boer saddle.

"I must not forget to tell you that when I came in twenty men went out and were also trapped and stripped captain and all. Results yesterday: On our side, 2 dead and 7 wounded; Boers, 9 dead and 19 wounded. Captain shot three dead out of 8 that took him. Lightenberg was the Boer general."

BEAUTIFUL AMERICAN ESCAPES FROM HAREM

A Cincinnati Girl Has Wonderful Experience in the Shah's Palace

IN PERPETUAL FEAR OF DEATH

And Finally Makes Her Escape—She Was Secured With Other Beauties to Amuse the Shah

Paris, Feb. 20—Emily Barnaby, a Cincinnati girl, has just arrived here from Tabreez, Persia, after a most extraordinary adventure.

She was among a lot of beauties selected here two years ago by the shah for various offices at his court and sent ahead to Teheran under escort to await his pleasure.

Emily then was a destitute student of music and had applied to the recruiting Persian minister upon the advice of a friend, also an American, who had already accepted an engagement. Emily was duly presented to the shah, who gave a short, unintelligible order to his minister, and the latter told her she was engaged.

She left Paris three days later with nine other girls, mostly French, in charge of two old English shrews who have been long attached to the shah's household.

She remained at Teheran four months before she saw the sovereign. Then the two American girls were unexpectedly summoned at midnight and asked if they could entertain the shah, who was troubled with sleeplessness. The potentate was found in his bed surrounded by a crowd of attendants, among whom was a physician who spoke English. Emily's friend played the piano, while Emily sang and danced. The shah, at first languid, soon became interested.

The next day Emily alone was summoned. Before being introduced, she was dressed in oriental gauzes by the same two English shrews, who complimented her on the fact that the shah had taken a great fancy to her.

At the second interview the shah tried to express his fondness too warmly and Emily vigorously objected. When she finally broke down and cried the shah's anger was mollified and he ordered that she be taken to her apartment, after sending her a considerate message, accompanied with valuable presents.

Thereafter she saw the shah almost daily, being his favorite entertainer. She says she learned to like the shah well except when a tender fit seized him.

Finally the shah grew ugly because of the girl's steadfast refusal to become a member of the royal harem, and she, following the advice of a French physician, ran away from the palace. She hid in Teheran three days and then the physician's servant took her, disguised and veiled like an oriental woman, to Tabreez, where she lived secretly with kind French nuns.

Four months ago Emily married a French merchant, rich, handsome, and a Catholic convert. But the shah's emissaries finally locating her, she escaped, finding the country unsafe.

The young couple joined a Russian caravan, reached the Black sea, and sailed from Batoum for Marseilles aboard a Greek vessel, which stopped at Trebizond.

There Emily's husband went ashore, saying he would take just a short stroll. He never returned, and his wife does not know whether he was murdered or had deserted her. Being afraid to risk herself alone in a strange city, she continued her voyage and finally reached Paris.

She told the correspondent that she has most of her husband's wealth—jewels, quite a cargo of precious rugs and more than $1,000,000 in money.

She left to-day for Berlin to join some American relatives.

MORE TROOPS AT COLON

Government Troops Now Expected to Attack the Insurgents

Colon, Feb. 21.— The political situation here is quiet. The garrison here was increased yesterday by 500 men from Savanilla. It is now expected that the Government forces will go to attack the insurgent stronghold.

It is reported that the insurgent steamer Padilla is aground near Punta Chame.

The commission to take over the steamer Pinto, recently purchased by the Colombian Government, is proceeding south.

There is a lively speculation in building lots here. The boom is caused by the expectation that the United States will purchase the Panama Canal.

The Government has issued orders for the raising of the steamer Lautaro, which was sunk by the insurgents in the naval engagement in Panama Bay.

PROHIBITION CONVENTION HELD IN Y.M.C.A. HALL

Prohibition Question Discussed by Mr. G. W. Spence Organizer for the Alliance

MESSRS. JOHN GARVIN AND G. W. POWELL TO

Represent Peterborough at Convention in Toronto---Next Meeting to be Held on Thursday March 14th

The prohibition convention which was called by the executive of the Ontario Alliance opened yesterday afternoon in the Y.M.C.A. hall. Owing to the short time allowed for giving notice of the meeting the attendance was not very large. Very few people from the country were present.

Mr. John A Nicholls, provincial lecturer and organizer for the Alliance was present and delivered an address. The principal work done at the afternoon session was to appoint standing committees and to discuss at length the prohibitionary measure now before the Ontario Government. After lengthly discussion the meeting adjourned to meet at 8 o'clock in the evening.

EVENING SESSION

The evening session opened at 8 o'clock. Mr. H. P. Lindsay in the chair, A very good audience was present. The first business taken up was to appoint delegates to the convention to be held in Toronto at an early date. On motion Messrs. John Garvin and G. W. Powell were appointed delegates.

Delegates will be sent by the churches and different temperance societies in town

Mr. S. W. Spence, organizer of the Dominion Alliance, delivered a stirring address occupying over an hour, touching on the situation in the provinces of Manitoba, Ontario and Quebec, and the events leading up to the present outlook in our own Province.

We have a righteous cause, and though the struggle be a long one, yet we must eventually win; right will prevail. Though we might be discouraged at so many plebiscites, yet we stand where we are to-day as a result of those which have been submitted. The people of Manitoba had two plebiscites, both of which resulted in favor of prohibition. At the last general election in that province, the leaders of both parties promised it to the people. Hugh John Macdonald, who, is not a prohibitionist, but who accepted the mandate of the people, has enacted the law, and the Privy Council in Nov. last unanimously decided that the provincial legislature had power so to do, provided such legislation does not conflict with legislative measures in force. And it may be—we cannot say just here—that the province has power to prohibit the importation and manufacture.

Mr. Harriston, when the hotel-men waited on the Ross Government lately, said if enacted this law would ruin hotel keepers, but later in his speech said it did not amount to anything—it was supported chiefly by ministers, who had no knowledge of business, and were only of benefit to be called in when a person was dying. Then in support of his reasonings against prohibition he quoted some eminent theologists as opposed to it. The speaker suggested that this calling into play of these men was because he realized he had a "dying" cause.

The proposed act prohibitits the wholesale and retail sale of liquor as a beverage. Manufacturers could sell only to those having special authority to sell for other purposes.

The editorials appearing in the Toronto Globe of late came in for a share of the speaker's criticism, and he stated if the Globe fyles of a few years ago be turned up we will find the editorials in vigorous support of prohibition.

No act has ever been passed prohibiting a man from drinking intoxicating liquor. It may be a sin, but we can not make it a crime, so long as he injures no one but himself. We do not legislate for sin, but for crime. There is no law prohibiting a man from eating diseased mutton if he be fond of that particular kind of mutton, but there is a law prohibiting the offering it for sale. So, the law passed in Manitoba prohibits a man taking a friend into a club and giving him liquor; he may have it in his own house, and give it to his friends and guests, but if he abuse this privilege, then his house becomes in the eyes of the law, a public building.

There are only three ways of handling the liquor question—1st, the unlimited sale, without any license or stipulations, 2nd, the controlled sale, with high or low license, or under Government control, 3rd, the total prohibition of its sale.

Legislation is not made for private evils, but for the good of society as a whole. And every man who professes to advocate the license system is really a believer in prohibition. For if we have say 12 licensed liquor dealers in Peterborough, all other persons are prohibited from engaging in the business. All the prohibitionists ask is to put these 12 men on the same footing as the other citizens. During the era of the license system they have been the reapers and we the contributors—and now they ask for compensation.

In reference to Government control, advocated by many, he said if a church deacon were to engage in the sale of strong drink; if he were to establish his business in a palace and serve the stuff over a golden bar, in jewelled cups, on the authority of a license for which he paid a million dollars, it would blast a reputation, curse a home and sink its victims just as surely as if it were dealt out in a miserable hovel by a being of the lowest morals, and without the formality of a license.

Mr. Spence objected to such gentlemen as Prof. Grant of Queen's and the editor of Westminster setting up as leaders of the temperance people of Ontario. They will hold us away from that which we want, and from which, please God, we will have. He regretted that such good men were frequently found on the wrong side, and in this connection quoted an eminent relative to Sir Isaac Newton, whose grand system of astronomy has enabled scientists to to study the myriads of planets around us. Sir Isaac had doubtless a phenomenal brain, but when he wished to provide a means of passage to and from his study for his cat and kitten, he had a carpenter cut a large and a small hole in the door—one for the cat the other for the kitten. He was amazed to find, the first time the cat entered that she was followed by the kitten through the same hole. And if these men were as well acquainted with the liquor question as they are with some other matters we should find them taking a different stand on prohibition.

We were promised prohibition eight years ago by Sir Oliver Mowatt, later on by Mr. Hardy, and again by Mr. Ross. We have asked for no referendum. Sir Oliver had no thought of one when he said in 1894 that the expression of public opinion was sufficient to justify the Government in legislating to the full extent of its powers.

Mr. Ross had no mention of any referendum on the 12th and 26th of February last when he said the Government had not receded from the position formerly taken on the matter. Now he says that in places in the United States where prohibition has been put in the constitution, as two-thirds majority was necessary. Not so! And if we are given the same chance on which the present Government assumed control of the province, we will give the liquor traffic within our borders such a blow as it has never felt. In the last Ontario plebiscite, prohibition was carried in 71 constituencies out of a total of 98.

In Kansas, in 1880, at the presidential election, the electorate voted on this question; there were 91,874 votes for, and 84,037 against prohibition—yet it was put in the constitution, and is there to-day, with a majority of less than 8,000.

In Iowa, in 1882, the vote stood 155,436 for, and 125,677 against; later the measure was upset by the Supreme Court, because of a technicality in the preparation of the bill, three words having been left out by a clerk.

In Maine, in 1884, there were 70,783 votes for, and 23,811 against, while 47,819 did not vote at all. This goes to show the injustice of requiring a majority of the votes cast at a previous election. For it is evident that if men will not vote on this question when the ballott is in connection with state elections, they will not come out specially to cast their franchise.

Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Chamberlain were frequently quoted as being in favor of compensation to liquor men, if deprived of licenses. On the contrary, the only speech ever made by Mr. Gladstone on the matter was in the House of Commons in 1888, when a bill was before the House to set apart £440,000 for a special fund for the compensation of the liquor men. He then, at the second reading of the bill, denounced it in a round manner, terming it an "endowment of drink traffickers."

The license system does not give these men any vested rights. Licenses are granted for our benefit, and it does not follow that because they are granted special privileges for one year, they should have it the next.

In the elections in June, let us vote against the members who are now opposed to the amendments of the measure as it is now before the House. Let temperance people take a lesson from the victuallers, who vote for the man pledging himself to their interests.

On motion of Rev. Mr. Wilson and Mr. Northey a vote of thanks was tendered the speaker, who, in replying regretted the calling away of a splendid worker in former fights in Peterborough in the person of the late Dr. Fife. The convention adjourned, to meet again in the Y.M.C.A. building at 2 o'clock, p.m., on Thursday, March 13th.

Church congregations, temperance societies, and Young Peoples' Societies are requested to get to work in the matter and see that they are represented at the next meeting by one or more delegates.

Catarrh is a Germ Disease

Science, armed with the microscope, has established it a fact, and this conclusion renders obsolete the practice of treating asthma, catarrh and bronchitis by stomach drugging, sprays, snuffs, etc. Such treatments are an utter failure because they cannot penetrate the delicate air cells of the lungs, or permeate the air passages of the nose and bronchial tubes where the germs of catarrh have their stronghold. Catarrhozone is the only certain remedy. It is inhaled by the mouth, and after spreading through all the respiratory organs is exhaled through the nostrils. Catarrhozone kills the germs, heals the inflamed tissues, clears the head and throat in two minutes, and cures in a few hours. Nothing is so effective, pleasant and simple as Catarrhozone. Two months' treatment $1.00. Small size 25c. Druggists or N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

THE TIMES LETTER-BOX

Letters from the People on Interesting and Timely Topics.

A Contrast

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—That the Examiner does not take Mr. Ross's Referendum seriously is patent from the fact that on the very same day on which it was announced on the front page of that paper that the Premier had brought down his measure with due deliberation and solemnity, there was printed upon the back page of that journal a lightsome and frolicking story called "The Bartender's Button," in which the badge of the Bartenders' Union, a little blue button, is glorified as the symbol of joy in the human heart when thrilled with whiskey. The ditty itself is the work of an immature brain—probably one reduced to a blind state by a too free imbibing. That the Examiner should have introduced this in sympathy with the Prohibition movement is, of course, inconceivable, although it may be quite in sympathy with that journal's opinion of Prohibition. Whether Prohibition will prohibit or not, it can do no good to hold the outcome of the efforts of its supporters up to scorn and ridicule. No doubt, however, it will serve the purpose, if it is intended that this ballad of the bar shall be a sort of stage whisper on the side to the liquor men to inform them that "Coddie is their friend not short." But that such is the policy or intention of the editor of that journal is, as we have said, unthinkable, since it will turn the thoughts of many an otherwise moderate-minded man into gall and bitterness. I trust that the campaign before us, fraught as it will be with the destinies of Prohibition, will be fought without abuse, ridicule or recrimination. We owe this consideration to our prohibitionist friends, and I bespeak for them decent treatment and a fair hearing. A political meeting next June will be an interesting spectacle. We shall see politicians looking every way for a means of escape, and endeavoring to distract public attention by their attentions to each other. But not the least edifying part of the spectacle will be the efforts of pious frauds to stand in with both prohibitionists and party. We shall have specious excuses for lack of candour, and knowing looks instead of straightforward words. Wobblers and weak ones we have galore, and to the weak ones life will be one long worry till next June. After that they will take it easy (so as not to enhance the prohibition vote in October) while lending their countenances—to whichever side will borrow them.

It is to be hoped, further, that prohibitionists will present some sort of a requisition to their candidate, if they think of having one, so that those who will and those who will not sign may become known to the public at large. This will separate the sheep from the goats, as it were, and give the honest men of each side a chance to avoid becoming the dupes of mean and cowardly time servers. A drunken man is better than a hypocrite any day. Grits and Tories will die of inanition if prohibitionists hold meetings in churches and decline to discuss the issue. The unknown vote at the next election will be large or small, according as temperance men meet the craft of the government with equal astuteness and forbear to exercise their franchise, or flock to the poll to crush the men who sought to entrap them and to make them pay compensation afterwards.

If the government should be returned the debate in parliament on compensation, regarding which it has decided not to commit itself, may reasonably last for the next four years, by the end of which time something may turn up to relieve the distress.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your valuable space, I am, etc.

X. Y. Z.

Smith, Feb. 18.

To Crowd Him Out

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I understand an effort is being made by the local fish merchants to crowd out Mr. Wm. Taylor, who has a town license to sell fish from house to house. The plan is to hunt after Mr. Taylor's customers, chiefly amongst the hotel men, and offer to supply fish at a price that wipes out all profit. The idea is, of course, to put the price up after opposition is stamped out.

I will be much surprised if any of Mr. Taylor's customers are to be caught in such a way. It would be very foolish to encourage a monopoly, even in fish. My object in writing this letter is to warn the public against this new conspiracy.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I am, etc.

A HOTEL MAN

A Great Man and a Child.

In his reminiscences of Horace Greeley in the "Youth's Companion's" series of Recollections of Famous Editors, Noah Brooks says that Greeley could bear a great sorrow or a great disappointment with the fortitude of a stoic, but a trifling annoyance would provoke him to an outburst of wrath that was simply childish. The death of his little boy, his only and idolized son, was to him an awful blow. No man can know what agony the stricken father silently endured, his grief coining the drops of his heart's blood. But a typographical blunder, especially if it were in one of his own writings, drove him into spasms; then his maledictions on the offending typesetter and proofreader were something blood-curdling to hear.

One morning he went swiftly down to the "Tribune" office to find the compositor who had made a bad error in setting the types for one of his editorial articles in the paper. Bounding upstairs into the composing-room, with blue fire in his eyes and shaking the paper folded across the page to show the offence, he shrieked, "Show me the man! Show me the man that did this!" The error had already been made a topic of discussion in the office, and the culprit, a very old man who had been with Mr. Greeley on the "New Yorker" and on the "Tribune" ever after, came out from behind his case and tremulously pleaded guilty. The editor, standing there in the full height and strength of his manhood, looked down upon the little old man with a startled air, and then, turning away, invited anybody in the office to kick him (Greeley) downstairs.

Of his education, Mr. Greeley said it "was picked up by the way." It is natural that one who knew him should wonder what manner of man he might have been if he had been trained and disciplined in an institution of learning. He might have been a very much greater man, thinks Mr. Brooks; and then, too, his raw resources might not have been so strong and abundant under a scholastic rule.

When he was a lad of nine years he was offered free tuition in the academy at Exeter, New Hampshire. His parents declined the offer, partly through pride, Mr. Greeley thought, although nominally because his mother was unwilling to part with him at that tender age. Later in life, speaking of this failure to secure an academic course of instruction, he said: "I suppose I ought to be sorry, but I am not much."

Mr. Greeley affected contempt for college-educated men, and was accustomed to say, with great emphasis, "Of all cattle, the most useless in a newspaper office is a college-bred man!" This seemed to be an affectation intended to justify his own lack of scholarship, as if he were the shining example of what a great editor could be without special training. As a matter of fact, adds Mr. Brooks, during my term of service on the "Tribune" a majority of the men on the staff were college-bred men.

Some Epigrams on Growing Old.

Max O'Rell, in an article on "Old Women," says, among other things:

"A woman who knows how to grow old gracefully is a delight; but an old woman, whose wrinkled grimaces try to be inviting, voluptuous smiles, whose skeleton, loaded with diamonds, seems to crack as if on the point of crumbling to dust, who has a painted face, dyed hair, and false teeth—that woman makes me shudder; it is the most horrible sight in the world.

"For a man, love is an expectation at twenty, an irresistible desire at thirty, a habit at forty, an indiscretion or a hesitation at sixty, and a profanation at seventy. For a woman love is a dream at twenty, an experience at thirty, and a reminiscence after forty.

"Balzac, the greatest authority on love and women, and the most wonderful dissector of the human heart who ever lived, says that the best and most artistic effort of a clever and refined man is at fifty-two, and that a woman is perfect only at thirty-five. There is hope for some of us.

"Happy the woman who knows how to grow old! Happy her husband especially!

"I have heard it said that few women know how to get old. However true this may be, the old woman who believes that she is still attractive is much less ridiculous than the old man who believes that he is still irresistible."

The Considerate Dog.

A yellow dog who had bayed the moon ever since sunset was finally approached by a sedate old mastiff about 2 o'clock in the morning.

"See here, friend," said the mastiff, "will you be so good as to explain why it is you get so much comfort out of barking all night at the moon?"

"Well, it's this way," explained the yellow dog: "You see, I am afflicted with insomnia, and it takes an acute form which makes me feel obliged to bark at something; so I, being a considerate dog, bark at the moon, knowing that it cannot hear me. Therefore it is not annoyed in the least, and I am afforded much relief."

"So you are actuated purely by considerate motives and a sincere desire to spare anyone annoyance?"

"Just so!" and the yellow dog wagged his tail proudly.

"But did it never occur to you to consider your neighbors also?" demanded the mastiff.

The yellow dog was overwhelmed with confusion. He listened for a moment to the hitherto unnoticed profanity and tearing of hair that was going on all over the neighborhood. Then he tucked his tail beneath him and slunk under the house.

Moral: Before striking at an enemy be sure you have no friends within range.

Stuck to It.

In a school for colored children there was a little boy who would persist in saying "have went." The teacher kept him in one night and said: "Now, while I am out of the room you may write 'have gone' fifty times." When the teacher came back he looked at the boy's paper, and there was "have gone fifty times." On the other side was written: "I have went home."

In Two Minutes

There will be another car. But the man can't wait. He chases the car and swings on, panting and hot, but satisfied. He keeps this gait up all day. He works that way, he lunches that way. He continues this until his stomach "breaks down" and nature compels him to "go slow."

Business men who have impaired their digestion by hasty eating will find in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery a cure for dyspepsia and other diseases of the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition. It does not give mere temporary relief, but it effects a radical cure. It strengthens the stomach, nourishes the nerves and purifies the blood.

"For six long years I suffered with my liver, kidneys, and with indigestion, which baffled the best doctors in our country," writes E. L. Russell, Esq., of Woolsey, Prince William Co., Va. "I suffered with my stomach and back for a long time, and after taking a 'cart-load' of medicine from three doctors, I grew so bad I could hardly do a day's work. Would have death-like pains in the side, and blind spells, and thought life was hardly worth living. I began taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and 'Pleasant Pellets,' as advised. Before I had taken half of the second bottle I began to feel relieved. I got six bottles and used them, and am happy to say I owe my life to Dr. Pierce and his medicines."

Dr. Pierce's Pellets cure biliousness.

The Subtle American Joke.

An American once said to a German who claimed that he had the real New England sense of humor, "Did you ever hear the joke about the guide in Rome who showed some travelers two skulls of St. Paul, one as a boy, and the other as a man?" "No," said the German, beginning to anticipate a good story. "Tell me at once, mein friend, dat joke."

P. A. Minakoff has made an exhaustive study of the nails of the hand, some of the results of which he regards as of medico-legal importance. Among other things, he asserts that the nails of the right hand in a right-handed person are wider by from one-half to two millimetres than the corresponding nails on the left hand; while in left-handed persons the reverse obtains, and in the ambidextrous the nails are of equal size on the two hands. The thickness of the nails diminishes progressively from the thumb to the little finger.

Wealth's Milestones.

"Spring has came," mused Mr. Gotrichkwick, as he stood before the window with his hands thrust deep into his pockets.

"Aw, now, how kind you tell, pap?" gurgled his diamond-bedecked daughter.

"Because——," said the father, as he clinked the coins in his pocket, "because the snow has went."

"Stop that noise, Jimmie, or we will send you to bed." "Pa, you don't act like I was your real child at all; you act like I was jes' somebody else's orphan."

Australia's Governor-General.

It is feared in some quarters that the Earl of Hopetoun will not be able to complete his term as Governor-General of Australia. His Lordship has never entirely shaken off the effects of the illness which prostrated him in India on his way out to Australia, and though he was really prominent as the host of the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall, he has since, owing to his unsatisfactory health, been unable to fulfil many of his public engagements.

Strong words by a New York Specialist.—"After years of testing and comparison I have no hesitation in saying that Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart is the quickest, safest, and surest known to medical science. I use it in my own practice. It relieves the most acute forms of heart disease inside of thirty minutes and never fails."—32

A Spider's Genius

"I HAVE considerable respect for the female spider, notwithstanding the fact that she does not treat the male very considerately," says a correspondent. "I had an opportunity last summer to watch a large one that had a web in the top of a decaying peach tree close to the leaves that it was in plain view. I caught sight of her first when watching some birds with my glass. She seemed to be climbing from the top of the tree on nothing to a telephone wire some fifteen feet away and somewhat higher than her web. When she reached the wire she went around it and then back. In studying the situation, I found the web was so located that it required a cable to hold it up and the spider had in some way got one over the wire so far away. This cable was, of course, a slender silken thread which evidently she had thrown out, and on account of its lightness it had floated to the right place and become attached there by its glutinous properties. It seems remarkable that it should have adhered to the wire firmly enough to allow so large an insect to climb over it, which she did every day as long as I watched her, evidently to mend or strengthen it. The spider must have brains in which the ability to construct its web and adapt it to conditions is highly developed."

In an article in "Chambers' Journal" the following account of how the spider forms its silken threads is given:

"One of the most interesting features in the economy of spiders is their power of emitting slender threads of a silk-like substance called gossamer, with which most of them construct mesh-like nets, and a few long, dangling cables, by which they are buoyed through the air with nearly as much facility as though they had been furnished with wings. The apparatus provided by nature for elaborating and emitting this gossamer is a beautiful piece of mechanism. Within the animal there are several little bags or vesicles of a gummy matter; and these vesicles are connected with a circular orifice situated at the abdomen. Within this orifice are five little teats or spinnerets, through which the gossamer is drawn. It must not be concluded, however, that there is only one film of gossamer produced by each spinneret; the fact is, these teats are studded with thousands of minute tubes too small for the naked eye to perceive, and each of these emits a thread of inconceivable fineness. These minute tubes are known as spinnerules, and the films which proceed from them unite like so many strands of a rope to form the thread of gossamer by which a spider suspends itself. The finest thread which human mechanism can produce is like a ship's cable compared with the delicate films which flow from the spinnerules of the largest spider. The films are all distinctly separate on coming from the spinneret, but unite, not by any twisting process, but merely by their own glutinous or gummy nature. Thus the spinning apparatus of the disdained spider, when viewed by the eye of science, becomes one of the most wonderful pieces of animated mechanism known to man. The animal has great command over this apparatus, and can apply it at will as long as the receptacle within are replenished with the gummy fluid, but as soon as this gum is exhausted all its efforts to spin are fruitless, and it must wait till nature, by her inscrutable chemistry, has secreted it from the food which is devoured."—"Waverley Magazine."

Dr. Varnaloo, a noted professor of Greek, is very fond of flowers, and some days ago, on returning from his college duties, he found in his front yard a pestiferous calf belonging to a neighbor. The doctor gave chase, and the animal plunged toward the flower-pit, and in another instant crashed through the glass cover and mixed at random with the pots and plants below. When another professor passed a few minutes later, he said, gravely: "I do not understand, Dr. Varnaloo, why you should object so seriously to having a modest cowslip added to your fine collection of plants." The doctor's frowning face relaxed. "Ah, Sanborn," he retorted, "you see, this was only a [illegible]."

Not long ago a tourist in New Orleans went to see the statue of Andrew Jackson in that city, on the pedestal of which is inscribed, "United We Stand; Divided We Fall." Seeing an old colored man standing by, he asked, "Uncle, did that inscription stay there all during the Civil War?" "No, sah," responded the old uncle, "hit didn't stay dar endurin' de wah. In de fust place, dem letters was standin' out laik dey was plastered on. Den de wah bust loose, and de Confed'rate gin'ral down yere, he tuk a chisel and cut dem letters off smooth. Den ol' Gin'ral Butler, he come erlong wid his Union sojers, an' he tuk a chisel an' cut dem in deep, laik dey is now. An', Lordy, how de folks down yere did sw'ar when ol' Gin'ral Butler brush de dus' off'n his clothes an' git up frum his wu'k an' say, 'I'se a-gwine to hang de fus' Johnny Reb what cuts dem letters off [illegible].'"

PROBABLY no human invention has aided the course of justice to a greater extent, says London "Tit-Bits," than the snap-shot camera. It has been instrumental in condemning criminals, and has also been the means before now of saving innocent lives.

A case in point is that of Alfred Grayson, an Englishman who was living a few years ago at Rio de Janeiro. He was accused of the murder of a Brazilian named Linares, a clerk in the same office with himself. The two were known to have quarreled some days previous to the Sunday on which Linares met his death. Apparently, however, they had made up their difference, for they went out sailing that day on a small yacht which Grayson had hired.

In the evening Grayson brought the dead body of Linares home. His story was that the latter had fallen from the mast and fractured his skull. But medical evidence was of opinion the wound on the head had been made with a stick or oar. An oar was missing from the yacht's dingey. The mast-climbing story, too, sounded improbable, for the rigging was all worked from deck. Taking the recent quarrel into consideration, and Grayson's well-known violent temper, the case was black, indeed, against the Englishman. The coroner's jury had already found him guilty of murder, when a passenger on a Marseilles steamer, which had arrived in Rio on the Sunday afternoon, came forward with a new piece of evidence.

This was a snap-shot photograph taken as the vessel entered the harbor. Far away, under the cliffs, a tiny vessel was sailing, and against the white sail was a dark mark, which a powerful magnifier proved to be a falling man. By an almost miraculous coincidence the camera had been snapped just as Linares fell. The photograph turned the scale in Grayson's favor.

Almost equally curious is the way in which a photograph aided justice in the Cooper murder case. Cooper was assistant to a young blacksmith named McKenna in a Lanarkshire village. Both men were known to be fond of the same girl. One day Cooper was found dead on the floor of the smithy. He had been poisoned with carbolic acid. McKenna was suspected, but there was no proof whatever of his having ever bought or owned any carbolic acid, while Cooper was known to have purchased, as a toothache remedy, the phial found beside his dead body. "Death from misadventure" was the verdict.

Shortly afterwards McKenna was arrested. It appeared that an English tourist provided with a kodak had passed through the village on the very morning of the murder. Attracted by the quaintness of the old forge, he had taken several snap-shots of it. The photographer went on to stay in an out-of-the-way part of the Highlands, and did not hear of Cooper's death for some days. Then he hastened to develop his plates. Plain in one of the pictures were three bottles on a shelf. Two were beer bottles, the third was unmistakably one of those fluted blue glass bottles in which poisons are sold. It had also a label on it, and though the wording on this could not be read, yet on the strength of this evidence the police made a thorough search of McKenna's premises. They found the remains of the bottle in question in an old well, and proved that it had contained carbolic acid. Then McKenna confessed his guilt.

The more recent developments of scientific photography must make the criminal feel less secure than he used to. One of those thieves who make a living by van-robbing got an unpleasant shock one day in March last. He had safely got off with a tub of butter which he had stolen from the tail of a wagon as it was crossing a bridge in Rochester, N.Y. The deadly witness against him was a photograph taken by telephotography from the top of a neighboring high building.

A biograph picture of the Grand Trunk Railway bridge over the Niagara Gorge was recently taken, and, when developed, thrown upon the canvas at a music hall at Toronto. It was then noticed for the first time by the audience that a human body was tossing and spinning in the whirling waters. Search was at once made, and the body of a missing and much-advertised suicide was discovered, still caught in the furious suction of the whirlpool.

Hindu criminals succeed by long practice in forming a little bag in their throats into which they can guide jewels when they steal them. Last September a native was arrested for stealing a diamond worth 10,000 rupees from a jeweler's window in Calcutta. But as the evidence was only circumstantial, and possession unproved, he would have been liberated had it not occurred to the police to have an X-ray photograph taken of his throat. That showed the gem safely hidden in the little sac. The thief was sentenced to two years' imprisonment, but he still refuses to give up the diamond.

The Roentgen-ray photography has also been instrumental in adding several thousand pounds to the customs revenue of Buenos Ayres within the last year. Valuable jewelry on which no duty was being paid was known to be coming into the country in letters. It is, however, illegal to open letters or stamped packages, so the law-breakers were unchecked. At last, in June, 1900, several registered letters and packages were examined under X-rays in the presence of the Argentine Postmaster-General. Sixty-six suspected packages contained £4,000 worth of jewelry, and were, of course, all confiscated.

What She Said.

It wasn't a smoking compartment, but they were using it for that purpose all the same, and she was too modest to object. By and by the two men got into a discussion over the woman question, and at last one of them, an unregenerate bachelor, appealed to the lady thus:

"Do you think there will be men in heaven, miss?"

She blushed.

"No!" she said. "They will want to go somewhere where they can smoke."

The discussion stopped; so did the smoking.

To be acceptable to the aristocracy one must be an ass or a millionaire.

Curious Bit of News.

Dr. G. L. Johnson, whose studies of the eyes of mammals have recently been published, calls attention to the fact that men and monkeys alone possess parallel and convergent vision of the two eyes. On the other hand, the lower mammals possess divergent and consequently very widely extended vision. Squirrels, for instance, and probably hares and rabbits as well, are able to see an enemy approaching directly from behind without turning the head.

Curious Bits of News.

It is said that there is now little hope of discovering an unknown First Folio Shakespeare, as all the libraries of England have been ransacked. Nevertheless whenever a First Folio comes to the surface and is sold at auction the search begins anew. No wonder! The copy sold in London the other day brought $8,600.

A pension worth while is that to be enjoyed by J. A. Fillmore, who has resigned the position of manager of the Pacific system of the Southern Pacific Railway after almost a lifetime of meritorious service. He will be paid one thousand dollars a month till the end of the year and a pension of five hundred dollars a month thereafter as long as he lives.

Otani Kosui, a young Buddhist priest who is kinsman to the Mikado, is about to leave England, where he has been for some time past, and will come to America to still further study Christianity and Christian institutions. His family tree has traceable roots as far back as two thousand six hundred and fifty years ago, he represents the richest and most advanced sect in Japan and he will one day rule over thousands of temples in that country.

The captain of an ocean steamer is often warned of the proximity of icebergs by the men in the engine-room. When a ship enters water considerably colder than that through which it has been going its propeller runs faster, and as such water surrounds the vicinity of icebergs for many miles the engineers know that when the propeller's action is greatly accelerated without any increase of the steam power icebergs may be expected. Of course, the thermometer is the most useful indicator of icebergs.

A curious custom exists in the Prussian royal family of selecting every July a half dozen deserving young couples too poor to marry, and to have them wedded in the garrison church at Potsdam on the anniversary of the death of Queen Louise of Prussia. After the ceremony each bride receives a gift of a sum equivalent to about $115 and a handsome family Bible. The function took place, as usual, a short time ago, in the presence of Princess Margarethe, the eldest unmarried daughter of the Prussian royal family.

Some time ago the old trysting oak in Harthill Walk, so frequently mentioned in "Ivanhoe," was felled to the ground in order to preserve the trunk. The tree was one of the oldest in England, and is described by Scott as being venerable when siege was laid to the castle of Torquilstone. The tree stood on the estate of the Duke of Leeds, whose agent, Mr. Mosey, is devoted to Scott. By his instructions the tree was taken down, and the trunk will be preserved on the lawn in front of Mr. Mosey's house. A young oak tree is to be planted by the Duchess of Leeds on the site of the trysting tree.

The meaning of the word "humph" was recently the subject of judicial decision in the Irish Court of Appeal. Mr. Justice Madden and Mr. Justice Boyd held that "humph," as used by Sir Walter Scott and Miss Austen in their novels, was an expression of dissent, while the Lord Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Burton inclined to the conclusion that "humph" only meant a "dissatisfied condition of the mind." The Court of Appeal has now decided that the word is "an expression of doubt or dissatisfaction," or, as Lord Justice Walker put it, in the words of the "Century Dictionary," "a grunt of dissatisfaction."

The Sultan's decree that Turkish children shall not be educated in "the foreign way" any longer and that Turkish women shall not be allowed to have Christian companions has been received with different feelings, it is said. Several high officials are deeply displeased by the order, but one highly educated woman of rank, wife of a dignitary, is quoted as saying that her own experience had convinced her that it was much better to have no education than to learn what life might be, yet have to spend it in a harem. She had refused, therefore, to allow her own daughters to be educated as she had been, and regards the Sultan's decree as a wise one.

A curious phenomenon was observed at the village of Le Ghasil, in the French Alps, recently. One day, towards evening, the inhabitants were disturbed by a loud rumbling in the vicinity of Mont Farand which increased in intensity. Looking toward the scene of the disturbance, the villagers were further startled by seeing bright flashes of fire. At first the unusual spectacle was attributed to volcanic agencies, and a party of civil engineers set out to examine the cause of the phenomenon. They discovered that the intense dry heat had caused the chalk rocks on the summit of the mountain to crack and to break away in all directions. These rocks had descended the mountain like an avalanche, and being thickly veined with silex, in descending they had struck one another with terrific force, scattering brilliant showers of sparks in all directions, with such rapidity that they resembled one single sheet of flame.

Cheap Meals.

"About the cheapest restaurant I ever visited or read about," said a man lately returned from England, "was a dining saloon in the Whitechapel district of London, where a relishing and fairly substantial meal may be had for a halfpenny, or one cent in our money. This cheap repast is not served up in the shape of a cut from a joint and two vegetables. It is a big brown pie, very juicy and very hot. The absence of beefsteak is evident when you cut the pie, but you find inside a liberal sprinkling of sheep's liver, onions and turnips, and a plentiful supply of gravy. For a halfpenny extra two slices of bread and a cup of tea are supplied. Between the hours of twelve and two the poor and hungry from all parts of the East End of the city flock to the dining-room. Most of the patrons are shoeblacks, penny toy men, costermongers, and now and then young clerks whose salaries will not permit them to indulge in a more costly dinner."

It turns out that the late fire in the Sultan's palace was the result of a plot among the ladies of the harem. Too many wives can generally be depended on to make things warm for a man.—San Francisco "Bulletin."

The newest floral wonder is the "Shasta daisy," originated by a flower-grower of California. It measures a foot in circumference, and, when one was exhibited recently in a florist's window in San Francisco, people literally flocked to see it. It is really a new kind of flower, and has been produced by several years of crossing and selection, three different kinds of daisies being used—the common American species, the larger and coarser European sort, and the Japanese daisy. There are three rows of petals of the purest white, and each blossom is upheld by a single strong and wiry stem which is nearly two feet long.

A Day's Fishing.

THE fishing season having now positively begun, I think I will go down to the deep waters and try my luck. The great mistake made by so many fishermen is that they are lacking in the necessary patience for success in their hobby. Very often, after a man has sat for two or three days waiting in vain for a bite, he begins to feel the monotony a little tiring, and wants to throw up the whole enterprise. The enthusiastic angler, however, never allows himself to grow weary. He will wait three weeks for a bite, and when the exciting moment comes, he wrenches his prize out of the water and feels that he has not lived in vain. When you have once cast your bread (or whatever you are using for bait) upon the waters, you should be prepared to stand by and see the thing through if it takes all summer.

No angler expects to be landing fish all the time. As a matter of fact, the biggest fish are never completely landed at all. If you have ordinary luck you will land a few average-sized wrigglers, but you can't very well make them any bigger than they are, and your friends can size up their dimensions at a glance; whereas the fish that you hooked out of the water, but couldn't manage to finally land, grows every time you talk about it. This fish is well known to expert anglers. Its dimensions are only limited by the powers of imagination possessed by the operator. Most anglers will let it go with a weight of about twenty to thirty pounds avoirdupois; and the man who insists upon anything bigger than that must choose his audience very carefully in these knowing times. I have no sympathy with the man who hooks a fish that tries to wrestle him on to his back as it flies out of the water, or that aims crushing blows at his head with its off-side fin. And when that kind of man tells you that he fought three rounds with his prize in the endeavor to down it so that he could bring it away with him, you should not trust yourself to a comment on the narrative. That kind of man is wasting his talents on a modest job like angling. He ought to have been a political journalist.

When you have cast your line, you should sit by quietly and wait for the results. That delightful old prig, Izaak Walton, laid it down as a rule that anglers should avoid swearing, lest they be heard and catch no fish. It is not very clear to me why a man who has settled down by the water's edge for a day's fishing should want to swear. I don't see, in any of the hand-books on the craft, any hints that swearing has ever been considered half as useful as a wriggling worm for fishing purposes. As far as I can see, a man might stand by a stream and profane steadily for several hours without getting any more bites in consequence. If a fish will not bite at a tempting hook, I should doubt very much whether it will do so because somebody on the bank is referring to its ancestry in disrespectful terms, and is casting rather red aspersions on its moral character. The injunction as to swearing appears quite unnecessary, but dear old Izaak couldn't help preaching a little in between the bites.

After waiting a little while and looking at your float, you will probably see it begin to bob up and down. This either means that something is biting at the hook, or else that an empty sardine tin has got mixed up with your line. You must let the bobbing go on till the float is dragged under water, and then you pull in with both hands, and land the upper portion of a dilapidated boot which someone has left in the stream by an oversight. Fishing is called "the contemplative man's recreation," chiefly, I believe, on account of the very weird things that the average angler is called upon to contemplate in the course of a day's skirmish with the wonders of the deep.

Many anglers, however, do not recommend the practice of sitting down and fixing the eye on the bobbing float. After you have thrown out your line, you open the lunch basket and take out the first bottle. Then you light a pipe and take a glance or so at your float to make sure that it isn't bobbing. By that time you will be ready for the second bottle. When the second bottle has been properly and truly dealt with, the float will bob a good deal oftener than might be expected; but you don't need to take notice of low conduct like that. If a gentleman can't sit down by the water's edge and take a little light refreshment without being guyed by a mere decorative quill, it's hard luck, that's all.

By the time you have got on to the fourth bottle, you will begin to realize what a thoroughly enjoyable sport this angling business is. You will begin to wonder at first what bounder has been and thrown his line alongside yours, as there are two floats to be distinctly seen. You need not, however, bother about that. After all, you didn't come down to the water for what you could catch; but for the jolly sport of thing. Well, there's the fifth bottle ready anyway, and it's thirsty work looking on and waiting for a bite.

Of course, there are anglers who can be carried away by the sport so much as to follow a float with their eyes for a whole day, with scarcely a drop in between. These men will wade through two feet of water, and carry the spare worms in their mouths on the chance of hooking a wriggler that has been hovering about playfully for an hour or two. But this is not the weather for enthusiasm of any kind; and the only thing that you will find to admire in these rabid anglers is that their perspiring activity makes you feel so thirsty that the rest of the bottles can be opened in their right order without waiting. Some anglers reel up their line at the close of the day's sport and take it back home. But after a dozen bottles or so of the best, you won't want to be bothered with any dim nonsense of that kind. Just kick the whole kit into the water, and call for help to enable you to get home again without any [illegible]. Angling is a grand sport if you know how to take it.—"Pick-Me-Up."

The Real Difficulty.

Appy Tite—If we only had some lines, now, we might do a little fishin'.

Shady Rowers—Fishin', eh? Who's goin' ter dig de bait, bait de hooks, t'row in de lines, haul out de fish, and take 'em offen de hooks?

Appy Tite—Dat's so; we'd have to [illegible]

On the Right Way.

ALMOST every man who has been successful has written an article for some magazine on how he did it, or been interviewed by some newspaper, but all this information has been scattered carelessly abroad, so that just when we want to know what to do, or the right step to take, we cannot lay our hands on the particular species of advice which we remember to have read. The result is that we stumble along as best we can, and probably make the very mistake of our lives, all for want of knowing what Caleb Coupon did at this point.

The writer hopes herewith to supply this deficiency, as he has kept a record of the principal necessities laid down from time to time by great men who have given the results of their experience, and lays them before the reader, to follow closely and not shirk.

To begin with, you should select for a birthplace a dingy-looking little farmhouse, on the outskirts of a clearing. Log cabins have gone out of date. At one time they were quite fashionable, but something a trifle better is now demanded. As time goes on, who knows? Maybe some of our great men will be born in the "Ladies' Home Journal" three-thousand-dollar country houses. This, however, is a remote contingency.

Be good to your mother. While the other boys of the neighborhood are playing hockey, marbles and baseball, you will be doing chores around the house. This, however, does not imply a goodness in any other way. You will, of course, avoid going to Sunday-school, and when you are not sawing wood and laying the foundation of the wonderful constitution which is afterwards to carry you through life, you will be reading a few well-chosen books, such as the dictionary, the Bible, and one or two good comic papers. You will find the jokes useful later when you are called upon to make after-dinner speeches.

You can then take your choice of "struggling" through college or leaving the farm with a dollar in your pocket. Better leave college alone, however, as it teaches you a lot of superfluous things you may regret. Many a man who might have accumulated a large fortune has spoiled it all by going through college and learning to love other things more than money. The best plan is to come to New York with a dollar in your pocket. Go at once to the leading savings bank and deposit seventy-five cents. Live on the balance until you get work. As soon as you get work, save at least seventy-five per cent. of your wages, if you can; or, better still, ninety per cent. You will thus acquire habits of frugality, which will be a source of happiness to you throughout your whole life.

At the end of a few years you will have saved up a few thousands, and your success is now assured. Do not gamble. Robbing is not only safer and surer, but it is legal. Protected by the laws of your country, you can feel entirely safe. Reorganize a railroad, start a small trust, or get acquainted in Washington. When you get to be seventy you ought to be worth at least a hundred millions. You can then make a bluff at giving it all away, and be quoted as saying that it is wicked for a rich man to leave anything behind him.—Tom Masson.

Mr. Balfour on Illustration.

"There are books," said Mr. Arthur Balfour, at the dinner given to Sir John Tenniel in London the other evening "in which the text is a mere otiose and almost unnecessary appendage to the illustrations. There are other books, still larger in number, in which the illustration is an impertinent intrusion upon the attention of the reader, distracting his mind from the literary masterpiece with which he is concerned, and intruding alien and unsympathetic ideas to disturb the current of his thoughts. Those books are numerous. But there is a third class of book in which the illustration and the text are so intimately connected, in which the marriage between the two is so happy and so complete, that you cannot conceive the text adequately without the illustrations any more than you could conceive the illustrations unelucidated by the text. Our guest of this evening is one of the happy creators of this kind of illustration. There are books known to all of us in which it would be as impossible to forget the illustrator as it is impossible—and I hope it will be long impossible—to forget the author." Of course, the book was "Alice in Wonderland."

Stage Asides.

Fanny Kemble once gave a most amusing instance of the extent to which "stage whispering" may be carried on unknown to the audience. It was in a well-known theater, and "Romeo and Juliet" was the play.

Romeo was at the words (stage version, not Shakespeare's), "Quick let me snatch thee to thy Romeo's arms," when he pounced upon her, and lifting her up bodily staggered down the stage.

"Let me go," she whispered, "you've got me up horribly; let me down," but all in vain. The climax came at the passage, "Tear not my heart-strings thus; they break, they crack, Juliet" (still the stage version), when——

Juliet (to corpse)—Am I smothering you?

Corpse—Not at all; but could you, do you think, be so kind as to put my wig on again for me?—it is falling off.

Juliet (to corpse)—I am afraid I cannot; but I'll throw my muslin veil over it. You have broken the vial, have you?

Corpse—No, indeed.

Juliet—Where's the dagger?

Corpse—'Pon my soul, I don't know.

All these "asides" went on unknown to the audience in the very crisis of the tragedy.

Just Think of It!

In the last "Berichte," Nencki and Marchlewski describe the very interesting discovery of the close chemical relationship existing between the red coloring matter of the blood and the green chlorophyl of plants. Haematoporphyrin, a derivative of haemoglobin, and phylloyanin obtained from chlorophyl, both yield on reduction haemopyrrol, which is probably an isobutyl or methyl propyl pyrrol.

A Great Whispering Gallery.

With the increase of cable, telegraph and telephone communication, and especially with the introduction of the marvels of wireless telegraphy, the world has been converted into a huge whispering gallery.—"Herald," Sydney.

A MARVELLOUS MEDICINE

"No Cure, No Pay," is the Newest Proposal of the Proprietors of Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills

Editor Morning Times

Sir,—We make the following proposal to the readers of the Times: To any one who is a subject of rheumatism (no matter how long standing), or any blood disease, as enumerated below, and will give Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills a fair trial, and do not find a perfect cure, we will refund the money paid for the pills. If no substantial improvement is observed, we will in addition, pay $10 in cash on satisfactory evidence being supplied us to this effect.

We have yet to know of a single case where these wonderful pills have not been almost entirely successful in effecting a cure. CANADA CHEMICAL CO.

Ex-Ald. Bailey, St. John's, writes: I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills. They worked a miracle in my case, and cured me after many years of suffering. I do not think their equal is to be obtained.

Don't Allow Operation for Cancer

There is a simpler, safer and more effective Method of Treatment.

Dr. J. C. Oliver, of Cincinnati, Ohio, U.S.A., in a paper he read before the Ohio State Medical Society, May 1896, said: "I have operated in a considerable number of cases of Cancer recently, and with one exception all have died within fourteen months after the operation."

This statement of a prominent Surgeon, should make any one suffering from cancer, hesitate before submitting to operation and consider carefully the evidence offered on behalf of the new Constitutional remedy, which cures Cancers, Tumors and all malignant growths, without the necessity of operation. It is a simple vegetable medicine that searches out and destroys the cancer growths, completely eradicates the disease, and at the same time, builds up and invigorates the system.

Stott & Jury, Bowmanville, Ont., will be pleased to send full particulars of this treatment, in a plain, sealed wrapper.

A Dubious Forecast

"What do you think the weather will be next month?" wrote a subscriber to the Horse editor of this g. f.j., and the editor replied, "I think it will be very much like your subscription." The subscriber happened to think of the word "unsettled," and sent in the amount next day.

A Deplorable Case

Yesterday Mr. George Cochrane, agent and Mr. Wm. Henry, caretaker of the Children's Shelter visited a place in Belmont township, where they found a most deplorable state of affairs. The name of the people is Storms. On entering the house which was nothing more than an old log shanty 8 by 10 feet in size a most depressing scene met their eyes. In one corner of place a few rough boards were fastened to the wall and this formed the bed. Two sticks were driven into the wall and a rough board laid across them formed a table. An old stove in a very dilapidated condition heated the place. The room was most filthy and the two children aged 3 and 6 years were black with dirt. The father and mother were in a similar condition. Besides being a dwelling house it was also a sort of stable, a sheep two cats and a dog were in the place. The children were brought to the Children's Shelter, where they will be looked after until such time as a respectable home can be found for them.

Valuable Advice to Rheumatics

Eat meat sparingly, and take very little sugar. Avoid damp feet, drink water abundantly, and always rely on Polson's Nerviline as an absolute reliever of rheumatic pains. Being five times stronger than other remedies, its power over pain is simply beyond belief. Buy a large 25c bottle to-day and test it, and see if this is not so. Polson's Nerviline always cures rheumatism.

New Market Wins from Hamilton

At the Mutual street rink, Toronto, last night, Newmarket won out from Hamilton in a hard fought battle by a score of 6 to 5 goals. This leaves Newmarket to play of with Peterboro to-night, and no doubt one of the fastest and hardest contested games of hockey, of the season, will be witnessed at the Charlotte street rink. "Beef" Brundrette, a former Peterborough boy, who played goal for the Colts last year, is playing with Newmarket, and will be here with them to-night.

U. C. C. defeated Belleville in the junior series, at the Mutual street rink, Toronto, last night, by a score of 14 to 7.

VALUE OF WARM BREAKFAST BEVERAGE

Explanation by Physician

The high grade physician always stands ready to guide one's habits and prevent disease, even if by that means, he loses many a fee.

Food and drink are important factors relating to health.

Dr. Wm. R. Blackwood, 662 N. 23rd St., Philadelphia, Pa., writes on the subject and remarks about the need of some warm drink for breakfast, but deprecates the use of coffee because of its effect on the health. He refers to the fact that the heat of a warm breakfast beverage is important in causing the necessary alvine evacuation which should invariably follow breakfast.

"Personally, I had been quite nervous from overwork for a time and neither coffee nor tea seemed to agree with me, consequently I looked around for some other pleasant breakfast beverage, for a long time without success, until I got hold of the article under consideration (Postum).

This proved pleasing to the taste and was also very strengthening. Its flavor was so clearly that of really good coffee as to completely take its place after beginning its habitual use. I attach much importance to the word 'habitual,' for if you desire to have all of the benefits centred in this article you must stick to it right along. I have proved to my own satisfaction that Postum is all right if persevered in.

Some of my acquaintances and patients have taken up Postum and after a first trial abandoned its use, then some have afterward formed the habit of drinking it when shown how really simple the preparation is which results in a fine cup of Postum containing nutritive elements."

The Doctor mentions, in confidence, two cases of severe prostration from alcoholism which were ultimately cured and the patients restored to health through his treatment and taking away all whiskey, coffee and tea, and giving them in place Postum Food Coffee.

The Doctor concludes his letter with this statement, "Believing that a letter from a physician, who has studied dietetics many years in different climates and among different races, would be of some value, I write to do what I can to further the use of this efficient product, which surely must be of great advantage to invalids as well as to the general community."

Western Assurance Co.

The annual meeting of shareholders was held at the company's offices, Toronto, on Wednesday, 19th February, 1902. The President, Hon. Geo. A. Cox, occupied the chair.

The following annual report of the Directors, with accompanying Financial Statement, was then read by the secretary:—

FIFTY-FIRST ANNUAL REPORT

The directors have pleasure in submitting to the shareholders their report on the transactions of the company for the past year.

The net premium income amounted to $3,292,629, and the earnings from interest were $86,527. After providing for losses and expenses the Revenue account shows a profit balance of $189,048. Of this amount $129,613.84 has been applied to the payment of two half-yearly dividends at the rate of 6 per cent. and 6 per cent. per annum, respectively, and after writing off the sum of $11,675.45 to bring the securities to market value at 31st December, the balance, $47,759.08, is added to the Reserve Fund. The reduction in dividend for the last half-year was decided upon in order to permit of a more substantial addition to the Company's Reserve than could otherwise have been made, as the profits of the Fire Branch were materially affected by the exceptionally heavy losses in the early part of the year, including the conflagration in Montreal in January, 1901. The Marine income was somewhat less than that of the year 1900, but the business of this branch shows a fair margin of profit, after providing for losses and the proportion of expenses chargeable against it.

The estimated liability on unexpired risks at 31st December, calculated at 35 per cent. of the year's Fire Premium, with full provision for all unexpired Marine risks, is $969,210. It should be noted that, although an increase is shown of some 12 per cent. in the premium income compared with that of the preceding year, there is not a corresponding increase in the actual liability, or amount at risk, owing to the advanced rates that have been obtained on a large proportion of the business on the company's books.

The Directors regret to have to record the death during the year of Mr. Robert Beaty, who had been a valued member of the Board for the past thirty-six years, and a shareholder of the Company since its organization.

Two calls of $100,000 each of the $1,000,000 additional capital which has been called up had not matured at the close of the year, but owing to the majority of the shareholders having availed themselves of the privilege of anticipating these payments, there remained on the 31st December less than $60,000 of this amount unpaid.

The security which the Company now affords its policy-holders is as follows:

Capital paid-up 31st December last	$1,940,370 00
Calls in course of payment	59,630 00
	$2,000,000 00
Reserve fund	1,050,553 16
Total funds	$3,050,553 16

Summary of Financial Statement

The accounts for the year showed the following business transacted:

Fire & Marine premiums		$3,292,629 73
Interest		86,527 54
		$3,379,157 27
Fire & marine losses	$2,167,007 43
General expenses	$1,023,101 47
		$3,190,108 90
Balance		$189,048 37
Dividend to shareholders		129,613 84

The President, in moving the adoption of the Report, said:—

The statements that have just been read, which, with the Directors' Report, have been in the hands of the shareholders for some days, indicate, I think, very clearly the general results of the business of the Company for the past year, but in moving the adoption of the Report, I am glad to avail myself of the opportunity of enlarging somewhat upon the matters with which it deals.

You will have noted that there has been a considerable increase in the Company's premium income, and perhaps the most encouraging feature in connection with the transactions of the year is the evidence which our records afford that the growth in this is due as much to the higher rates obtained on the risks we have been carrying as to an increase in the amount of the business we have assumed. It will also be observed that, after deducting from the balance shown in the Revenue Account the amount received from interest on investments, there remains $102,521, which represents the difference between the premium receipts and the losses and expenses for the year—or what may be termed the "underwriting profit." Taking into account the volume of business transacted, it must be admitted that this balance on the underwriting transactions of the year is a very moderate one, being equal to about 3 per cent. on the premium income—which would scarcely be regarded as an adequate return in any ordinary business. It is true that out of the year's receipts some conflagration losses of considerable magnitude had to be provided for. Such disasters we have regarded in the past as rare occurrences, or at least as events which warranted our treating any year in which one occurred as exceptional. The experience of late years, however, is leading Companies to regard these as a much more important factor than formerly in the fixing of rates.

In presenting our report to shareholders a year ago I referred at some length to the unprofitable results of the fire insurance business on this continent, and expressed the hope that the advanced rates which were being adopted by Companies generally would place it on a more satisfactory footing than it had been during the preceding two years; and, while I am pleased to be able to say that much has been done in the direction of securing more adequate rates, the feeling among fire underwriters is that there are many classes of risk, and many cities and towns, where further advances are necessary, and the various rating organizations are adjusting their tariffs to meet the requirements of present conditions. There can be no doubt that there has been an increase in the fire waste on this continent, altogether out of proportion to the growth in the value of property. By many this is thought to be largely due to the extensive use of electricity for light and power, and an examination into the causes of fires in which our own company has been interested goes far to sustain this theory. This is a comparatively new hazard, and one which will doubtless be overcome in a large measure when its weak points are better understood. It would appear also that the fire hazard on this continent has been increased—though this may appear an anomaly — by the industrial prosperity of the past two years; for it is a well-recognized fact that in times when manufacturing establishments are compelled to work their machinery, and their employees overtime there is always a marked increase in losses upon this class of property. But, whatever the causes of the greater fire losses which are being experienced may be, the inevitable effect must be higher rates; for the protection afforded by fire insurance companies — without which the trade and commerce of the country would become paralysed — will only be maintained permanently on a basis of rates that will afford a fair return upon the capital invested in the business. As I have said, considerable progress has been made in this direction—more especially throughout Canada. In the United States, owing to the larger number of companies doing business there, it has been more difficult to secure concerted action; but improvements have been made in many quarters, and the two serious conflagrations reported during the past fortnight at Waterbury and Paterson — following closely, as they do, a year which has proved unprofitable to almost all companies operating in that field, will, I feel assured, lead to prompt measures being taken to reimburse them for losses that have been sustained.

Taking into account the conditions that we have had to meet in our business, and which I have endeavored to briefly outline, your directors, as intimated in their report, deemed it wise to reduce the dividend for the last half-year, making it at the rate of six per cent. per annum, feeling assured that conservative action in this direction would meet with the approval of the shareholders.

I am glad to be able to say in reference to the London Branch of the Company opened two years ago that it continues to progress satisfactorily. While on a visit to Great Britain last summer I had an opportunity of meeting our chief representatives there, and I feel that we are fortunate in having secured the services of energetic and capable underwriters to look after our interests. I would express our appreciation of the services rendered to this branch by our London Board of Directors.

I desire also to acknowledge the good work performed by the Officers, Branch Managers, and Agents of the Company generally durin the past year.

The Vice-President seconded the adoption of the report, which was carried unanimously. The election of directors for the ensuing year was then proceeded with, resulting in the unanimous re-election of the following gentlemen, viz:—Hon. G. A. Cox, Hon. S. C. Wood, Messrs. G. R. R. Cockburn, Geo. McMurrich, H. N. Baird, W. R. Brock, J. K. Osborne, J. J. Kenny, and the election of E. R. Wood to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the late Robert Beaty.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors, held subsequently, Hon. Geo. A. Cox was re-elected President, and Mr. J. J. Kenny Vice-President for the ensuing year.

SMALL-POX PATIENT RELEASED

Has Completely Recovered and was Given His Liberty Yesterday

Wm. Joyce, the man who for nearly two months has been confined in the hospital at Jackson Park, was given his discharge yesterday. In the morning Dr. Bingham visited the hospital and thoroughly disinfected everything, and let the patient and assistant go.

By prompt measures being taken, and in following out the instructions of the Provincial health authorities, the dread disease was stopped at once, and the people of the town can congratulate themselves on being so fortunate as to have the disease confined to two persons. There was no scare, and business was carried on in the usual manner.

NORTH AMERICAN OIL & REFINING COMPANY'S

Stock and It Will Make You Rich

The company owns 2,080 acres of land located in the Newhall-Acton White Oil Fields of Los Angeles County, California. Our manager, Mr. J. H. Parker, writes us under date of Jan. 15th that they have opened up two oil wells near our property, one being a gusher of white oil just as clear as alcohol, and of 52 degrees gravity. This oil is worth and is selling at $4 00 per barrel at the well, and producing better than 50 barrels per day. Our derrick is up and the machinery purchased; we expect to be drilling in a very short time. We now offer to the public 100,000 shares of this meritorious company's stock at the low price of 10 cents per share, and it is worth a great deal more money at the present time with the showing we have in the property. The demand for this oil is far greater than the supply, which is not so of the black oils of Lower California and Beaumont, Texas, that are a drug upon the market.

Regarding the officers of the company, they are all men of honor and means. There are no salaries paid to any of the officers, not even our General Manager, until our company is put on a paying basis.

INCORPORATION.

The company is capitalized for 1,500,000 shares, the incorporation having been effected under the laws of Wyoming, stock being all common stock, issued absolutely fully paid and forever non-assessable. The incorporation laws of Wyoming are peculiarly favorable to oil enterprises, and the par value of the stock has been fixed at One Cent per share in order to avoid the excessive revenue tax paid on stocks of a high par value.

LIABILITIES.

The company has no debts; all stock is fully paid and non-assessable, there are no stockholders' liabilities, and we have no royalties to pay for any purpose.

OUR LANDS.

The company's lands have been carefully selected by their engineer, Mr. J. H. Parker, who is also Vice President and General Manager, in conjunction with four of the best oil experts, who are well known throughout the state. These experts each unbeknown to the other went over our vast territory to locate a site to sink our first well; their reports are on file in the Company's office, and we will be pleased to mail a copy of the same upon application, also maps of the oil fields with our property showing in the red. The directors call special attention to the maps, which have been drawn from actual surveys and personal inspection of the land and is accurate. The company's lands are distinctly shown as well as their relation to other oil lands and the location of oil wells, oil seepages and oil springs. A careful inspection of the map will aid prospective investors to judge of the oil under the company's lands.

The geological formation is perfect, the Anticlinal passing through the entire property and being unbroken by granite formations.

GUARANTEE.

The officers and directors of the company have such great faith in the proposition that they will redeem all stock sold for cash, providing they do not strike oil as designated.

TREASURY STOCK.

The company holds in the treasury over 500,000 shares of treasury stock and some money. The proceeds of sale from the 100,000 shares now offered to the public will be used for the purpose of sinking wells.

REGISTRATION.

The stock is registered with the Colorado Title & Trust Company of Colorado Springs, Colorado, which guarantees any over-issue of stock.

The company would like to employ a few good Fiscal Agents to handle any part of this 100,000 shares of stock, giving them a very liberal commission. We take pleasure in recommending this stock to the good people of Peterborough and vicinity at the very low price of 10 cents per share; considering the condition of the property the stock is worth more money than what we are asking for it.

BRITAIN DENOUNCED IN AMERICAN CONGRESS

Congressmen Use Bitter Language Against Great Britain

Says England Is Not Now or Never Was the Friend of the United States

The Republic a Laughing Stock Amongst the Nations of the World

Washington, Feb. 21—There was a lively scene in the House to-night, when Congressman Wheeler, of Kentucky, scored the Administration soundly. He said:

"It is the salvation of our system of government that there is a difference of opinion among the people of this country; but until the inauguration of the President in 1896 there was never any division of sentiment on one great question, and that was the splendid isolation of the Republic and its fixed determination to hold aloof from all entangling alliances with foreign powers. Less than five years ago the most sacred traditions of the Republic were discarded.

"The belief and fixed judgment of well nigh every patriotic citizen were overturned, and for the first time we witnessed a president of the United States, urged and egged on by a pitiable flunky in the State Department, stretching his arms across the water to embrace the historic enemies of the American people. From that good hour until now we have made ourselves a laughing stock at every court in Europe because of our flunkyism, our truculency and the disgraceful sycophancy of the representatives of the Republic at the feet of Great Britain; and now, when it serves the purpose of some other great nation, the pitiable spectacle is presented of hugging to our bosoms during the last five years a nation that has systematically and persistently attempted to destroy the liberties of the American people since the battle of Yorktown.

"We find now, despite the fact that the present government is afraid, even in the face of its great majority, to ask an appropriation of $60,000 or $100,000 to pay some shoulder-strapped, gold-laced flunky to cross the water and bow the knee and kiss the hand of some English king; that while this very pitiable spectacle is being presented to us in every newspaper of the Republic, it is being heralded abroad that in 1898, when we were seeking to strike the shackles of serfdom from off the heels of Cuba, that nation was then secretly in our own capital attempting to form a coalition of the great powers of the world to prevent that interposition. And it has not caused a ripple in diplomatic circles.

"I have a respect for the present occupant of the White House; I frankly avow I think he is too honest to be palatable ot the average Republican partisan. A little Quixotic, it is true, hasty-tempered, full-blooded, and not exactly desirable to many of that character of our citizens; and I indulge the hope that the lingering element of Americanism will induce him at the first opportunity to boot out that man in the State Department who, in my humble judgment, has brought us to this humiliating condition.

"England a friend of the United States! I would to God she were, but what a spectacle have we presented in order to be able to boast that we have the friendship of Great Britain and have become a world power. Never before in the history of the Republic has there been a struggle for freedom on the part of any people that representatives of this chamber did not hasten to declare that we regarded with solicitude the endeavors and efforts of a people to obtain their own liberty.

"It may be well enough to treat the representatives of foreign powers with courtesy and consideration. Far be it from me to ask any other mode of treatment; but I do declare that if the publication in the press is true this man Pauncefote ought to be ordered to take the first ship to cross the waters. We want no such man in the Republic. If he comes here to represent his Government, well and good; but if he comes here to hatch conspiracies, to attempt to force his wishes and his ideas on the American people, the sooner we are rid of him, the better it will be.
